A minister, like his father before him, he had often officiated at marriage ceremonies, but this was his first experience at giving away the bride.

He was in a devout mood; his church was small, his salary meager, and his family numerous. This daughter had been especially expensive.

Who giveth this woman to be married to this man? droned the preacher.

Gently the father placed the slender hand of the bride in that of the embarrassed groom.

Take her, my boy! he exclaimed, his face aglow. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." — Everybody's Magazine.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

"Are you really sure you saw someone leaning over you? Might it not have been an illusion, the result of your nervous condition?"

"No. I am certain someone was there—someone quite tall, I should say, and with a terrible evil face."

"It might have been a mask, of course," Duvall suggested. "Someone wearing a mask."

"Yes. It might have been. It was too dark for me to tell of course. But I remember the eyes, for I saw them distinctly. They were only a few inches from my own." She put her hands to her face and shuddered. "It was terrible, terrible. I shall never sleep in that room again."

"There—there, dearie," Mrs. Morton whispered in a soothing voice. "You need not sleep there. You can lie right here for the rest of the night, and I will stay with you and see that no one harms you."

"That would be the best, Mrs. Morton," Duvall remarked. "And tomorrow I suggest that you and your daughter move, temporarily, at least, to another location. Some quiet hotel, where you will not be subject to these terrible annoyances. I cannot imagine how it is done, but in some way, some almost superhuman way, it seems, someone can apparently either enter your daughter's room, or at least reach it from without, at will."

Mrs. Morton turned to her daughter with a few words of explanation.

"Mr. Richards, or rather Mr. Duvall, is not a newspaper man, Ruth, but a detective, who is trying to bring the wretches who are annoying you to justice. I feel every confidence in him."

Ruth turned toward Duvall a face white and pathetic face.

"I hope you will succeed, Mr. Duvall," she said, in a weak voice. "I cannot stand much more."

"I shall, Miss Morton. And now," he turned to Mr. Baker, "I think we had better go, and let Miss Morton get some rest. I will come here in the morning, Mrs. Morton," he continued, addressing the girl's mother, "and we will consider further the question of your moving to a hotel. Meanwhile I do not think that you have anything further to fear this evening. Good night."

Before leaving the apartment, he made another examination of the marks upon the beedclothes, then he closed and fastened both windows and locked the door of the room.

Mr. Baker left him at the corner.

"You will come to the studio, tomorrow, of course."

"By all means. I shall come down with Miss Morton and her mother. That will give us an opportunity to investigate further the matter of the missing photograph and also to talk over that plan I had in mind concerning the new film you are to show at the Grand to-morrow night. It is barely possible that by means of a plan I have in mind we may be able to locate the person or persons responsible for all this trouble."

"I certainly hope so," said Baker, as he took his leave. "This thing is getting on my nerves, too."

Duval made his way back to his hotel as much mystified as ever. He had thought for a moment of spending the night on the sidewalk in front of the Morton's apartment, watching the windows facing the court, but his experience told him that it would be useless. The alarm which Ruth had made, the closing of the windows of her bedroom, the locking of the door, all made it highly improbable that any further attempt would be made to annoy her during the night. He walked along in a state of intense preoccupation, trying to discover some reasonable explanation of the astonishing events of the day.

Once he had an impression, a feeling, that he was being followed, but when he turned around, there was no one in sight but a slightly tipsy man, and a couple of young girls, far down the street. He dismissed the thought from his mind and proceeded to his hotel.

"It was not yet eleven o'clock, and Grace was waiting for him in the little parlour of their suite.

"Well, Richard," she remarked, as he came in, "you've had quite a day of it."

"Yes, quite," he replied, throwing himself into a chair. "What have you been doing with yourself?"

"Shopping mostly. I found it rather dull. I went to a moving picture this afternoon. Saw your friend Ruth Morton. She certainly is a very beautiful girl."

"Yes—very," Duvall replied, absently.

"Have you seen her to-day?" Grace went on with a smile.

"Yes. Why?"

"Oh—nothing. I was just thinking."

Duvall burst into a laugh and rising, went over to his wife, and kissed her.

"For heaven's sake, Grace," he said, "don't be silly. I'm not interested in motion picture actresses."

"You're weren't, I'll admit, nor in motion pictures either, until recently, but perhaps you have changed. I could understand any man being fascinated by a girl like Ruth Morton."

Duvall did not pursue the question. It was a hard and fast rule between them not to discuss his professional work. And Mrs. Morton had made it a point that he should confide in no one, not even his wife.

"Well," he said, picking up an evening paper, "I'm not fascinated yet. No letters for me to-day, I suppose."

"None." Grace went on with her sewing.

They sat for a while in silence. Presently there came a knock at the door and a boy appeared, bearing a telegram. Duvall opened it carelessly, thinking it some word from the overseer of his farm. He sat up with sudden astonishment as he read the contents of the message.

"Keep out," the telegram read, "or you will find that we can strike back."

Duvall placed the telegram in his pocket with a frown. So it appeared that in spite of all his care, his connection with the case was known. How this was possible he could not imagine. His first visit to the Morton apartment that day had been in the guise of a workman. His subsequent appearance at the studio, and later, at the apartment, had been in the character of a newspaper man. There was only one explanation. Someone had watched him while he was making his examination of Ruth Morton's room, and subsequently, had followed him from the apartment to his hotel. He began to realize that he was dealing with a shrewd brain, and one that acted with almost uncanny quickness and precision. He determined that if Mrs. Morton and her daughter changed their place of residence the following day, he would do the same. He said nothing of his intentions to Grace, however. It was more than ever necesary that he perserve secrecy in this case.

"No bad news, I hope, Richard," Grace remarked, glancing up from her sewing.

"No. Nothing serious. Have you heard anything from home?"

"Yes. Everything is going along quite smoothly. The boy is well and happy, and Mrs. Preston says to stay as long as we want to."

"Well," said Duvall, rising, and throwing down his newspaper, "if things don't go better than they have been going to-day, I may have to be here some time. I've got a queer case on, Grace. I'd like to tell you about it, but I can't. But it is quite unusual. Some features to it that I have never met before."

"Oh—I wish I might help you," Grace exclaimed. "You know how often I have done so in the past."

"I know, dear. But I am bound to secrecy, for the present at least. Suppose we turn in now. I've got to get up early."

"All right," Grace said. "But if you need my help, don't hesitate to ask me. To tell you the truth, I'm having an awfully slow time."

CHAPTER VIII.

Duvall made his appearance at the Morton apartment the following morning in his ordinary guise. It was his intention when the time came to disappear from the case in his normal person, to reappear in it later, in a complete disguise. But that time, he felt, had not yet arrived.

Mrs. Morton received him in fairly good spirits. Her daughter, she said, had had a restful night, in spite of her terrible experience. When Ruth rose from the breakfast table to greet him he was gratified to find that she showed no great traces of the fright of the evening before.

"I'm feeling almost myself again, Mr. Duvall," she said. "I've made up my mind not to let these people frighten me again."

"Nothing further occurred last night, of course," Duvall asked.

"Nothing," replied Mrs. Morton. "I could almost believe the whole thing a horrible dream."

They did not touch on the question of going to a hotel during the short interval that elapsed before they set out for the studio. Duvall was anxious to see Mr. Baker. He hoped sincerely that by means of the photograph which had been in the company's files, some trace of the persons responsible for the threats might be obtained.

The trip to the studio was made most uneventfully, and Ruth started in with her work in very good spirits. Duvall leaving the girl with her mother, sought out Mr. Baker in the latter's private office.

"Hello," Baker cried, grasping the detective's hand warmly. "Anything new?"

It takes a joint of beef to make a bottle of Bovril

Bovril contains the goodness of the Beef.

The vital elements that give beef its special place and value as a food are concentrated and stored in Bovril.

In theory many non-meat foods have a high nourishing value, but they do not yield up nearly all their nourishment to the body. They are like German money, not worth its face value when you try to turn it into gold. But Bovril enables you to extract that nourishment which otherwise you would never get. In other words, it enormously increases the feeding value of other foods.

The nation needs that you should get every ounce of strength out of the food you buy. Bovril helps you to do this. Therefore start taking Bovril to-day.

Body-building powers of Bovril proved equal to 10 to 20 times the amount taken.

In spite of the increase in the cost of Beef (the raw material of Bovril) the price of Bovril has not been increased since the outbreak of the war.

SMALL TOWN SURVEY.

Some fellow over in New York State with time hanging heavily upon his hands has made what he declares is the first and only small town survey ever attempted.

We had come to believe that, since making "surveys" came to be a fad, we had about reached the limit, and that everything had been surveyed and resurveyed to a nice juicy brown. Yet it appears our army of paid "surveyers" at Washington and the thousands of volunteers in every State in the Union had overlooked this very important matter—a survey of the small town.

The man who gives this survey to the world claims it is for the small town only. Therein he is wrong. We will give you his survey and leave it to you to judge if he has not, in a fairly correct way, included a partial survey of a city as well. He says a survey of every small town will reveal these things:

A knocker, a tightwad, a gossip — male and female—a leading citizen, a man who gives generously, a man who takes the lead in boosting, a barber equal to the big city kind, a beautiful girl and an old maid who would have made the right kind of a man a good wife, a tough boy, more widows than widowers, at least two boys, who are known as "good sports," and a girl who does such a good job of canning that she is frequently with out a beau.

Here's a chance now for a very pleasing little exercise for you. Start in on Wilmington and pick out the champion knocker, the tightwad, the tough boy, and the others. Of course, you know who the leading citizen and the biggest booster and the best husband is!— Wilmington (Ohio) Journal-Republican.

RELIEF IN ITALY NOW SYSTEMATIZED

SUPPLIES ARE POURING IN.

Forty-six Carloads Come from France —Soup Kitchens Opened and Funds Distributed.

ROME, Nov. 27.—Since the headquarters of the American Red Cross were established here a fortnight ago under Major Grayson Murphy, the organisation has created three bureaus — administration, military affairs, and civil affairs respectively. The Administrative Department has organised subsidiary departmental divisions of accounting, purchasing, and transportation of stores and supplies.

Forty-six carloads of assorted materials have arrived from France, and other supplies havet been purchased elsewhere in Europe. A warehouse has been established, in which have been stored hospital supplies and clothing for men, women, and children. Consignments of condensed milk have been distributed from Genoa and Milan. Representatives of the Red Cross are establishing branch warehouses in Genoa, Florence, Bologna, Naples, Palermo, Milan, and Turin.

Additional hospital suplies are expected from America. The supply department already has despatched carloads of relief materials to the principal Italian centres from the central warehouses.

In the Department of Military Affairs, twenty-three ambulances with experienced drivers from the French front have arrived at Milan from Paris, on their way to the Italian front. Contracts have been concluded for fifty additional ambulances to be delivered during the first fortnight of December. One hundred experienced drivers have been recruited in France to operate these ambulances, the number of which will soon be increased to 200. H. Nelson Gay, in the name of the American Poets' Ambulance Service has turned over the Red Cross twenty-five ambulances.

After a preliminary examination of the various hospitals in Rome, Florence, and Bologna, a general list of the needs of all the Italian military hospitals was drawn up. Bedding, underwear, and anaesthetics have been brought from France, and contracts have been concluded in Europe for sterilising and disinfecting apparatus, surgical instruments, rubber goods, drugs, and other hospital supplies.

The distribution of supplies to the hospitals has already been begun. A warehouse has been established for the hospital supplies, which will be distributed according to the ascertained local needs.

In the Department of Civil Relief one or more soup kitchens have been organised, respectively in Rome, Ancona, Ravenna, Genoa, and Milan. Clothing and bedding have been furnished the refugees in the principal Italian towns, and funds for food and clothing also have been supplied. The equipment and maintenance for one year of 150 refugees in Milan have been authorised. A shelter has been constructed at the Genoa station for refugees. The Committee of Civil Aid in Rome has been supplied with 1,000,000 lire ($200,000) for work among the soldiers and the families of refugees. Representatives investigating local conditions throughout Italy carried with them 300,000 lire for general refugee work.

A committee of three experienced relief workers, consisting of Ernest P. Bicknell, Director-General of Civilian Relief; Edward T. Devine, and Pautl U. Kellogg, is engaged in preparing a general survey of the relief needs of Italy on which the future relief programme will be based. Resident delegates of the Department of Civil Relief are in the principal Italian towns, while efficient local committees have been formed in Rome, Genoa, and Milan. Other such committees are in process of organisation.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur it Brings Back its Beautiful Lustre at Once

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural colour is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure mitigation or prevention of disease.

Reform 1918 Styles As A War Economy

40 PER CENT IN MEN'S SUITS

Makers, Not Consumers, Will be Consulted, and all Unnecessary Trimmings Barred.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—With the aid of the French Ambassador, M. Jusserand, reformation in women's dress styles for 1918 with a saving of 25 per cent. in the amount of material used has been effected by the Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense. Men's clothing styles also have been simplified and to a great extent standardized with a saving of about 40 per cent. in material.

The story of how changes were wrought in the proposed creations of Parisian modistes for the American market next year was told to-day by W. S. Gifford, Director of the council, in announcing that the Economy Board was studying the problem of so-called essential and non-essential industries with a view to effecting readjustments as gradually as possible.

Faced with a shortage of wool the Economy Board called on the French Ambasador and explains that conservation of cloth was necessary to enable the nation to provide uniforms for its armies. M. Jusserand communicated with his government with the result that the co-operation of the designers was procured. Whether dresses will be shorter or tighter, or merely less elaborate, has not been announced.

In any case, where it is necessary to curtail use of raw materials, the War Industries Board and the Commercial Economy Board would work with the manufacturers rather than with the consumers, Mr. Gifford said. This was decided after close study of all phases of industries likely to be affected by the war, in which it was found that injustice and waste would result from efforts to classify certain products as non-essential to the prosecution of the war, or as a frivolous use of material needed elsewhere.

While the Economy Board frowns on the use of unnecesary belts and trimmings, the public will not be urged to forego such luxuries, but the makers will be asked to stop their manufacture. Clothing already made with these adjuncts might be a total waste, it was pointed out, if a "slacker" charge were laid against them.

When shortage of raw material or coal threatens an industry with curtailment or suspension, the Economy Board will inform all such manufacturers. Advice will be given as to how the factories may be turned to war work or their output reduced gradually, and every effort will be made to avoid a sudden stoppage of work which might have a disastrous economic effect.

SOME NOBLE WORDS OF PITT'S

Uttered early in the war with Napoleon speak to us to-day, over the lapse of a century, in tones that are trumpet-tongued.

"If we consider this war as necessary," he said, "we are bound to meet it, even to its utmost extent. This is a war in which, not merely adopting empty professions, but speaking the language of our hearts, and fulfilling the impressions of our duty, we are ready to sacrifice our lives and fortunes for the safety of the country, and in the cause of justice, humanity, and religion. I will not do such injustice to anyone as to suppose that, in such a cause, he is not ready to go the greatest length, and to make every sacrifice that may be required."

These words are entirely applicable to the present situation as the Canadian Victory Loan is being launched. Yet what, after all, is the "sacrifice" that is being asked of us? In reality it is no more than this — that we should give proof of the sincerity of our patriotic professions by lending to the government, for the prosecution of the war, every dollar we can spare. We are not asked to give our money, as those in khaki are giving their service and their lives, but merely to lend it.

Nor is it a paltry return of an indifferent security that is being offered. On the contrary, the security is the first in the world, for it is supported by the credit of the Canadian government and the good faith of the Canadian people. The security is, in fact, CANADA, with all her illimitable resources of every kind. And the return, so far from being paltry, is most generous and most full.

Thus the Victory Loan is for the ordinary investor, who asks sound security as well as generous interest, a golden opportunity. The "sacrifice" asked of him is one which must redound to his future financial benefit. If a man has faith in the justice of our cause, in the strength of the Allied arms, and in Canada herself, then the Victory Loan invites him not to submit to any "sacrifice," but to share in an assured and certain gain.

Nehemiah rebuilds the walls of Jerusalem.—Nehemiah 4.

Golden Text: The Lord is my helper: I will not fear; What shall men do unot me? Heb. 13:6.

1. Verse 1. What progress has been made up to this time in rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem, and how had the work been done?

2. What right had Sanballat to object to building the wall, and why did he do it

3. What did they expect to accomplish by mocking at and jeering the Jews?

4. Can you give any instance where mocking and ridicule have stopped a good work or ruined a good life?

5. Verses 2, 3. What is it in human nature which makes individuals jealous of individuals, towns of towns, and countries of countries?

6. When a man is down, do the human influences around him tend to keep him down or help him up? Why?

7. Which gets the more hurt from scorning, the scorner, or the scorned, and why?

8. Verses 2, 3. What influence did the ridicule of Sanballat and Tobiah have on the work upon the wall?

9. If one is true to God does the devil mostly hurt or help him, in his life and work?

10. Verses 4-6. Is an experience that will give us the opportunity to pray, and to test God's power, to be regretted?

11. Should the prayer of Nehemiah that God would not forgive them, but that they might suffer for their sins, be imitated by us? Give your reasons.

12. Verses 7, 8. What reasons are there to believe that those who are jealous of the prosperity of others, will not stop short of actual violence to accomplish their evil desires, if they can do so with safety to themselves?

13. Verse 9. What are the two effectual things we may always do, when we are surrounded by enemies?

14. Is prayer without watching, or watching without prayer, of any avail, if we have the opportunity to do both?

15. Verses 10-12. Which, as a rule, does us the more injury, the opposition of enemies or the pessimistic discouragement of friends?

16. Verses 13-14. What effect did the threat of his enemies, and the wail of his own countrymen, have upon Nehemiah?

17. How often is a determined man with God on his side, liable to be defeated in things he undertakes?

18. Verse 15. What factor is courage alone in winning life's battles? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the Club.)

19. Verses 16-23. In what sense is a Christian under obligation to fight, and to build, all the time?

20. Why may we rely on God fighting our battles for us, if we fight and work with him?

Don't Diet Yourself TO CURE DYSPEPSIA IT ISN'T NECESSARY

The sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion who has to pick and choose his food, is the most miserable of all mankind.

Even the little he does eat causes such torture, and is digested so imperfectly that it does him little good.

What dyspeptics need is not dieting, or artificial digestants, but something that will put their stomach right so it will manufacture its own digestive ferments.

For forty years now Burdock Blood Bitters has been making weak stomachs strong, and curing severe cases of dyspepsia and indigestion that other remedies were powerless to reach.

It restores the stomach to a normal healthy condition so that the food no longer causes distress, but is thoroughly digested and assimilated, and goes on its way making rich, red blood.

Mrs. Henry Shaw, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "I was for five years troubled with a weak stomach, and could not eat any food that would agree with me. I tried different medicines, but could not get cured. A friend advised me to take Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles, and now I am in perfect health."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

German Blunders Were Serious

COMMENTING on Germany's management of the war, The Independent says: "Most of Germany's blunders will not be disclosed till after the war, many of them not until the secret archives and the memoirs of the chief actors come to light after most of us are dead. But some of her blunders are so glaring that we can see them even through the battlesmoke.

"First among them—the biggest blunder that any nation ever committed—was precipitating the great war. The defenders of Germany urge that she was not solely or chiefly to blame, but no one questions that she could have prevented or at least postponed the war if she had not wanted it, that she could have called off Austria and made terms with England if she had wanted to. No one questions now that it would have been to her advantage if she had made any sacrifice to maintain peace. No victory could now compensate her for the losses she has already sustained. Germany had everything to lose and little possibly to gain by war. She was prosperous and outstripped her trade rivals. Her last bone of contention with England—the Bagdad railroad—had been removed by arrangement that gave her all she had a right to ask.

But the German generals who had devoted their lives to the study of the problem miscalculated the chances, overestimated their power, under-estimated the resistance, misunderstood the temper of their opponents for all their elaborate spy system. In carrying out the plan they made egregious errors. They ran short of shells in the first few weeks. They lost days in Belgium for which the stubbornness of Liege cannot account. It was a psychological mistake to burn the library of Louvain and shell the cathedral of Rheims, and shoot Edith Cavell.

"In fact the German armies took the wrong road at the start. Going through Belgium was not the easiest way. We have Premier Lloyd George's authority for saying that England would not have gone in if Belgium had not been invaded. If the 42-centimeter howitzers had been at first trained on Verdun instead of on Liege, its forts might have crumbled as quickly.

"Then there was the conspicuous blunder, not yet explained, of the delay of the crown prince to bring his army into its appointed place in the line converging upon Paris. This compelled General von Kluck to swing his army to the left to cover the gap instead of heading towards Paris, and gave Joffre his chance to strike at the weak point on the Marne, September 5. Of all the commanders of the eight German armies that invaded France, none remains in power except the crown prince's, who are irremovable no matter what mistakes they make. Of the names that figured in the German despatches in '94, scarce one now appears except Hindenburg. We know why the British removed Sir John French and the French removed Nivelle, but we can only surmise why neither Moltke nor his successor, Falkenhayn, is chief of the German general staff.

"Before the battle of the Marne, or even after it, the Germans might easily have reached the English Channel at Calais, which they have vainly sacrificed hundreds of thousands of men to reach. At the siege of Antwerp they carelessly left an exit between Ghent and the coast through which the Belgian and British forces made their escape. Their persistence in the attack at Verdun was a frightfully expensive mistake. The confidence that the Germans placed in the zeppelins has proved to be altogether unwarranted. The careful calculation of the calories needed by the German people and the complicated system of distribution turned out to be wrong, and Batocki, the renowned food dictator, vanished for a time at any rate. In some places there was plenty, in others famine. Last year a quarter of the potato crop rotted in the ground and trainloads of fruit spoiled.

"These are a few conspicuous instances of German mismanagement. The list could be indefinitely extended, for anybody can point out mistakes after they have been committed. Anybody can backsee what Napoleon or Grant could not foresee. Our object is not to prove the Germans inefficient, because they obviously are not. It is because they show such disconcerting efficiency that we have occasionally to remind ourselves that they are after all mere human beings in spite of their inhuman behaviour. We are not fighting jinns or giants. We should not believe what the Germans say of themselves any more than we should believe what the British say of themselves. That is where the Germans made their mistake, in believing the British when they said, like the mouths of Kipling, Wells, and the like, that England was suffering from fatty degeneration of the heart and capable of nothing but muddling. If it comes to a comparison of courage—has Germany the courage to publish in the midst of war any confessions of faults like the Gallipoli and Mesopotamian reports?

Substitute for Hemp.

The use of a plant growing locally for a roof covering by a farmer in Germany led to the discovery that it produces a fibre that is a fair substitute for jute and hemp.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS.

Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: "I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years old, had bronchitis and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for her and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

WILL SEEK VAST TREASURE SUNK IN SEA BY WAR

LONDON—Some of the biggest treasure hunts ever known will begin when peace is declared, says London Answers. Then attempts will be made to retrieve the precious cargoes of some of the hundreds of ships that have been sent to the bottom through sea warfare.

Probably no accurate estimate will ever be made of the fabulous wealth that has been destroyed during the last two years and a half. It may be as much as the English war loan—$5,000,000,000—but it can be safely said that the losses will enormously exceed the sum total of all the shipwrecks that have taken place during the 100 years previous to the great war. There is indeed no comparison that can be made with the past.

The treasures that have been lost at sea in storm and warfare throughout the centuries, if a value could be set upon them, would look small beside those with which the ocean beds have been strewn since the U-boats began their famous attacks.

Even the Spanish galleon of old could not compare with the great liner of to-day laden with food and merchandise of incredible value and also carrying sometimes specie to the value of $5,000,000. A great liner today without a ton of cargo inside her is worth more than $5,000,000.

Carried Rich Cargo.

Of course a great deal of the cargo of some of these ships was perishable and of comparatively trifling value, but many were almost priceless argosies, laden with some of the richest products of our great possessions.

There were gorgeous tapestries and carpets from the east that were either sunk or captured in the early days of the war before the intervention of Turkey—wonderful cargoes that had been consigned to German and Austrian ports, many of them to be captured by British men o' war, who put prize crews aboard.

One of the biggest captures was the seizure by one of the warships of the merchant ship Cap Ortegal, which has more than $5,000,000 worth of specie in her hold.

Gold and precious stones and rare pottery and fabrics from India; more gold and precious stones from South Africa; still more gold, silver, and diamonds, copper, and lead from South America; silks and velvets from China, and, nearer home, quicksilver, copper, silk, and oils from Spain. Much of this treasure which was continuously pouring on to the shores of Britain in the early days of the war is now lying in hundreds of shattered hulks in the Atlantic, the Pacific, the Mediterranean, and the Indian ocean.

Our own submarines must have sunk an enormous amount of wealth in the Sea of Marmora.

Destruction by Emden.

And just consider what treasure the Emden accounted for! This will o' the wisp, whose exploits, conducted according to the rules of naval warfare, are about the only creditable record in the annals of the German navy, captured or sank in the Bay of Bengal, the Indian ocean, the Arabian sea, and the China sea, more than a score of steamers of a total tonnage of more than 80,000, the majority of them having cargoes of rich merchandise.

The law relating to the recovery of property from the sea — "treasure trove"—is obscure and difficult to interpret. With regard to vessels wrecked near the coast, whose cargoes may be washed ashore, there is as a rule no difficulty about establishing the ownership of the vessel, and they are entitled to recover their property after all salvage rights have been satisfied.

BOTH NEEDED.

The despatches tell us that during the first half of the present month the wastage of the Canadian forces at the fighting front have been more than eleven thousand. This argues the provision of more men to fill the gaps with the greatest speed possible. Recruits secured for the same period amounted to but slightly over two thousand, leaving a shortage of some nine thousand.

The despatches tell us also that the destruction of British shipping carrying food supplies, shows a considerable increase the past week. Thus is emphasized the urgent need for greater production in Canada, to overcome the loss of submarine destruction.

Here the people of Canada are confronted with the duty of meeting two great needs, fighters and food. While both are important, no one can say that the other should be ignored.

Every thinking Canadian concedes the immense importance of supplying both, and recognizes the possibility of the government putting in motion the machinery and means of securing both at the same time. Very properly, attention is concentrated upon securing soldiers; but there should with that, be conjoined energetic effort to stimulate food production and conservatoin of food.

The government is, however, taking no steps—giving absolutely no attention to the organization of systematic means of increasing food production. As a matter of fact, the need of food is as urgent as the need of men, and measures to produce food are on the same footing as measure to produce more men for the Canadian expeditionary force. While we are preparing to send these men abroad, we shall be doing only half work if we do not at the same time take steps to provide for their effective maintenance. The two things can be done simultaneously, as far as preparation and organization are concerned.

Mr. Borden should tell us who is responsible for a "solid Quebec" at this great national crisis.

PARTIZAN OR NON-PARTIZAN.

We hear a great deal of the subordination of the party spirit amnog individuals—for the sake of honestly believed effort in helping win the war. Individuals may subordinate their party feelings in support of the Union government because in their simplicity they regard it as a non-partizan government.

This is only believable by those whose zeal makes them want to believe it; for a real union government is a most desirable thing. But pepole who see below the surface, and connote the past with the present, 'hae their doots.'

In personnel, the Union government is not non-partizan, for the bulk of its members are composed of th old members of the Borden government. In this regard there is not a sufficiently even balance of party to make the aggregate non-partizan in a real sense.

The distinctive following of the old government, is the moneyed interest; the capitalists, anxious to make capital out of those associated with the government are solidly behind the Union government.

The food profiteers, the graiters of the old regime, who bled the country white during the early years of war profits orgies, are solidly behind the Union government.

If the Union government is accepted as non-partizan by immaturely thinking people, they are in for a rude awakening; and many such persons are not of the discretist.

At Simcoe, at a political gathering addressed by Sir Robert Borden, the reports state that five members of the local ministerial association were on the platform. No one denies the right of ministers to have and personally exercise political convictions. But in officially and publicly taking a partizan stand, they become responsible to their flock, composed of honestly differing political faiths, and their influence for usefulness, in the capacity to which they were ordained, stands to be lessened, and the spirit of harmony disturbed.

In like manner, the war veterans, as they have a perfect right to do, are taking a strong partizan stand in favour of the so-called Union government. They have given splendid service in fighting—not for a party, but for the country, composed of both parties; both parties have an equal interest in, and equal desire for the welfare of the veterans; and it seems that care should be exercised that one-half of the people behind them are not antagonized.

This election and its perfervid and, in some respects, artificial excitement, will pass away, and after it is over we shall all have to live together. There should be no aftermaths to be reaped, and no unnecessary bitterness to be tasted.

All credit to the Italians; they have scored off their own bat, though a "spare man" or two in the matter of the British and French, have not been unaceptable.

MIXED DRINKS.

We are told of a working man who "planked down" $500 to be invested in a Victory Loan Bond. It may be said that there is nothing remarkable about that—for two years we have had plentiful employment, at high wages; and it was not a very difficult thing, even with profiteers and food exploiters cutting down the buying power of dollars, for a capable workman to getget $500 savings together.

But there is something remarkable. This same man in the days of the open bar, though he was not a drinking man—to excess—would, in those days, have been hard set to produce five dollars. His wages went in riotous living—"having a good time" with boon companions. Drink, most of it for others in "good fellowship," absorbed the most of it as it did in the cases of thousands of others; but the closing of the bar by the temperance act, changed things for the man in question and his family, and for thousands of other working men and their families.

We do not need this incident to show the benefit of abolition of strong drink. But the abolition is not perfect. The permission remains to import whisky from outside places; and this is extensively done to the debauching and impoverishment of thousands.

We have a prohibition law on the statute books of Ontario; its spirit is to prohibit spirits as a beverage, but its importation is permitted, and the government as well as the tippler breaks the spirit of the law.

The Dominion government by an order-in-council, by a stroke of the pen, could prevent the importation of this liquor, and the drunkenness—and home drinking—it permits and promotes.

But the government does not act. It permits an immense underground traffic in strong drink between Ontario and Quebec. The Union government hasn't much use for Quebec politically but it shows a tender weakness for the brewery and distilling interests, the whisky merchants of Quebec.

The Borden or Union government is directly responsible for the importation of whisky to the value of thousands of dollars into Ontario every day. The government urges economy upon the people; eat less and save food; but it permits, by permitting import of whisky and other liquors to Ontario, a waste and diversion of enough money in a few months to cover the price of a shipload of food for the soldiers at the front.

Quebec whisky merchants are getting the good loyal money of loyal Ontario that should go into Red Cross funds, Patriotic funds, and into the food and fuel furnishing of scores of families. Why the government does not act is a mystery to everybody but those who do not see in the present government a faithful friend of the "big interests"—the money making interests—and there's a mint of money in whisky. We have mixed drinks, by the connivance of a "Union" government, with Quebec whisky merchants.

Victory Bonds are recommended as gifts for the boys at the front. The boys want Victory buns, too.

BUY A VICTORY BOND.

We Want An All Wool Union Government Not Shoddy Substitute

The Observer is unqualifiedly in favour of Union Government, in order that all elements in Canada may be united in the one great task of winning the war, but we cannot favour the kind of Union Government that is now being foisted on Canada, which is nothing more or less than the old Borden Government bolstered up on the eve of dissolution in order that, buttressed by every legal (or illegal) device which could be forced through a gagged Parliament, the will of the people may be thrwarted and the Borden forces given a new lease of power.

For three years of the war Toryism was supreme at Ottawa, and amidst a carnival of corruption and stupidity Canada has been trying to do its part. There was no leadership in war effort, and had it not been for the work of the civilian population in the matter of recruiting we would not have in France to-day the army of volunteers who have brought such glory to the land of the maple and given such valorous assistance to the Empire and its allies.

In the matter of war contracts graft has been rampant, and while the people have been urged to economize, conserve and produce, the Government has been spending money lavishly on patronage with the Quebec and Saguenay and the C. N. R. deals as the crowning crimes against the people.

There has been no effort to organize the country for war service, and the Government refused to use its own plants for the production of munitions, fearing to enter into competition with its friends. While our boys are fighting and suffering and dying for us for $1.10 per day, fed on bacon which has yielded Sir Joseph Flavelle a profit of over one hundred per cent., there has been no effort made in Canada to bring about equality of sacrifice, and while thousands of homes have been deprived of loved ones the wealth of the land is still untouched.

A systematic effort has been made to set race against race for political purposes, and Quebec has been practically ostracized by the present Government, its every effort toward war organization in that province being undertaken in a way calculated to arouse resentment. For three years the Opposition in Parliament, representing nearly half of the Canadian people, was completely ignored, the Government being determined to make it a Tory war from start to finish, and during the last session the closure was invoked repeatedly to gag Parliament, while such iniquitous measures as the railway deals mentioned above, the franchise act and other objectionable legislation was forced through the House with the object of legislating the party back to power.

The plea for a second extension of the Parliamentary term having failed, Sir Robert Borden found himself forced to go to the country, and at once there was a scurry to get under cover. "Union" Government forthwith became popular, Cabinet Ministers were ready to efface themselves to make way for others rather than be effaced by an irate electorate, and every device known to the politician was invoked to buttress the party against the impending disaster.

The women of four provinces were disfranchised, despite their noble war efforts, and the vote given only to those having near of kin overseas; 50,000 or more citizens who were given naturalization papers in good faith under the laws of the land were told that they were disloyal and that a solemn contract made with them by the Canadian Government was no better than "a scrap of paper;" provision was made to apply the votes of the soldiers overseas, not in the constituencies which they came from, but wherever they might be most needed in the interest of Conservative candidates, and finally an alleged Union Government was framed up on the eve of the election, in order to deceive the people, and seven or eight Cabinet Ministers are now sitting illegally in the seats of the mighty, doing the business of the country without having gone through the formality of election. They have deserted their party without the consent or approval of their parliamentary associates or the rank and file throughout the country, and having in Parliament and out of it roundly denounced the railway deals, the franchise act and the profiteering of the Government, have now allied themselves with these forces to carry these measures into effect. The metropolitan Liberal press has passed to the control of the big interests and, with the country thus throttled, we are on the threshold of an election.

When the inside history of recent events at Ottawa and in other parts of the country becomes public it will reveal the greatest conspiracy ever perpetrated under popular government to defeat the wil lof the people. We are fighting for democracy abroad, and the light of democracy at home has been all but extinguished. The subtle cunning of White and Rogers and Meighen and their financial associates in Toronto, who are determined to carry through Parliament the $60,000,000 C. N.R. deal, has succeeded in "putting over" on the Canadian people under the pretence of war-time necessity an election scheme that is nothing short of criminal.

This is the crew that presumes to call itself the "win-the-war" party, and asks Canadians of all classes to forget politics and unite under its banner. The endeavour to stifle the expression of public opinion is still going on, and in every constituency where the game can be worked efforts are being made to secure the election of "unionist" candidates—in the great majority of cases the sitting Conservative members.

Hon. Frank Cochrane says he believes in a "fifty-fifty" division of seats in the Union Government, the Hon Frank's idea of division on that basis being to retain all the seats in Ontario held by conservatives in the last Parliament and give the remainder to the Liberals!

Conservative riding associations throughout the land are styling themselves "win-the-war" organizations and inviting the Liberals to join with them in selecting Conservative candidates for Parliament. "Camouflage" is the game from first to last.

The Observer favours Union Government, but we cannot endorse a reconstructed Borden Government for a renewal of power at this time. The people cannot foregt the record of the past six years, and they must not be deprived of the opportunity of passing judgment on those who, afraid of that judgment, have gone to such outrageous lengths to legislate themselves back to power.

All the discarded Ministers have been given fat jobs and will continue to live on the people, who are not given a chance to dismiss them through the ballot box. Those whoh remain, with the men whom they have influenced to join them, must assume the full responsibility, and despite all the outrageous manipulation of the election machinery we are convinced that the people will succeed in ousting them from office.

Union Government should have come after, and not on the eve of an election. The "win-the-election party" is the proper name for the aggregation which is being foisted on the country, and its return in the coming election would mean another five years of Government by the big interests which have controlled Canada under Borden.—Pembroke Observer.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases, and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening, and refreshing the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation, are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

Picric Acid For Burns.

A well tried remedy for burns, used much before the advent of the paraffin treatment, says the Medical Record, is picric acid, to be employed in the following manner: Picric acid, two drams; alcohol, 2½ ounces; distilled water, a quart. The burn is first cleansed of dirt and charred clothing, then strips of sterilized gauze soaked in the above solution are applied to the part.

An absorbent cotton pad is placed over the dressing and lightly bandaged to place. The dressing dries rapidly and may be left in position for several days, after which it is again moistened with the solution to soften it, removed, and a fresh dressing is applied and left on for a week. All blisters should be pricked.

The treatment causes pain at first, which later disappears, and the wound heals in a smooth cicatrix.

Palpaitation of the Heart and Nerve Troubles

WERE CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

When the heart begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm and the least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable through this unnatural action of the heart.

To all sufferers from heart troubles we would advise the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which by their action in strengthening the heart and regulating the beat remove all the distressing conditions, and impart vigor and vitality to the system.

Mrs. Thomas Davidson, Mount Brydges, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer in the past with nerve troubles and palpitation of the heart. I tried several remedies, but without any good results. My son came in one day and advised me to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. After using one and a half boxes, I am fully recovered, and am in a perfect state of health, thanks to your valuable medicine."

Price 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PENNILESS BOY STRIKES IT RICH IN WYOMING OIL

NEW YORK—The remarkable career of H. Leslie Parker, who when a youth of 20 years believed in himself and the fact that the Big Muddy district in the desert of Wyoming contained vast pools of oil, portrays a character of determination and relentless energy that equals if not surpasses that of America's foremost self-made men.

Mr. Parker, who is 27 years old, told of the vicissitudes that beset him before the oil field became proven. The entire district, which owes its birth to the young oil king, has recently been appraised by experts at 8500,000,000. Unlike the rise of John D. Rockefeller, who after years of tedious and yet patient thrift managed to amass his present wealth, young Parker found himself stranded in the midst of the vast, arid, wind and snow driven empire in the heart of Wyoming.

In Casper "Broke."

As a boy just out of his teens he withdrew from a wildcat corporation as its superintendent and found himself in Casper, Wyo., broke, but with his mind clear. It apparently was clear on one subject—oil. It remained in the same state and a short time ago a well was struck that is now producing as high a grade of petroleum as is found any place in the world and proves an oil field that will supply any deficiency the world may suffer by reason of the present great drain upon it.

While he was doggedly awaiting the time when capital would believe as he believed and advance sufficient money to sink his first well, Miss Tennyson Dawn Flanery, who was attending the University of Nebraska, came to Casper.

Parker was determined and before the Big Muddy was proven he had won his bride, for she had faith in the methodical, hard working westerner. They are to be married at her home in Cattletsburg, Ky., at a double ceremony, her sister, Miss Evelyn Merele Flanery and Davis M. Howerton, assistant attorney general of Kentucky, joining them in the nuptials.

Too Nervous To Sleep

NERVES WRECKED BY ACCIDENT —WAS AFRAID TO GO IN A CROWD OR TO STAY ALONE—TELLS OF HIS CURE.

London, Nov. 30.—Much sympathy was felt in this city for Mr. Dorsey, who met with a distressing accident when his foot was smashed in an elevator.

The shock to the nervous system was so great that Mr. Dorsey was in a pitiable condition for a long time. He was like a child in that he required his mother's care nearly all the time. He feared a crowd, could not stay alone and could not sleep because of the weakened and excited condition of his nerves.

Detroit doctors did what they could for him, but he could not get back his strength and vigour until he fortunately heard of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is no mere accident that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food proves to be exactly what is needed in so many cases of exhausted nerves. It is composed of the ingredients which nature requires to form new blood and create new nerve force. For this reason it cannot fail and for this reason it succeeds when ordinary medicines fail.

Mr. Laurence E. Dorsey, 39 Stanley Street, London, Ont., writes: "About three years ago I got my foot smashed in an elevator in Detroit, which completely wrecked my nerves. I doctored with the doctors there, but they did not seem to be able to help me. My nerves were in such a state that I could not go down town alone, or go any place where there was a crowd. Sometimes my mother would have to sit and watch over me at night, and sometimes I could not get any sleep at all. But one day last winter I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had completely used the first box I could see a difference in my condition. I continued using these pills for some time. The result was splendid. I feel so much better, can sleep well at night, can go out on the street and attend gatherings like the rest of people. I am so pleased to be able to tell you what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done for me, and to recommend it to other people.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

ENEMY STRENGTH IS BEING WASTED SAYS SECRETARY OF WAR

Teutons' Loss of Man Power is Feature of Week's Fighting —Austro-German Drive Fails in Main Purpose, Breaking Up of Western Offensive.

ITALIAN DEFENCE SEEMS ADEQUATE

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 30. — A new note, the wastage of man power by the Central Powers in their defensive operations on the French and Flanders fronts and their offensive in Italy, is sounded in the weekly review of war operations issued by the Secretary of War, Mr. Baker. It is the sapping of the strength of the enemy, rather than the smashing of the German defensive lines on the western front, according to Mr. Baker, which constitutes the chief purpose of the British and French operations.

He adds that it now is evident that the Italian invasion was undertaken by the Germans to divert the enemy from the ceaseless pounding of their lines in the west.

The wastage of men, says Mr. Baker, must result eventually in the softening of the German line in the west. The communique follows:

"The success of the British offensive in the region of Cambrai and the steady resistance of the Italians in the face of the repeated attacks of the Austro-German forces are two factors which may be considered as correlative elements of one and the same movement.

Aim of Teutons Defeated.

"It is evident that the enemy took the offensive in Italy hoping thereby to extricate himself from the increasingly difficult position in which his forces find themselves in the west. Though the French and British have both despatched large consignments to Italy, this has in no way hampered the continuance of their offensive operations.

"It is the wastage of the enemy forces, the slow, yet relentless sapping of his man power by continued and sudden offensive thrusts, which must eventually result in the softening of his line in the west. This is the ultimate objective of the series of intensive offensives so successfully pursued by the Allies during the last six months, and is even more important than the gain of terrain.

"The military situation is dominated by the spectacular success gained by the British forces an their thrust toward Cambrai. By adopting new tactical methods, by evolving a strategy, daringly conceived and brilliantly executed, the British forces have been able to record a greater success, when measured by captured terrain, than any hitherto achieved by either belligerent in the same space of time along the western front.

British Still Advancing.

"The British forces, while still pressing forward, are meeting with increased resistance. Severe fighting continues, and we may expect desperate attempts on the part of the enemy not merely to prevent any further British advance, but to regain if possible some of the lost ground.

"Cambrai, the centre of very important rail, road and coal lines of communication, now comes under the immediate fire of British field guns, while the large calibre high velocity and naval guns can readily search out the country side for miles in the rear, harrassing hostile territory and rendering the continued tenure of the city by the enemy difficult.

"The number of prisoners enumerated hitherto is more than ten thousand, which exceeds the total British casualties.

"Along the front held by the French forces the latter have achieved a successful coup de main south of Juvrincourt, in Champaigne, resulting in the capture of some elements of enemy trenches and the taking of numerous prisoners. Lively artillery duels took place north of the Chemin des Dames and in the Verdun sector, where as for several weeks past the enemy continued to bombard the French positions in Chaume Wood.

American Troops More Active.

"In the sector where our troops are training increased artillery activity is noted. Small detachments while on patrol duty have gained some useful experience.

"The Italian armies, now completing their reorganization, have been able to withstand the assaults of the numerically superior forces of the Austro-German divisions engaged against them. They have hitherto prevented any further invasion of the Italian plain. The enemy is continuing his efforts to break through. The line of the Piave has held firm. Along the lower Piave, where hostile forces gained a temporary foothold on the right bank of the river, they were driven off with great loss, thus rendering the Italian positions more secure.

"Strategic reserves, strengthened by allied contingents have been constituted. The morale of the Italian forces is improving daily, and while the situation is not wholly free from critical aspects the defensive measures appear adequate to meet the situation."

GERMANY PLANS TERMS ON WIN AGAINST ITALY

(BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.)

Washington, D. C. — (Special.) — To make peace now, leaving Germany an immensely strengthened and formidable central European power, or to enter upon a struggle of two or three years more in the effort to crush Prussian militarism.

This is the choice of alternatives which the United States and the allies will be required to make this winter, in the opinion of many officials here, most of whom do not doubt that the enemies of Prussian militarism will elect to fight it out no matter how long it may take to "make the world safe for democracy."

KAISER MAY OFFER PEACE.

That Germany, following General Mackensen's victories in Italy, will take advantage of the occasion to propose peace, perhaps within the next few weeks, is not doubted in Washington. Nor is it doubted that Berlin will seek to make the offer attractive by disclaiming, or appearing to disclaim, any intention of demanding annexations or indemnities. The allied nations then will be confronted with the necessity of deciding whether they will enter into an armistice and a peace parley or spurn the proposition with a determination to fight until Prussian militarism succumbs.

Official advices from Europe indicate that Germany is prepared to yield all that the allies could hope to gain in another year of fightin and if Germany makes a peace fler tearing out this suggestion the proposition certainly would receive serious consideration in the capitals of the nations arrayed against the Prussian autocracy.

Entente opinion of the feasibility of accomplishing the destruction of the menace of Prussian militarism is diverse. On the one side are those who maintain that within the next year "Germany will crack" as a result of the food shortage, the decreasing supply of steel and other metals necessary to the manufacture of war materials, and the increasin- discontent of the people with the autocratic government at Berlin.

TASK IS FORMIDABLE.

On the other side are those who believe that Germany is capable of holding out against these processes of attrition for three or four years longer and that even in that time the allie cannot hope of accomplish more than the reclamation of alien territory no held by Prussian arms. There is little authentic information on which to base a sound judgment of conditions in Germany. The food supply is limited but the crops this year were better than last year, and there is reason to believe that some additional food is being obtained from Russia. The lack of fats is the most serio s aspect of the German food situation. There is a shortage of metals, but steel is still being obtained from Sweden.

Certain it is, however, that unless Germany is much nearer the end of her resources than is generally known the task of crushing Prussian militarism is still a formidable one.

It does not appear likely that the allies can strike a mortal blow at the central powers within the next year, either from Italy or through the Balkans. It does not appear likely that Russia can be rejuvenated sufficiently to roll back the Germans on the east front within the next year. If Prussian militarism is to be crushed on the field of battle it must be on the western front.

With both Russia and Italy crippled, Germany will be able to maintain more powerful forces on the western front in 1918. It is conceivable that the Americans, British and the French will be able, however, to force back the German lines and compel the evacuation of Belgium and northern France. It is almost inconceivable that the allies in the next year would be able to force the Germans back of the Rhine.

IN FOR LONG WAR.

Unless, therefore, attrition is sapping the strength of Germany at a greater rate than is known, the allies are in for a long war to accomplish the destruction of German militarism.

If Germany could make peace on the basis of the relinquishment of Belgium and even her colonial empire, she would still be a greater power than before the war. While Germany has failed to achieve the conquest of the world, and doubtless realizes the failure, she has staked out the empire of Mittel Europa, one of the ambitions of the pan-Germanists.

Few People Know This

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

Food Supply to Our Allies Thoroughly Discussed.
Ladies Specially Invited.

"GOD SAVE THE KING."

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Carl Weber's Surprise

By EDITH V. ROSS

When the great European war broke out Carl Weber, whose father was a baker in Berlin, being a member of the reserve, was given ten days to prepare to leave for the front. The reason of his having been given so long a time when there was such a hurry for troops was that the unmarried members of his corps were recommended to take wives before going to the war in order that the depletion of men consequent upon the dangers of the service might be balanced by a crop of children.

Carl chose for a partner for life—or more likely for death—Gretchen, the daughter of Hans Kopp, who kept a grocery store next door to the bakery. Hans was twenty years old; Gretchen was seventeen. There was no time for courting—indeed, no time for either groom or bride to deliberate on the subject. Carl's father made the proposition to Gretchen's father that the youngsters be married, and since both men considered that the marriage was a duty to the fatherland a marriage it must be.

Neither Carl nor Gretchen was averse to a marriage. Being young they did not consider the fact that the young husband would probably be killed or die of disease. A great many soldiers who go to war return. Why not Carl? So they were married and passed a week's honeymoon together, which slid away very quickly, and Carl was obliged to tear himself from his bride to be entrained for Belgium. The last he saw of his wife she was standing on the sidewalk weeping.

Then for the first time Carl realized what it all meant. It was terribly serious. The first mowing down of men by modern machinery had taken place, and the death toll was terrible. On the way to the front he met trainloads of wounded, and the sight sickened him. What a change in every way had come

"I DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE"

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 822 South 15th St.

When a remedy has lived for forty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their health to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

him! A fortnight before he had not thought of either war or marriage. Now he was deep in both. How he wished he could return, take his weeping wife in his arms and remain with her forever! But, no; very likely he would never see her again, while she—what would become of her? Would she weep for him throughout eternity? We are prone to picture those loved ones from whom we are separated as we last saw them. Carl throughout his army service never thought of Gretchen but that she was standing on the sidewalk looking after him through her tears.

Carl escaped death, but after awhile was severely wounded. He was taken to the rear and placed in a hospital. There he lingered for a long while and at last began to mend. He was able to be about long before he was fit to return to the front, so he was permitted to go home for the rest of the period necessary for him to be prepared to go forth to be shot at again.

Carl wrote to his parents and his wife that he would be at home on a certain day. He did not like to surprise her, for he feared that the joy of meeting him suddenly might have a deleterious effect upon her. The day he arrived his father met him at the station, embraced him, kissing him on both cheeks, then led the way to his delivery wagon, which was waiting, for Carl was not equal to walking home.

Now, it so happened that the stork visited the house with a ten pound boy the very day of Carl's arrival. Indeed, the little fellow was just fifty-five minutes old when the train bearing his father rolled into the station. It had been arranged that Carl should be kept in ignorance of the fact till the last possible moment in order that he might have a pleasant surprise. Gretchen had continued to live with her parents, and his father was to take him home and await notice just when he might be introduced to his wife and child.

The idea of being a father had never entered the young soldier's head. For months he had remembered his wife in tears, and he was possessed with one idea—to get home and dry those tears. When his father drove up before the bakery over which he lived he suggested to Carl to go in and meet his mother before meeting his wife. Respect for parents is so strong in Germany that Carl consented, but after giving the old woman a hasty kiss he broke away and hobbled to the next house to see his wife.

Finding no one in the shop below, he pulled himself upstairs by means of a ballister and tried to open the door. It was locked. He tried the doors to the other chambers and found them all open, but no one was in any of the rooms. Carl began to be frightened. He had asked his father innumerable questions about Gretchen, and the old man had seemed noncommittal.

He rapped at the door of his wife's room again, then listened. He heard a hoarse sound as if a deaf mute was trying to speak. He knocked again and heard a man's voice say, "You may come in in about ten minutes."

Great heavens! A man in his wife's bedroom, telling him when he might come in. Surely something frightful had happened. Weak as he was, he paced the hall like a caged tiger; then suddenly the door was thrown open, and there, lying in bed, was Gretchen, on her arm taking his first breakfast a baby boy, and, instead of tears coursing down her cheeks, on her lips was the happiest smile that had ever been there.

The doctor and the grandmother retired and left the family alone to mother.

Saving Daylight.

The best way to save daylight is to get up early in the morning. The best ways to get up early in the morning are:

First.—Go to bed early at night.

Second.—Get an intermittent alarm clock and put it several yards away from the bed.

Third.—Stay up.

If every American followed these simple rules there would be far more daylight in this country than there is now.

Problems Needing Solution.

As examples of problems calling aloud for solution Henry Le Chatelier, the French scientist, names the following: In glassmaking, the limits of the variation of viscosity of glass in terms of temperature and chemical composition; in metallurgy, the measurement of hardness of tempered steel; in heating, the calorific conductibility of porous substances, such as fire brick; in agriculture, the laws of germination of grain in terms of humidity, temperature and oxygen supply.

OUR BOYS IN EUROPE AND HOME PROTECTION

The men on the firing line represent the pick of our country's youth. Many were rejected because of physical deficiency. Many times the kidneys were to blame.

If we wish to prevent old age coming on too soon, or if we want to increase our chances for a long life, Dr. Pierce of the Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., says that you should drink plenty of water daily between meals. Then procure at a drug store, Anuric (double strength). This "An-u-ric" drives the uric acid out and cures backache and rheumatism.

If we wish to keep our kidneys in the best condition a diet of milk and vegetables, with only little meat once a day, is the most suitable. Drink plenty of pure water, take Anuric three times a day for a month.

Send Dr. Pierce 10c for trial pkg. Anuric—many times more potent than lithia, eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar. A short trial will convince you.

Preston, Ont.—"I am pleased to express my experience with Anuric. I have been troubled with rheumatism in right limb and hand for several years, and lately in left shoulder. The only way I could lie was on my back. I had great difficulty to sit down and more to get up. Lately I had a very severe pain in my back. I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery several times with the most satisfactory results, so I concluded to give his Anuric Tablets a trial. The pain in limb and shoulder has stopped entirely and in right hand it is very slight and getting less all the time. I can now sit or lie in any position I wish without discomfort or pain. I recommended the Anuric Tablets to two parties and they both claim decided improvement. I certainly will recommend them to any one troubled with the kidneys; there is nothing nearly so good; I tried them all."—Gnosez Boos, cor. Duke and Waterloo.

RUNNING AND BREATHING.

Why the Exertion Makes the Lungs Gasp For More Air.

It is hard to breathe after running awhile, because your body requires more blood in circulation. The efforts of your heart, brain and lungs make breathing difficult. We breathe to take air into the lungs, where the blood which has once been through the arteries and comes back on its return trip to the heart is exposed to the air in the lungs before going back into the heart. The air which we take into our lungs purifies the once used blood and makes it into good blood again.

When you run the heart pumps blood into your arteries faster to enable you to run, we are told by the Book of Wonders. Thus also the arteries send much more blood back to the heart through the veins, and this must be purified by the lungs before going back into the heart. To attend to purifying this extra amount of spoiled blood the lungs need more air, and thus you are made to breathe in more air for the purpose.

Unless you are in good training—your wind in good condition, as we say—it is almost impossible for you to supply the lungs with enough air for the purpose, but whether you can do it or not the lungs call upon you for more air and cause you to try to get it, and that is what makes you get out of breath.

A Point Conceded.

"Your nation hasn't much appreciation of statuary," remarked the critical visitor.

"I said that years ago," replied Grandpa Mint, "when they took the wooden Indian away from in front of the cigar store.

The Card-Index.

The card-index system bids fair to have a serious rival in a certain government office in England, if the accounts of a recent sufferer are to be credited. He went up to London to seek a friend in this office, and, after being conducted all over the building by three different messengers, apparently following a carefully planned system, he was told that there was no such person in the building. He retired, discomfited, but shortly afterwards met the man he was in search of, in the Strand. The one sought had been in the building all the time. "But, you know, old man," he said, on hearing the story, "it's much better to rely on meeting me casually, like this. We work so much on 'system' over there."

Tramp Traps.

The Southern Pacific railroad has several "tramp traps" in the shape of freight cars which are left in condition to invite the tramps, and after a number of them have boarded it the doors are mysteriously closed and they are prisoners.

The Contrast.

"Did you miss your first husband very much?"

"Not until after I married my second."—London Opinion.

Youth is a blunder, manhood a struggle, old age a regret.

MRS. DE SAULLES FIRM IN DEFENCE DESPITE HER GRILLING EXAMINATION

Prosecutor Scores Repeatedly, But She Maintains Mind Is Blank on Shooting—Explains Loving Sentiments With Philosophy That Flattery Would Hold a Man.

"MAY SMILE WITH BREAKING HEART"

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Blanca Errazuriz de Saulles, in her all-day joust with the District Attorney did not escape scathless, but she was never overthrown completely.

With all the arts of the skilled cross-examiner Mr. Weeks, patiently and by means roughly, sought to pierce the joints in the armour of her defence. At the end of the four-hour struggle her coat of mail in which she had arrayed herself on the previous day, showed the scars of some doughty blows. But she was still holding tenaciously to the position on which her feet had been planted. She had not often given ground.

Physically she showed little fatigue from the encounter. From the attack, which had sought first to undermine and then to batter down the fabric of her defence, she emerged placid and with a ready wit in repartee. This she had shown more than once to the momentary discomfiture of her inquisitor.

"MAY SMILE WITH BREAKING HEART"

Though the District Attorney bent his efforts at the beginning to prove inconsistencies in her assertions that she was a broken-hearted woman, while at the same time he was writing in the most endearing terms to her husband; while he asked her how a woman suffering the heart pangs of neglect and marital infidfielities could express delight in dancing and in the diversions of Ostend and other pleasure resorts, she countered neatly when she shot this epigram at the prosecutor: "We do not dance with our hearts, Mr. Weeks"

Again her reply was: "One may smile, I think, with a breaking heart."

Pressed to explain how she reconciled her growing distrust of John L. de Saulles' fidelity with the praise and loving adulation she continued for a long time to lavish upon him, she said: "I believed the best way to hold a man was to flatter him to death."

Having formulated this little code of feminine philosophy, she added that she had written often in terms of happiness and content, because she could not bear that anybody should guess the sorrow and misgivings that really disturbed her heart. She was guarding the secret of her wounded pride, she would have the jury understand.

DENIES REGRET OF MARRIED LIFE.

When she had despaired finally of living happily and had gone back to her Chilian home with her baby, in August, 1915, Blanca de Saulles said, she believed then that, morally speaking, her married life had come to an end, and she was glad to think it had. That she did afterward return and live with her husband, she averred, was due to his urgent entreaties. Mr. Weeks prodded her persistently on that point. He asked, in his most serious tone, if it was not a fact that she had told Mrs. G. Maurice Heckscher, a cousin of de Saulles, that from the time of the birth of her baby she had nerved lived in the marital relation with her husband, and that if she had known what marriage really meant she would never have consented to be married.

To these questions the frail little mother who is fighting for her life in the Mineola Court House, in the presence of a daily throng of the morbidly curious who hang upon her every word, interposed an indignant denial. She said such an assertion was ridiculous. She might have said some foolish things to Mrs. Heckscher, but if so it was because the latter "was always prying into her private affairs" and questioning her about Jack.

INSISTS MIND WAS BLANK.

By every device known to the accomplished cross-examiner the District Attorney then sought to break down the defendant's story that her mind had been a blank from a moment before she fired the deadly shots into her husband's body until she regained knowledge of her surroundings long afterward in the Mineola jail. Citing from testimony apparent evidences of sane and lucid action at the very moment of and directly after the shooting, he strove to shatter the defence's contention of irresponsibility for her homicidal act. Every effort was vain. She could not be trapped, or cajoled into any admission except those covered by her direct testimony. After long questioning she said finally that to the best of her belief she knew nothing and had no memory of her actions from the moment when she "saw that look come over the face of de Saulles and heard him say she could not have the child then or ever" until about ten days later, or on or about August 13.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up, and the skin is left soft and velvety.

Never close up a finger with court plaster. It involves the possibility of pus and long inflammation. Wash the cut with warm water and turpentine should be applied. Then bandage with linen cloths.

When preserving, sprinkle some ashes on the stove lid beneath the kettle of boiling fruit. This prevents standing over the stove to stir the fruit. It will not burn or stick if this method is followed.

"MOST GRATEFUL WOMAN IN TOWN"

"The Way Tanlac Helped Me is Simply Wonderful," Says Mrs. Edwards

"I feel so happy over what Tanlac did for me I just want to tell everybody about it," said Mrs. Florence Edwards, a resident of Buttonwood avenue, Mt. Dennis, Toronto.

"Several weeks ago," continued Mrs. Edwards, "I contracted a severe pain that settled in my side. In a little while my left side, arm and shoulder began to throb and ache till I suffered agonies from rheumatism. The trouble got worse and worse till finally my arm and shoulder were so stiff it almost killed me to bend over and I actually was unable to put on my shoes. My shoulder hurt so I could not rest and sometimes for two whole nights I wasn't able to sleep a wink. My side felt like a sharp knife was sticking in it and I was so weak and helpless I just had to give up my housework, for hardly an hour passed over my head that I wasn't miserable the whole time.

"Just as soon as I started taking Tanlac I began to feel better and the pain seemed to be leaving me. I am now on my second bottle and already that awful pain in my side is entirely gone, and I am feeling better all over. My arm and shoulder are entirely free from rheumatism and I can now do all my housework as well as I ever could. The way that Tanlac has relieved me of that awful rheumatism is simply wonderful and and it has made me the most grateful woman in town.

Rheumatism is not only one of the most prevalent, but one of the most painful and difficult to treat of all present day diseases. When the digestive organs and bowels are not working properly, and the kidneys become clogged up, the whole system becomes deranged and saturated with uric acid poisons, and other impurities which accumulate in the joints and other parts of the body and produce the condition known as rheumatism.

Tanlac is a powerful reconstructive tonic and quickly overcomes this condition by acting directly on the vital organs, toning them up, and enabling them to perform their proper functions, so that the impurities are soon eliminated from the system in a natural way. Liniments and external applications as a general thing only afford temporary relief. Tanlac is a constitutional treatment and gets right at the root of the trouble by removing the cause.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Limited; in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

ANTWERP STRIPPED

LONDON. — Details of the extent to which the Germans are stripping Antwerp of all articles which may be useful in the prosecution of the war have been obtained through trustworthy sources in Holland by Reuter's agency. Besides commandeering all metal work in the houses of Antwerp the Germans, it appears, have taken all carpets, rugs, matresses and clothing from houses the owners of which have left the country. Families remaining in Antwerp are said to have been deprived of all but the barest necessities in the way of bed clothes. This is regarded as a further indication of the increasing difficulties of the Germans in finding raw material from which to manufacture supplies for the German armies and civilian population.

Enemy Said To Be Moving Troops From Italian Front

Have Apparently Realized the Hopelessness of Endeavouring to Break the Italian Line---Italians Are on the Offensive at Many Points---Little Change is Recorded on the British or French Fronts.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMIES, Nov. 30.—Italian aviators to-day reported a heavy movement of troops behind the German-Austrian lines. It was believed that the enemy, despairing of success in forcing a breach in the Italian lines, was preparing to move men for blows elsewhere.

General Diaz's forces are now definitely on the offensive at numerous points on the Mountain Plave line. The enemy has not ceased his efforts to find a weak spot but the initial impetus of his attack has noticeably lessened. The Italian morale as a result has increased to the most complete confidence in all ranks that not only will the line hold but that reinforcements will enable even greater measures against the enemy. Snow in the mountains to the north was slowing up fighting in that sector to-day.

ROME, Nov. 30.—Intense artillerying over all the Italian front was reported in to-day's official statement. A British monitor in action near Lower Piave scored direct hits against an enemy bridge and boats in the vicinity of Passarella.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Austro-German troops are making a second Belgium out of invaded Italy, official Rome cables to-day stated. Near Venzon the Germans placed women and children in their first line trenches as shields against the Italian fire. Hundreds of these innocent victims were sacrificed, said the message.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The Marquis of Lansdowne's letter giving peace suggestions holds first place in the editorial columns of the London morning new spers, but with the exception of the Radical Daily News, which approves it, and the moderate Daily Telegraph, which endorses it in part, it is denounced.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 30.—The Austro-Hungarian Government, according to a despatch from Vienna, has sent an official reply, accepting the Russian Government's wireless proposal to enter into negotiations for an armistice and a general peace treatey.

GOVERNMENT HAS FALLEN.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The Government of Nikolai Lenine has fallen, according to a Petrograd despatch to the Daily Chronicle, dated Wednesday. It has been succeeded by the Coalition Cabinet of advanced Socialists, in which, however, Bolsheviki represented.

LANSDOWNE'S LETTER MAY HAVE AN EFFECT

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The Marquis of Lansdowne's bombshell letter may have a far-reaching effect in bringing England's discussions of the war to a centre on President Wilson's plans for a frank, full and joint statement of aims by all the Allies. In some quarters to-day it was regarded as significant that Colonel House, President Wilson's official envoy, should recently have conferred with the former British Foreign Minister, and that now, a few days later, the Marquis of Lansdowne should have issued his remarkable plea. President Wilson's position squares fully with a great many of Lansdowne's suggestions—except the ones tending toward pacifism. The former Minister's plans are fully in line in the main with the American policy of assuring American people that if they oust Hohenzollernism there is no desire to crush them utterly or to grant territory. Lansdowne favours a league of nations; so does President Wilson. Both believe the German people should be impressed with the idea that the world has no intention of crushing her politically and commercially, except in so far as it may be necessary to make her abandon intriguing Kaiserism and barbarity, but most important of all, Lansdowne agrees with President Wilson's position, as outlined in despatches from Washington and London, that there should be a re-statement of all the Allied war aims.

GERMANS READY TO DISCUSS PEACE WITH THE RUSSIANS

New Imperial Chancellor States That Huns Will Negotiate if Envoys Given Full Powers Are Sent to Berlin

TALKS OF ITALY

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Germany is ready to discuss peace with Russia if envoys with full power are sent to Berlin, Count Von Hertling, the new Imperial Chancellor declared yesterday before the Reichstag. He expressed the wish that the present efforts of the Bolsheviki would bring peace. The Chancellor declared that the Central Powers still stood by their answer to the peace note of the Pope. He said that the Central Powers were not responsible for the prolongation of war and held out as warning to others the glorious advance into Italy. Apparently the Chancellor did not state Germany's peace terms specifically, nor did he mention the Reichstag resolution in favour of peace without annexations and indemnities. Conditions in Russia apparently remain greatly unsettled.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 30. — The Government's answer to-day to the Marquis of Lansdowne's "no knockout" letter was a firm reiteration that no discussion of the freedom of the seas is possible until the oceans have been swept clean of the German submarines. It was delivered by J. L. Macpherson, parliamentary under secretary for war at a Scottish luncheon in the criterion restaurant. "No discussion is possible over the question of freedom of the seas," he declared. "Instead of such freedom the seas must be cleared of a piratical, treacherous foe now polluting the ocean with his foul crimes."

Sergt. Jas. Marsh. Former Collegiate Pupil and Son of Rev. Dr. Marsh, Formerly of Springville, Meets Death in France

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

KILLED IN ACTION.

Sergt. James Marsh, son of Rev. Dr. Marsh, formerly of Springville.

WOUNDED.

Pte. Percy Killingbeck, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Hastings.

SERGT. JAMES MARSH.

Mr. Fred Wilson, of Springville, received word to-day that Sergt. James Marsh, son of Rev. Dr. Marsh, former pastor of the Springville Presbyterian Church, has been killed in action in the recent fighting.

Sergt. Marsh is a graduate of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, and during his student years made a host of friends in the city, who will be shocked to hear of his death.

Before enlisting he had a splendid position as mechanical engineer with the C.N.R., giving up his opportunities there to enlist as a private with an Ontario battalion.

The many friends of Rev. Dr. Marsh will sympathise with him and his family in their bereavement.

Sergt. Marsh has only been in France a short time.

PTE. PERCY KILLINGBECK.

Pte. Percy Killingbeck, who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion here in the autumn of 1915, and was transferred to another Canadian infantry battalion in France, is officially reported wounded to-day. His home is in Hastings.

Efficient Store Service

Grafton & Co. With Double Floor Space and Added Conveniences

One of the biggest changes on George Street during the past year has taken place in the Grafton Store. For years the old store was most uncomfortably crowded and when an opportunity to purchase the store next door, at that time occupied by C. B. Routley, presented itself, it came as the solution of the difficulty. Its purchase placed double the floor space at the firm's disposal, and it has now been thrown into one, and the extra available space on the upper floors has been wisely laid out as storage rooms for surplus stock. At present, a mammoth enlargement sale is going on, which has extended into the Christmas season, and taxed even the big double store and an increased staff to handle it. So greatly has the volume of business increased that it has been found necessary to put in an extra cash desk and parcel counter, and this has been installed in the centre of the Furnishings Department, and the service is now greatly improved. The store now has two cash desks, and three parcel counters. Efficient service is a feature that is made prominent in all Grafton stores, and at none of them more markedly than at the Peterborough establishment.

The big announcement in the Examiner every few days tell of unusual values in men's wear. And a buying trip to the store is now a double pleasure, embracing extra value and satisfactory service.

Frank Jenne says:

That the makers of Semi-Ready Clothing tailor their clothes with care and skill, believing that men will appreciate the fact that two or three dollars more are spent in the tailoring of a Coat so that it will hold its shape and always look neat and custom made for their own wear. The individual expression in a Semi-Ready Coat cannot be reproduced in a cheaply made garment. "Come to me."

SMITH FARMERS DECIDE TO PETITION SIR ROBT. BORDEN

COL. ROOSEVELT—Ex-President of the United States who was enthusiastically received at Toronto and Hamilton, where he spoke in the Victory Loan Campaign.

Large and Enthusiastic Food Production Meeting Unanimous in Opinion That Something Must Be Done to Relieve Labour Shortage on the Farms and Enable Farmers to Produce More.

A SPLENDID GATHERING

Last night, at the Foresters' Hall at Bridgenorth, a large and enthusiastic meeting took place, under the Chairmanship of Reeve McKee. Mr. Burnham had suggested some time before that the councillors and representatives of the townships should present their views to Sir Robert Borden, with respect to the food production and labour problem and the action of the Tribunals affecting them, so the members of the Township of Smith Council held this meeting for the purpose of discussing the present situation.

The meeting was non-political and was most representative, being attended by all the prominent farmers and their families, both Liberal and Conservative. Mr. E. M. Elliott, County Treasurer, and Mr. G. N. Gordon were invited to speak and discuss the present situation, as it affected the Township of Smith farmers.

MR. ELLIOTT'S ADDRESS.

Mr. E. M. Elliott was the first speaker and dealt most effectively with the amount of labour required to produce to the fullest extent and to properly cultivate a farm of one hundred acres. Mr. Elliott showed how much food could be produced from the labour of one man and from the labour of two men, and showed most conclusively that in this part of Ontario two able-bodied men were needed to properly farm one hundred acres in order to provide any surplus produce for the purpose of sale. He took up in detail the farming in various sections of the township. He showed how the balance of labour was adverse in 1917, so that the loss in food producing in the Township of Smith was about one-third. In other words, if labour were conscripted for the farms, the wealthy Township of Smith could produce one-third more food produce to feed the people of the City of Peterborough than it did in 1917, but at the present time, with labour being even shorter than in 1917, the food producing ability of the Township would be reduced much lower than it was in 1917. Mr. Elliott advocated conscription, but also the conscription of labour, forcing men to be taken from positions which were not producing food and national wealth into positions where they would be required to produce food and national wealth or go into the firing line.

Mr. Elliott was formerly the Reeve of the Township of Smith, and was an old Smith boy. He met with a most hearty reception and his address was received with enthusiasm.

MR. G. N. GORDON.

Mr. G. N. Gordon was the next speaker who was invited to address the mass meeting of the farmers of the Township, from the standpoint of organized labour. Mr. Gordon said he advocated conscription along the lines mentioned by Mr. Elliott, that men should be conscripted to the firing line and also to productive employ-

SIR SAM HUGHES AND THE UNION GOVERNMENT

We reproduce herewith extracts from an interview given by Sir Sam Hughes which appeared in the Daily Warder of Lindsay, Ont., on October 16th, 1917. Sir Sam was asked:

"What do you think of the new Union Government?"

"It is a splendid triumph for the plans long ago laid by Sir Joseph Flavelle and Sir Thomas White," replied Sir Sam.

"How does that appear?"

"It is now more than a year since the movement to form a National or a "National Trust" Government as it was sometimes termed, was proposed by Sir Joseph and his friends. It is understood that the undertaking involved at that time a replacement of Sir Robert Borden by Sir Thomas White."

"How will coalition affect you personally?"

"Every candidate and Member of Parliament owes allegiance to his constituents and to them only. The people are masters; the members are their servants; and in turn the Cabinet are the servants of the members. At least that is what should prevail under responsible government, and just as Governments depart from these principles do they become Kaiserlike; the machine prevails and liberty is endangered."

"You seem to think there was no pressing need for Coalition?"

"None whatever. That is, had the Government done its full duty during the last year."

"But Laurier held up proceedings for the successful carrying on of the war?"

"Nonsense! Laurier had nothing to do with it. It was Sir Thomas White, Sir Joseph Flavelle, Sir Geo. Perley, Baron Shaughnessy, and possibly dread of the Nationalist party in Quebec under Bourassa."

"But did not Laurier force this war-time election?"

"I do not see how. On three different occasions the Government itself planned elections in war time. Once immediately after the session of 1914, again about the time of the sinking of the Lusitania; third, when Mr. Rogers made his famous and inspired Montreal address. It is understood there was still another occasion."

"When war was declared and before any session of Parliament I favoured an election early in August, 1914. No one else did. Again, after the session, when it was planned to swing an election I objected because of Borden pledges to Laurier during the session, when the Liberals behaved so well. In this I stood alone once more, and was severely condemned by the 'wire-pullers' of the party."

"Will there be much loss of time before these men become accustomed to their new offices?"

"It could not be worse than it has been in the last two years with Perley holding up everything in England and White lining up everything here for the benefit of the institutions with which he and Flavelle are allied. One would almost be led to believe that the desire was to prolong the war for the benefit of certain people and institutions in Canada."

A SURPRISE PRESENTATION MADE TO MR. R. J. DEVEY

Receives a Beautiful Silver Tea and Coffee Service From the Congregation as a Mark of Appreciation of His Faithful Services to the Choir and Church.

AN APPRECIATIVE ADDRESS

At the conclusion of the "Choral Festival" in St. John's Church, last night, the Choir and St. John's congregational members present were invited to the Guild Room by the Wardens—Mr. W. F. Johnston and Dr. W. T. Holloway. On arriving there Mr. Devey was called up, and an address was read by Dr. Holloway, as follows:

To Mr. R. J. Devey,—For about twelve years you have been the Choirmaster and organist of St. John's Church, during which time you have not only discharged all your duties as such, with efficiency, faithfulness, and skill, but have also thrown yourself most heartily into the general work of the Church, of which we regard you, Mrs. Devey, and your family, valued members.

The appreciation of your services is general throughout the congregation of St. John's, and for them, as well as ourselves, officially, we ask you to accept the accompanying gift as one that will always be a reminder to you of the very happy relationships that have always existed between you and us.

(Signed) W. T. HOLLOWAY,
W. F. JOHNSTON.
Wardens of St. John's Church,
Peterborough.

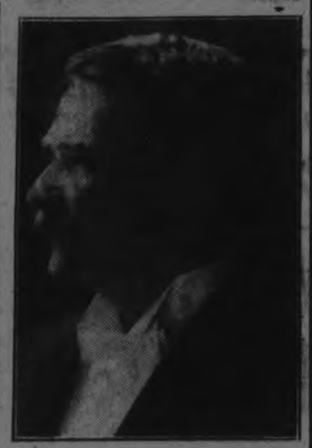
29th November, 1917.

Mr. W. F. Johnston then presented Mr. and Mrs. Devey with a splendid silver tea and coffee service and tray, amid hearty applause.

Mr. Devey, evidently taken aback by this sudden onslaught of silver and compliments, accepted the gift to Mrs. Devey and himself from the Wardens and Congregation, with gratitude, not only for its evident value, but for such expressions of kindly esteem which he felt were undeserved. He paid a glowing tribute to the work of the choristers, and heartily thanked them and the Wardens for splendid co-operation, which made all their work in the Church's service so thorough and hearty.

The singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and cheers and a tiger for Mr. and Mrs. Devey concluded a very pleasant surprise party.

The beautiful silver service was purchased from Mr. Frank Clarke, jeweller, Charlotte street.



MR. R. J. DEVEY,
Organist and Choirmaster of St. John's Church, who was last evening presented with a silver tea and coffee service from the congregation.

Meeting of Women's Union Government League Held At Victoria Hall Last Night

That the women who have been enfranchised for the coming elections are preparing to assume their new responsibility was unmistakably indicated by their large attendance at last night's meeting in Victoria Hall under the auspices of the Women's Union Government League. There was a considerable sprinkling of men, but they were inconspicuous against the unusual background of femininity, a trifle self-conscious of their new privileges, but serious minded and fully possessed of the importance of the privilege and duty of the ballot.

"We have come to our enfranchisement," said Mrs. L. A. Hamilton of Toronto, "with the issue perfectly clear. There should be no difficulty about voting. It makes it easy for us. Some of us have been timid about using our votes. Let us drop our timidity. We have prided ourselves on our sacrifices, but we will do well if we ever come to one-thousandth part of the sacrifice of men."

Mrs. Hamilton spoke on "Reinforcements and Unity," quoting Lloyd George's appeal that unity is the only thing that can save us.

The overrunning of Belgium, Serbia and Roumania was due to the lack of reinforcements, and a similar catastrophe might happen were reinforcements were not speedily supplied. The Russian failure threw additional responsibility on Canada.

"Are we going to be such a weakling nation that, confronted by this great crisis when we are called upon to do our utmost, we are going to say that we have done enough; that we are impoverished and will not continue to the end. I cannot believe that a true Canadian will look on that picture, fully realizing what it means."

Mrs. Hamilton regarded party labels as meaningless, and at this time especially, outworn signs that differentiated shades of thought that were practically identical. The Union government opened upon a magnificent outlook. To women it offered an opportunity for the realization of their ideals and of the effectuation of the reforms for which they had striven. It was composed of the great men from each side, and Mrs. Hamilton was confident that the new blood would be a source of strength to the entire country.

"The women who have their men at the front are deeply interested in reinforcements. You have an excellent organization here and it remains but to throw yourselves into it. This should be the one, paramount issue of your lives until after the elections. Women must not neglect their children, but they may neglect their husbands until this is over," Mrs. Hamilton remarked with a smile that spread to her audience.

"You can leave your knitting and your Red Cross work, but concentrate on this voting and on it alone. The soldiers have proved that if we desert them they will not desert us. They will go on until there is not one man left."

Mrs. Hamilton referred to the recent measures passed by the Union Government, intimating that these were but a promise of the future. She asked the women to remember that when they were marking their ballots the soldiers were looking over their shoulders, watching them write.

MR. CONANT OF OSHAWA.

"In this contest the enfranchised women are bound to play an important part," said Mr. George Conant, Mayor of Oshawa. "It is a safe estimate that there are half a million women voters in Canada in this election. The popular majority at the last elections was only about 200,000. Thus it is in the power of the ladies to determine the issue one way or the other."

Mr. Conant, who has been a prominent Liberal in Oshawa, remarked that there may have been unfair discrimination in the enfranchisement of Canada's women, but that Act, he stated, had not been placed on the statutes by the Union Government which was in no sense responsible for the acts of omission or commission by the old Government. What has been done cannot be undone.

After mentioning a few of the many patriotic works carried on by the women of Canada, Mr. Conant added: "On this occasion, when they have another opportunity of giving assistance to their men there is only one way to exercise the franchise." He discussed briefly the heritage of popular government, of which the franchise was the symbol of the people's power. In England, France, and the United States, as even in ancient Empires, the people had struggled for the rights of the average man that he might live in equality with his fellowmen. In an international sense the same struggle was being fought out to-day in Europe. Mr. Conant proceeded to compare the differences between German British institutions by way of emphasizing the deep, underlying significance of our elections. Here the people elect their representatives who will support or oppose a certain Government, and any man exercises as much influence in the election of a candidate as any other men, whether he be worth one hundred or one million dollars. The Canadian government is responsible to the people and automatically goes out of power when lacking a majority of the votes in the House of Commons.

In Germany the Reichstag is little more than a debating society although ostensibly the expression of the people's will. Bethmann Hollweg had flouted that assembly, declaring that as Chancellor he was above their reach and responsible only to the Kaiser. Besides, the class system of voting obtains in Germany. A man of a certain class, determined by his wealth and position in society, may have, as in some cases, one thousand votes. Many seats in the Reichstag are absolutely controlled by the upper class. If Canada were under German domination the people would realize too late the importance of their franchise.

THE ELECTION ISSUE.

The question in this election, Mr. Conant said, was whether Britishers would continue to control this country or whether Germans would control it. "We can return to our domestic policies in the future."

"The boys in the trenches are sacrificing their lives. Aren't we prepared to sacrifice our little feelings to support these men?" Mr. Conant appealed, as he deprecated partizanship. He admitted that was not acquainted with the local situation, but "there is a big issue at stake," he urged, "and if we can't endorse the individual candidate it is surely our duty to support the principles for which he stands."

After the war Mr. Conant believed he would be a better Liberal than ever "because the principle at stake is Liberalism, the principle of equality, equality of opportunities. That is the issue at stake on the battlefield of Flanders."

Mr. Conant objected to the criticisms of the late Borden government. "They don't help the situation to-day. We can't help the errors of the past. We've had a new deal with Bob. Rogers and Sam. Hughes out of it. The new government should be given the benefit of the doubt."

"We sent our men away with promises that we would see them through. Surely we owe it, if not to ourselves, to our children, and our children's children to remember the fellows over there. We are going to redeem that promise and that pledge."

The enfranchised women should be moved by the appeals of the men at the Front rather than by anything they may hear at home, Mr. J. H. Burnham stated. Union Government, he said, meant a sacrifice by the Conservative party. Mr. Burnham predicted that after the war the Liberals would be strengthened by their participation in the Union Government.

Russell Hopkins Seriously Injured

Was Knocked Down By a Load of Lumber

Russell Hopkins, an employee of the Leonard Construction Company, was seriously injured this morning at 10.30, when a load of lumber which was being hoisted in a derrick, fell upon him.

Dr. Eastwood was called, and found the man to be painfully injured about his shoulder and badly cut about his head.

Hopkins was taken to Nicholl's Hospital in Comstock's ambulance.

We repeat that in the midst of this awful tragedy of war—that through our commanding position at the mills we are enabled to make this unusual offer of A PAIR OF PANTS ABSOLUTELY FREE WITH EVERY SUIT OR OVERCOAT ORDERED AT OUR STORE TO-MORROW OR MONDAY. Men! Think of it. While scores of merchants are searching the world's markets for supplies, right here at your very doors we offer you HALF A THOUSAND OF THE FINEST WEAVES IN SUITINGS AND OVERCOATINGS THAT EVER CAME FROM THE BRITISH MILLS.

A PAIR OF TROUSERS FREE, ABSOLUTELY WITH EVERY ORDER

There are no strings attached to this offer. It is clear, emphatic and honest. It is keeping faith with you, as we have always done. Each season—twice a year—it has been our regular custom to give you this privilege of a pair of trousers free with every order left with us for Suit or Overcoat. Isn't it a grand, signal triumph of our stability, our integrity, our square deal methods, that this season we are still keeping faith with you, and you are welcome to come in To-morrow or Monday and pick your Suit or Overcoat from the finest assembly of British woolens that ever came over the ocean.

COME, THEN, SATURDAY & MONDAY AND CHOOSE YOUR WINTER CLOTHES AND GET A PAIR OF PANTS EREE

Your Garments will be Tailored Strictly to Measure—You can have any style of Sack Suit or Overcoat Made to Your Individual Measures as you Want It.

YOU WILL FIND AN IMMENSE ASSORTMENT—YOU CAN HAVE YOUR EXTRA TROUSERS OFF THE SAME CLOTH AS YOUR SUIT IF YOU WISH

EXTRA We are going to include in this offer our famous "Corduroy" pantings. You know how very scarce these goods are—that in a few months it is likely there will not be a yard produced. Many mills have already ceased producing the well known "Corduroys." This is an extra privilege we extend to you. Choose from the old standard Brown and Drab Corduroy without extra charges.

Out-of-Town Men--- If for any reason you are not able to come personally and share in this offer, we are going to allow you the privilege of sending your order by mail. We shall hold the offer open to you until the last mail on Wednesday night, and, if accompanied by a deposit, we shall at once mail you samples from which to choose your Suit or Overcoat, including the FREE PANTS.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members
Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

Ill health and infirmity was given by John Joseph Hickey, munitions inspector, as the reason for claiming exemption. Hickey, who resides at 535 Reid street, was placed in "A" category by the Medical Board.

"What is your infirmity?" asked Judge Huycke.

"I have heart trouble and a goitre," replied the applicant.

Hickey was sent up for further medical examination.

Placed in Class Two.

W. S. Doig, a plumber residing at 228 King street, applied for exemption on domestic grounds. Applicant is the sole support of his parents. The father who is totally blind, is a dealer in waste material. Applicant earns ten dollars and a half a week as a plumber and of this amount contributes eight dollars a week towards the maintenance of the home.

Doig was placed in Class 2.

Claim Disallowed.

Mrs. Minnie Meeks appeared before the tribunal on behalf of her stepson, Bruce Meeks. The father's ill health was given as the reason for applying for the exemption of Meeks. Mrs. Meeks admitted that the family was able to live comfortably.

"You will be able to assign some of your pay," said Mr. D. W. Dumble.

Meeks' claim was disallowed.

The exemption claim of William Lavery, 109 George street, was disallowed.

The exemption claim for Francis P. Leahy, teller in the Royal Bank, was disallowed.

To Be Re-examined.

John Castle, 166 Dufferin street, a carter, claimed to be the only son at home.

"Tell us some good reason why you shouldn't go?" said Mr. Dumble.

"He has poor eyesight" put in Mrs. Castle, mother of the applicant.

Applicant produced a certificate to show that he had previously been turned down as unfit for military service.

Castle was instructed to again appear before the Medical Board and show the doctors the certificate in question.

One Brother Must Go.

T. J. McCarthy, 274 Woodbine avenue, claimed exemption on domestic grounds. An older brother is slated to appear before Tribunal No. 276. Applicant has two stepbrothers. One is employed in a Campbellford woollen mill and the other is overseas with the Canadian forces.

The Board was of the opinion that one of the two brothers should go. Applicant appeared to be satisfied with this arrangement and decision was reserved in order to give the two brothers an opportunity of talking the matter over and deciding who should go.

Was Willing to Go.

The case of J. J. Collins, East City, was similar to that of McCarthy's. Collins has one brother overseas with the Canadian forces and one other brother is scheduled to appear before the City Hall tribunal. Judgment was deferred. Applicant was willing to go providing he could get into the Mechanical Transport Service.

Judge Huycke assured Collins that one of the two brothers would have to go.

"I am quite satisfied to go," said Collins.

Judgment was deferred.

Charles Fenner, who was discharged from the Seaforth Highlanders as being medically unfit for service, was classed as an exception to the act.

A Patriotic Family.

Ernest Symes, 208 Perry street, has three brothers, three brothers-in-law and eight first cousins on the firing line. Symes said he tried to enlist five or six times and produced an A-R button to support his claim. Symes said that three brothers-in-law had sixty years' service to their credit. Applicant was exempted until Class 2 is called.

Two Operations.

Michael J. OBrien has had two operations for appendicitis. His claim for exemption was based on the ground of ill health. O'Brien produced a certificate from his family doctor.

"The doctors in this city are making a record in the matter of sending in certificates," said Judge Huycke. "They seem to be trying to block the Medical Board because they are not on it," added His Honour.

O'Brien was sent up for further medical examination.

G. G. Walton, a C.P.R. trainman, and J. E. Flett, a C.P.R. telegraph operator, were both transferred to the C.P.R. special tribunal.

John Percy Bickell, a farmer, W. H. Stockhall, 273 Simcoe street, William O. Edwards, 225 Caddy street, Albert R. Carter, a cheese maker, all "E" men, were exempted until "E" class men are required.

T. Collins, 223 Perry street, was exempted until March the first.

Will Have to Fight.

Timothy Parden Bowler, a farm labourer, employed with Arthur Blodgett, a Smith township farmer, will have an opportunity of fighting for the country which he denounced yesterday, much to the disgust of the tribunal. Bowler's claim for exemption was disallowed.

Everest V. Heath, 82 Aylmer Street.

Three Brothers Ask Exemption of Eldest.

Ralph R. Moore, 350 Smith Street, one of three A2 brothers, asked that the eldest of them, Ernest, be permitted to remain at home. One of the boys, Norman, has already been listed for the draft, and Ernest is to appear before the Court House Tribunal. Apparently two of the boys have decided to go, and it is their request that Ernest be left at home. He earns the most money of the three, hence the reason is for the most part an economic one.

The exemption of Ralph R. Moore was disallowed.

One Brother Goes.

Vincent J. McCarthy, 274 Woodbine Avenue, has a brother of draft qualifications. The latter appeared before Tribunal 276, and was exempted on the understanding that his brother should be taken. Mr. Aylmer suggested that by this means the machinery of the law could facilitate the decision one of the boys would have to make. Hence Vincent J. McCarthy's appeal was disallowed.

An American Citizen.

C. H. Thurber, 254 Aylmer Street, was born in Plattsburg, N.Y., and as a citizen of the United States applied for complete exemption, or rather reported to the Tribunal in compliance with the order from the railway authorities. He represents the Canadian Car Service of Montreal, with the duty of speeding up freight movement in and out of the city. He was asked to produce some testimonial of his American citizenship.

Plattsburg is well known to Mr. Moore, who exchanged with Mr. Thurber passing recollections of the military town at the head of Lake Champlain.

Sent Up For Examination.

Leo ynes, R. R. No. 3, applied on physical grounds, and was sent up for medical examination. He said he was helping his father, and there is also a fifteen-year-old boy, farming about 300 acres.

Russell Thompson, 184 London Street, was in a rather bellicose mood that Mr. Moore ruffled when he asked him why he hadn't been to the Medical Board.

"I was up there, and they sent me down here for an order before they would examine me." He got the order.

Wilbert Sylvester Griffin, 257 Stewart Street, made his claim on physical grounds. He had a shoulder dislocated two years ago, and has been wearing a suspensory bandage.

Exemption disallowed.

William Crowley, R. R. No. 11, Peterborough, has three brothers and three sisters at home. He recently returned from the West, where he worked this summer.

Exemption refusgd.

Work 637 Acres.

Three Maloney brothers, who have been exempted by the local Tribunals, have a farm of 637 acres. They live at home with their widowed mother. Their inventory of this year's work sounded like a page from the Department of Agriculture's Blue-Book. On 22nd September, for instance, the cattle they sold brought them $4,000. The various crops were enumerated, showing the allotment of the farm to the different grains.

LANSDOWNE'S LETTER IS DEPLORED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Nov. 30.—America should know immediately that the Marquis of Lansdowne's suggestion of the relinquishment of certain original war aims so as to negotiate a peace before Germanyis beaten, does not represent any responsible section of the British public opinion. That fact was made emphatically apparent here to-day in after math comment on what most circles characterizes as the former minister's aamzing "communication" to the Daily Telegraph. Best information is that the Marquis acted solely on his own personal initiative. He did not consult his former Unionist colleagues. Many of them to-day expressed sincere regret over Lansdowne's suggestion that peace should even be considered before the idheals for which thousands of British and French lives have been sacrificed could be realized.

The Daily News, which has long shown a pacific tendency, was the only morning newspaper to approve Lansdown's letter without qualification. Other papers condemn his suggestion wholly or in part. The letter is regarded as deplorable owing to the encouragement it will undoubtedly give the enemy.

AMATEUR MINSTRELS SCORED A BIG HIT WITH CROWDED HOUSE

With very few weeks of preparation and unassisted by professional talent St. Peter's Dramatic Club last night presented a minstrel show which, for unaffected delivery, funny jokes and catchy songs, would compare pretty evenly with a professional production. No current topic or situation was too advanced for a clever little skit by the talented performers. Exemption tribunals, politics and Sir Joseph Flavelle all received a good-natured little dig at the hands of Mr. Hanrahan, the able interlocutor and his company.

THE MUSIC.

The music, under the skillful direction of Miss Marian Gorman, was particularly good and well chosen, being composed of all the newest selections. With the aid of the orchestra not one moment lagged, even the short intermission was filled up by splendid music. The orchestra was composed of: Pianist, Miss Gorman; violinists, Jack and Vincent McCabe, and Jim Condon; cornet, Joe Minicolo, drum, Frank Lynch.

EFFECTIVE SCENERY.

Particularly effective was the Chinese chorus, when a distinctly Chinese setting of magic lanterns and Chinese furnishings set off the costumes worn by the chorus. The 'Cafe Chantant' was another feature which called forth hearty applause.

THE PROGRAMME.

Solo—"She's Dixie All the Time"—Tim Collins.

Solo—"The Sweet Long Ago"—Ed. Riley.

Solo, "The Blue Bird"—Joseph Clancy.

Solo, "Joan of Arc"—Tess. O'Donnell.

Solo, "Everybody's Happy"—Bill' O'Connell.

Step dance—Max. Murty.

Solo, "So Long, Mother"—Ted. Bartley.

Solo, "O'Brien is Looking for You" Frank Grady.

Solo, "What a Time We'll Have When the Boys Come Home"—Agnes Dwyer.

Duet, "Me and My Gal"—Wilhelmine Levasseur, "Bill" O'Connell.

Jap Chorus — Ted. Hanrahan, A. Dwyer, F. Leahy, W. Lavasseur, T. O'Donnell.

Solo, "It's a Long Way to Dixie"—Florence Leahy.

"The Song that reached my Heart"—Ted Bartley.

Solo, "Just as his Mother Was"—"Bill" Casey.

Solo, "Sailing Away in the Henry Clay"—Miss W. Levasseur.

Solo, "Somewhere a Heart is Breaking"—Mr. Wolfe.

Step dance—Mac. Murty.

Solo, "I'm Longing for My Dixie"—Miss O'Connell.

Solo, "The Olden Days"—J. Minicolo.

God Save the King.

HALL FILLED.

St. Alphonsus Hall, in which the show was held, was crowded and the congratulatory remarks heard at time of closing were a guarantee to the success of the evening.

WILL UNITE THEIR EFFORTS IN BAZAAR

The Immaculate Conception Parish Committee held a meeting and decided to postpone next Tuesday's euchre till after the big bazaar is over, in order that all interested in the welfare of it may devote all their energies in bringing the bazaar to a successful start. After the start, it will be a huge success. All the city parishes are eager for the opening their East City brethren.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT FOWLER'S CORNERS

FOWLER'S CORNERS, Nov. 30.—Don't forget the date of Lakevale Presbyterian church anniversary services, Sunday, 2nd December, at 11 and 7.30 o'clock.

Mild weather is once more prevailing and is very much appreciated owing to the scarcity of coal in the country.

Come to Lakevale Church on Wednesday evening, the 5th of December, and hear a lecture from Miss B. Nugent, a missionary on furlough from India. You will not be disappointed if you come.

Election is the principal topic at present.

Havelock Man Eaten By A Bear

A gruesome tale comes from Loon Lake in Chandos to the effect that Alva Lawrence, who was trapping in that section has been apparently eaten by a bear or some other wild animal. The story has it that Lawrence's boot and part of his leg was found by some of the residents of the township and that the scene bore every evidence of the awful tragedy.

Lawrence was well known in Havelock and this section of the country.—Havelock Standard.

St. Andrew's Day At St. John's Church

To-day is St. Andrew's Day (St. Andrew is the patron saint of Scotland). The Holy Communion was celebrated at 10 a.m. in St. John's Church, the celebrant being Rev. W. H. White, of St. Luke's, who also delivered a helpful address to the members of the local branches of the Woman's Auxiliary, who made their corporate Communion at this service. The offering will be devoted to the Diocesan Women's Thankoffering Fund.

BRITISH CASUALTIES ARE HEAVY

Total For November Was 120,089 of Which 25,444 Are Dead

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Nov. 30.—British casualties reported during the month of November totalled 120,089, divided as follows: Officers killed or died of wounds, 1,152, men 24,292; officers wounded or missing 3,537, men 91,108.

Red Cross Wins Wager

Quite an interesting discussion took place at a small gathering of ladies at the home of a mutual friend on Rubidge street. They were engaged in Red Cross work, and the hours went pleasantly, enlivened by many topics of conversation. Their work engrossed most of the time, but a bevy of ladies could hardly be expected to spend an afternoon together without discussing the most important subject of dress. Speaking of styles and what they had been able to procure for themselves, naturally led into a comparison of values. Each one, of course, was proud of the result of her own shopping, and the friendly rivalry finally led to a wager being made as to who had secured the best value in a new winter coat this season. A general vote showed that of the seven ladies, four had been equally fortunate, and it was decided to leave the judgment to an uninterested party.

It had not been said up to that time where the coats had been bought, but it developed that in spite of the fact that four of those who were conceded to have the best and nearly equally good value had bought in one store, at H. J. Zacks, all four were of a different material and style. When the wager is decided, the winner is to hand over the proceeds to the Red Cross Fund, each of the four contestants being considered well enough satisfied with the extra good value she got in her coat, without any additional prize.

During the nine years, up to the ninth anniversary sale which is now going on, this has been the kind of satisfaction H. J. Zacks' customers have found. At this sale Mr. Zacks claims to have outdone all records in offering a stock which is not cheap or damaged, but goods of the highest grade fully up to the reputation of the store, at lower prices than ever.

THE VETERANS WILL PARADE

All returned soldiers are asked to parade in uniform at 7.15 o'clock this evening at the Barrie Building to act as a guard of honour for Sir Robert Borden. There will be seats on the platform for the Veterans.

Mrs. Iuspliced writes again to Mama

My Darling Mama,— It seems such ages since I saw you. But I am writing to tell you that I am coming to pay you a short visit next week, and I am sure you will be surprised to see little Phonsy has grown. I'm sure he has a tooth coming, because he bites his finger so, and he is beginning to talk already, both Alphonse and I heard him say "dada" quite plainly.

You were asking me in your last letter if my grocery man is still there; well you can bet he is, and he is still ahead of them all. We've been having such fun, because the City Council started a fish trust, saying it was in the people's interest that only three men should be allowed to sell government fish, and of course the people knew it was only a case of trying to put something on them again. So when my grocery man started in to give them a square deal, why everybody goes to him for their fish. And then you know those hams he was specializing? Well he sold so many that some of the others thought they must try, but they couldn't touch him for quality or price, and then he has now got an entirely new line, which is better value; that is small bacon rolls, no bone and no skin, and he sells them at 35c. a lb. for the smoked and 31c. a lb. for the pickled, so as you will see he's still ahead, and I am going to bring you some of the special home-made candies he has just started selling. There is some maple cream that is delicious and it's only 28c. a lb., and some peanut butter and—— but I won't tell you any more now; wait till I give you a taste. I'm afraid you will think my letter is all about him, and we are teaching little Phonsy to say go to A. W. Paskins, Cor. Hunter and Aylmer. 'Phone 317, and he will soon be able to say it all because already he says, "Go, Go." Well now dearest mama, I must close will love from Alphonse, Phonsy, and your happy daughter—

FORMAL WARNING SENT TO RUSSIA BY THE ALLIES

Remind Authorities That Violation of the Treaty of August 23rd, 1914, May Cause Very Serious Consequences.

COALITION GOVERNMENT

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 30.—All the Allied military officials except the American, have served formal warning on Russia's Bolsheviki authorities that in attempting a peace with Germany Russia is ruthlessly casting aside solemn treaty obligations. According to reliable information here the notice was in the form of a joint note and specifically announced that the protest was made "in conformity with precise instructions received from authorized representatives." The note was delivered to the Bolsheviki commander.

The widest speculation was aroused here over the news that no Americans signed the note. The Allied message announced "a protest in the most energetic manner against Russia's violation of the conditions of the treaty of August 23rd, 1914, in which all the Allies, including Russia, solemnly agreed not to conclude a peace separately." The message concluded with the admonition that "the signatories consider it their duty to warn Russia that violations of this pledge may cause very serious consequences." The omission of American signatures to the note reported above may be very significant of the policy of the United States towards Russia. If President Wilson follows to that nation, the policy he adopted toward Mexico, it will mean that the United States will not interfere with the working out of the people's national aspirations, provided America is not affected in that process of evolution.

A COALITION GOVERNMENT.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 30.—A coalition government, consisting of the Bolsheviki, Minimalists, Internationalists, the Left Parties and the Social Revolutionaries was in process of formation to-day. The new government will consist of a ministry representing all these political factions, which will be responsible to a parliament composed of 108 members of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Soviet, an equal number of representatives of the Peasants' Congress, 100 delegates from the Army and sixty from the Trades Unions.

Death Of A Member Of The G.W.V.A.

Sergt. J. H. Watson Former Member of the 93rd Battalion, Died This Morning

Sergt. Joseph Harry Watson, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, passed away this morning, at his home, 250 McDonnel street, after an illness of short duration from pleuro-pneumonia. The news of his death will be a shock to a large circle of friends, as Sergt. Watson was well and favourably known in this city.

The late Joseph Harry Watson had been a resident of Peterborough for about twelve years and was a painter by trade. He was among the first to enlist in the 93rd Battalion, and during the early months of the Peterborough County unit he acted as Recruiting Sergeant, and was in charge of the recruiting office. Later he was appointed Provost Sergeant of the Battalion, and went overseas with the 93rd. He was invalided home last winter and has been undergoing treatment at the Convalescent Hospital, Kingston.

PROVOST SERGT. J. H. WATSON,

He was a member of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association. He is survived by his wife, four sons, G. Harry, Ernest W., a former member of the 93rd Battalion, Cecil and Stanley, and two daughters, Beatrice and Mabel, residing at home.

The bereaved family will have the sympathy of the community.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

ment for the producing of food for the necessaries of life require by the armies overseas and their dependants at home. Mr. Gordon suggested that as the meeting was called at Mr. Burnham's suggestion for the purpose of preparing a resolution addressed to the Prime Minister, that it should be prepared in their own way, stating the true facts plainly and frankly without any exaggeration and addressed to the Prime Minister in a respectful way, so that he would know the true situation, and if in his opinion it needed any change that he could recommend it at the next Parliament if he were in a position to do so.

THE FOOD PROFITEERS.

Mr. Goddon handed out some red-hot criticisms to the food profiteers and war profiteers, saying that the millions of pounds of butter and the millions of dozens of eggs which were held up in the cold storage concerns of the William Davies Company, Flavelle's Limited, and the other big concerns in Toronto, Hamilton and Montreal should be conscripted and sold at a fair margin above cost to the working people and to the wives and dependents of the soldiers, and that the war profiteer should be kicked out of his place and all food producing concerns should be nationalized and run under Government control. Mr. Gordon also addressed the meeting on the Conscription Act, taking up in detail the operation of it and the rights of exemption that the Act was intended to allow to those in food producing occupations in the national interest. Mr. Gordon said that some of the Tribunals certainly did not appreciate, as they had in England, the necessity of keeping men in food producing occupations.

Mr. Gordon concluded his address by urging the farmers of the wealthy Township of Smith to participate freely in the War Loan, because if they did need the money at any time, they could borrow on the War Bonds from any Bank to ninety per cent, and in that way those who were not able to fight the battles of the Empire, were able to asist in the fighting with a silver bullet.

TRIBUNAL MEMBER SPEAKS.

Ex-Reeve Garbutt, one of the judges of the Smith Tribunal, expressed himself as extremely well pleased with the addresses that were given, and made a neat speech, himself, explaining the serious position of the labour shortage in the Township.

A resolution was moved by John McConkey, and seconded by J. J. Northey, two of the best known farmers in the Township of Smith, addressed to Sir Robert Borden, drawing his attention to the serious shortage of labour and the loss that would be caused to the Township and to the City of Peterborough, unless something was done to conscript labour and to assist the farmers of this County in producing more food for the people.

Mr. John Telford, on the invitation of the Chairman, gave a short address also, as did the Rev. Mr. McKee, the resident clergyman, and also Mr. George Nicholls, Deputy Reeve of the Township.

The meeting was one of the best and biggest that was ever held in the township of Smith, and was of a non-political character entirely.

The meeting closed by a short address from Reeve McKee, and the singing of God Save the King.

New Battle Breaks Out

Germans Make Heavy Attack Against British Salient

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Nov. 30. — A new battle ground in the Cambrai fighting developed to-day. On the extreme southern flank near Gonnelieu, the Germans early this morning opened a violent attack. At the time this is cabled they have apparently been unable to make headway.

The enemy assault was one of the heaviest attempts to check the slowly closing jaws of Byng's vice around Cambrai that Crown Prince Rupprecht has yet delivered. It was characterized by lavish artillery preparation and barrage fire from the guns lately galloped up to the line.

Through last night the Prussians deluged Bourlon Wood and vicinity with shell fire, which continued heavily to-day.

Prisoners lately taken declare they have been practically without sleep since November 20, and their haggard appearance and utter exhaustion bears this out. German officers, they declare, are fearful that the British wedge at Bourlon will force a withdrawal south of the Scarpe. It is this apprehension which was evidently causing the shells storm to-day. Aviators reported evidence that enemy is destroying Cambrai and neighbouring towns.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Turkish troops again bombarded the Mosque, supposed to contain the tomb of the prophet Samuel, an official statement declared. The minaret of the building was destroyed.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

BERLIN, via London, November 30.—Chancellor Von Hertling's maiden speech in the Reichstag aroused national-wide hopes to-day that peace with Russia would come before Christams. German papers express gratification at the outlook. The Chancellor's speech declared his willingness for Germany to negotiate peace with Russia the moment that Government should send fully accredited envoys to Berlin authorized to act.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, November 30.—The night was calm over the whole front, the War Office reports, except in the Argonne, where artillery on both sides showed particular activity, and in the region of Chambrettes, where, after a series of violent bombardments, the enemy undertook a large raid in which he was repulsed completely.

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).
(By Lowell Mellett).

PARIS, Nov. 30.—America is insisting that the Allies adopt a more sympathetic policy toward Russia. The results of the revolution must be saved. America is not inclined to look upon Russia solely from the viewpoint of the aid her rehabilitated armies might be to the Allies. That Russia returns to the fight is a matter of extreme necessity, but the United States would not see her shackled again in the bonds of despotism to gain this end. It is vital to the Allies that Russia recover her fighting power. But the members of the American mission believe that while the Slavs are recovering their strength, the revolution must be saved by sympathetic aid to Russia. In regulating her internal affairs and saving her from German intrigue, America's sympathetic understanding of Russian conditions and ambitions of her people is the first essential in the opinion of the American delegates, it was learned to-day. Premier Lloyd George pointed out in his Paris speech how Serbia and Roumania had slipped through the hands of the Allies through the lack of sympathetic action from the Entente Powers. America is insisting that Russia not be permitted to go the same way.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Comparative quiet still prevails on the front of the British attack before Cambrai, no important operations there being reported in to-day's official statement.

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The total British casualties for November were 120,679.

The figures for recent months have been: July, 71,890 killed, wounded and missing—officers and men included; August, 66,373; September, 105,430; and October, 83,558. One fact remarked upon was that the November lists show a greater increase of casualties among the men than among the officers. The November increase presumably is not directly attributable to the losses in the recent great drive around Cambrai, since the War Office has asserted the losses were unusually small, considering the gains achieved, and were less than the number of prisoners taken, which were close to 11,000.

Pope's Answer To His Critics

Vatican Not Conducting Any Propaganda For An Unendurable Peace

ROME, Nov. 30.—The Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Gasparri, answering the numerous criticisms regarding the Vatican's peace attitude, issued to the press to-day the following statement: "The Holy Father is not preparing any new appeal looking toward peace His earnest desire, many times manifested, for a just, Christian and durable peace, is unchanged and cannot change. Who can crave anything else and call himself a Christian?

"To say that his Holiness favours or has favoured, or will favour an unjust, un-Christian and unendurable peace is not only false, but also absurd. Any propaganda for such a peace, alleged to be conducted at the Vatican's inspiration, especially in certain nations, is the product of pure maliciousness. A chain of prayers has always been reprobated by the Holy See, and bishops and priests in the United States and elsewhere are warned against them, particularly those having any such propaganda behind them.

"Also. American Catholics and others are cautioned that such prayers are a species of superstition.

"The Catholic Church has always regarded true patriotism as a Christian duty and a Christian virtue, and still so teaches. The fact that the Italian Parliament has had warm eulogy for the clergy should be sufficient to refute the calumnies which irresponsible persons have circulated and are circulating in the foreign world.

"Malicious insinuations propagated in America, and the tendency to attribute in great part to the Italian clergy responsibility for the recent situation must be denounced.

"In Italy no fair-minded person is attributing the situation to the clergy.

"When the disruptive propaganda began to affect the morale of the Italian army, the clergy in general and also the army chaplains, following the instructions and example of the chaplain-in-chief, laboured to counteract it and elevate the morale of the troops. More than once the army chaplains informed the chaplain-in-chief, who informed the supreme civil authorities of the disruptive movement that was creeping in, and all that long before the publication of the Papal note."

CATCHY MUSIC

"The Princess Pat" Bubbles Over With Smart Numbers

What may be truthfully called one of the most important theatrical events of the season here is the management of the Henry Blossom-Victor Herbert musical comedy triumph, "The Princess Pat," at The Grand next Wednesday, 5th December.

It comes here with the unanimous endorsement of the metropolitan papers. Many have been the successes of the Messrs. Blossom and Herbert but for this, their latest, the prediction is freely made that its life will be longer and its popularity greater than that enjoyed by any other earlier work of the brainy combination, and this includes "Mdle. Modiste," "The Red Mill," and "The Prima Donna," each one of which was immensely prosperous. Of the book and lyrics written by Mr. Blossom for 'The Princess Pat," it is said that they excel all his previous efforts, and this is saying a great deal when one considers his many highly meritorious works. Mr. Herbert, than whom there is no more popular composer, has contributed to this play no less than a full twenty numbers, every one of which ties with the other for first honours. The titles of some of these are: "Love is Best of All," "Make Him Guess," "I'd Like to be a Quitter, but I Find it Hard to Quit," "Allies," "When a Girl's About to Marry," "For Better or For Worse," "Flirting," "In a Little World for Two," "The Shoes of Husband Number One as Worn by Number Two," "All For You," "Neapolitan Love Song" and "Two Laughing Irish Eyes."

An exceptional cast of principals includes Annette Ford, Genevieve Reinhard, Andrew Bixby, and George Williams, Vernard, Peggy Johnson, Will. H. Sloan, Neil Moore, Charles Coughlen, Overton Moyle, Augustus Buell, Jno.

Archbishop Spratt's Reply

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 30. — "I stand here to deny every charge that has been brought against me, fully conscious of the responsibility of such declaration." This was the statement of Archbishop Spratt, this morning, in regard to the Sister Mary Basil case, in which he and other Roman Catholic defendants were assessed $20,000 by a jury here recently. To-day was the occasion of the sixth anniversary of his consecration, and the clergy of his diocese assembled to express their confidence in the Archbishop. St. Mary's Cathedral was filled with people to hear his statement and expressed loyalty and love. His Grace said he had for five years endeavoured honestly to settle the difficulties of Sister Mary Basil, using all his faculties to accomplish this, but had failed.

ARRESTED FOR TREASON

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BRANTFORD, Ont., Nov. 30.—E. L. Hanselman, graduate of the Advanced School of Chropratics in Chicago, who has been practicing here in the daytime and working at munitions at night, has been placed under arrest on a charge of treason.

Hanselman was employed by a local firm a year ago, then moved to Chicago and recently returned here and has lately been employed by another shell-making concern. He will appear here Monday on a serious charge. The accused was born in Canada of German parentage.

Germans Use The Lansdowne Peace Letter

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 30. — German newspapers to-day gave a prominent front page display to the Marquis of Lansdowne's letter urging a peace before a break down, giving that statement as a semi-official feeler.

Editorials generally expreseed satisfaction at the letter.

SIR WILFRID AT ARNPRIOR

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier will speak at Arnprior in the County of South Renfrew on Monday evening next. The Liberal candidate there is J. D. Pellow. No other Ontario meetings have yet been arranged for.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 30.—"I am going to Winnipeg on Friday next," declared Sir Wilfrid Laurier to-day in reply to an inquiry as to whether he might cancel his trip to the west on account of alleged opposition in Winnipeg to his coming.

Curling Club News

A meeting of the Committee of Management was held at the rink on Monday evening, and arrangements made to open the rink on Monday next.

Mr. Angus McIntosh will again be on hand to see that the ice is the best ever and he will extent the glad hand to all newcomers.

Mr. Chas. R. Banks has already vacated that part of the rink occupied by him during the summer months, so that everything is now ready to make ice as soon as the weather permits.

The members are reminded that the fees are payable on December first.

OLIVET TO CALVARY

Last night was the eve of the Apostle and Martyr Saint Andrew, and at 8.15 the choristers of St. John's began a programme, consisting of Maunder's "Olivet to Calvary," and several numbers of Haydn's "Creation." The former is a devotional work, containing several dramatic numbers, indeed the sad events of Holy Week are realistically presented from the "Hosanna" of Palm Sunday to the "Death on the Cross," the hymn, "Rock of Ages" very softly sung, being used as the finale.

Last night's presentation was uniformly good. The second part of the programme consisted of five numbers from Haydn's "Creation," a choral standard work of extraordinary difficulty. St. John's is an extraordinary choir, witness the little boys of nine years of age who led the procession of choristers into the chancel and sang apparently every chorus in the first part, answering to the baton of the conductor as admirably as did their seniors. The youngest lady in the choir, Muriel Bridge, aged 15, played an organ solo, "Prelude and Fugue" (Bach), with pedal obligato, and played it finely.

Mr. Cyril Devey, a young musician, trained at St. John's, showed marked ability in playing the score of "Olivet to Calvary." The real test of the choir as a choral body came in their two "Creation" numbers, "The Marvellous Work," and "The Lord is Great," and right nobly did the singers rise to the occasion, producing all the choral effects the lovely music calls forth. The unaccompanied double quartette in "Olivet to Calvary" was finely sung by Mrs. Devey, Miss Quartermaine, Mrs. Evans, Miss Lancaster, Mr. Marshall, Mr. C. Devey, Mr. Flowers and Mr. G. Coleman. Mrs. Amys sang splendidly in two solo numbers. "Another Temple" and "Droop, Sacred Head."

In the tenor and bass solo work Mr. Hutchinson and Mr. Ward excelled themselves, especially in "O Was There Ever," and "A New Commandment." In combination with Mrs. Perks, these gentlemen gave a splendid rendering of the trio, "Most Beautiful Appear." Mr. Ward also sang one of the most famous bass solos in oratorio, "Rolling in Foaming Billows," preceded by the recit, "And God Said." His fine voice gave a splendid rendering. Another famous solo, "In Verdure Clad" was beautifully sung by Mrs. W. G. Perks, who also delighted everybody with the soprano obligato which at high range runs through the chorus, "The Marvellous Work." Mrs. Perks appeared some years ago in an operatic production under Mr. Devey's direction, singing the soprano part of "Yum Yum" in the "Mikado."

Mr. R. J. Devey, the veteran organist and choirmaster, conducted with the skill and precision, now so thoroughly associated with the many musical works presented in Peterborough under his able direction. Hearty congratulations to him and the magnificent voluntary choir of St. John's, a finely constituted body of singers, equally successful in singing the glorious liturgical services of the Anglican church, or the grand Bible subjects in oratorio.

The Rev. Mr. Robbins of Young's Point, conducted the devotions and pronounced the Benediction. An offertory was taken up for the Choir Fund.

The programme was as follows:

Part 1.

Organ Solo—Prelude and Fugue ... Bach
Miss Muriel Bridge.

"Olivet to Calgary" (Maunder)

Part 1—
On the Way to Jerusalem.
Before Jerusalem.
In the Temple.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Mr. Burnham should explain to-night why he got one of the discharged employees of the Auburn Woollen Mills to help him try to injure and ruin the reputation of the Auburn Woollen Mills for its manufacturing soldiers' uniforms. The Judge who investigated the case exonerated Mr. Kendry, but this did not stop Mr. Burnham trying to close down the plant and put a large number of employees out of work.
—Yours truly, Weaver.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—After the defeat of the Russians by the Japanese some years ago the Russian Government voted immense sums of money to equip their large armies and also build a navy. A great deal of this money found its way into the pockets of the Tsar and his autocratic grafters, with the result that the armies were inadequately equipped, as later events proved, and the navy was almost a negligible quantity.

What has happened in Canada during the past three years? Millionaires have sprung up like mushrooms, as it were, in a night. Our soldier boys who so gallantly are fighting our battles in France and Flanders, receive the handsome remuneration of $1.10 per day, whilst aliens from enemy countries can stay at home and take the job of the man at the Front, and make all the way from $4 to $10 per day in munition factories.

The cost of living since the war began has more than doubled. The dependents of our brave boys have to struggle along on a pittance, whilst the profiteers, grafters, and wardheelers are piling up fortunes beyond the dreams of avarice.

The incoming Liberal Government must make this horde of profiteers disgorge, and deal much more liberally with the boys at the Front, and also with those at home dependent upon them. Thanking you for your space.—Yours truly, Elector.

Peterborough, Nov. 30, 1917.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—A few days ago I noticed the photograph of Manley Chew in your issue, in which you said, failing a fusion candidate, had become the Liberal nominee for East Simcoe. Now, I wish to say, as an elector of East Simcoe, that there was no failing in the fusion candidate for East Simcoe, as Mr. J. B. Tudhope, a leading Liberal, is the Unionist candidate for East Simcoe.

Now, to show just where the leading Liberal press in East Simcoe stands, that is the Orillia Times, allow me to make expressio[n] to two of its editorials. The first [ ] The Unionist candidate in Ea[st] Simcoe is James B. Tudhope, [ ]k for him and vote for him. [ ]second is:

The Unionist proposes that Canada shall live up to its high ideal.

It is regrettable that as much cannot be said of those supporting Sir Wilfrid Laurier. I have noticed a lot of bamboo talk through the Peterborough papers of late with anonymous signatures. Now, in the time when the people need most education I think every correspondent should have the bona fide signature of the writer But as it is, "Soldier's Wife" might be Tom, Dick or Harry, and may be R. R. Hall or J. H. Burnham for what we know; and all assumed names are in the same box.

We must congratulate Jos. Wearing and J. W. Worth for the frankness they have shown; they have always attached their names to their correspondence. Thanking you.—I remain, W. H. Merrill.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In the hope that this may be brought to his attention, I would like to ask Sir Robert Borden if he would be kind enough to answer the following questions:

1. Who are the financiers of Canada who will cut the melon of the C. N. R. stock, which was declared of no value by the Drayton—Ackworth report and for which the Government intends to pay $60,000,000?

2. Why was the C. N. R. Purchase Bill jammed through Parliament by the use of the gag, with $60,000,000 at stake, when a Bill of such urgency as the Military Service Act was allowed to take up two months of Parliament's time with recruiting dead throughout the Dominion?

3. Why were the thousands of devoted women in Canada, who have toiled day after day at Red Cross work denied the right to vote at this election? Have they not done the required service?

4. How much the preparation and registration for National Service cost the country and what good has been derived from it?

5. Do you propose to see to it that Quebec men are conscripted in proportion to the men who have gone from Ontario since the war commenced? Is it true that the tribunals in Quebec were handpicked for the purpose of allowing wholesale exemption?

6. Does Gen. Mewburn speak with authority when he states that all farmers and their sons are to remain at home while men from towns and cities fight and die?

7. Why is it that the Union Government is composed almost wholly of men who represent the Big Interests?

8. Is it a fact that Sir Joseph Flavelle has made such large contributions to campaign funds that his position is secure in spite of public opinion?

9. Is the rumour correct that Sir Sam Hughes was a poor man when he entered your Cabinet?

10. If you were sincere in your efforts towards union why did you fill every possible position with Conservatives in the closing days of the last Parliament?

11. Who put Hon. Wm. Pugsley to sleep by making him the offer of the Lieut.-Governorship?

12. If you wanted unity in this riding why did you not instil that principle into Mr. Burnham?

Space forbids many other questions which are being asked at this election.

Yours truly,
INQUIRER.

$3 Hat Costs $70

DETROIT, Mich. — It costs more than $70 a year to have a $3 hat checked, providing the owner is one of those unfortunates who must eat two meals a day in a dining place where the hat checking trust has established one of its lairs. This also assumes that the hat owner on each occasion hands the representative of the trust the conventional fee of 10 cents.

A writer in a current magazine wonders why we stand the robbery. The answer is easy. We stand it because we are to cowardly to protest. Each of us is afraid he will be called mean and stingy if we do not give money that has not been earned.

Most of us are under no delusions that we really are giving the pleasant young woman or the affable young man in charge of the hat rack a contribution. We know all about the checking trust and know that the servitor on the job gets only a fraction of our largess, while the remainder goes to enrich the mysterious persons higher up who control the checking privilege.

It is nothing but cowardice—the fear of the opinion of persons whose good or bad opinion is of no moment — which makes the series of small extortions possible.

Soldier Miner Becomes Assayer

Young Veteran Maimed in France Realizes Cherished Ambition

"Pie Jensing—assaying."

On the rolls of the vocational training classes of the Military Hospitals Commission in the Central Technical School in Toronto, where many returned soldiers are receiving industrial re-education, it is more a record, but to Jensen it is a life's ambition realized, and having lost a leg in France is a negligible misfortune. He is one of the happiest men in Toronto.

The young Scandinavian, from his earliest days had a hard time of it. Things didn't come his way without vigorous pulling, but ambition flourished even in depths of the earth, and Jensen's long days in the mines at Cobalt were spent in dreaming of the day when he should hang out a shingle inscribed "Assayer."

When war was declared, however, he scrapped his dreams and enlisted with the 63rd Battalion, where he fought until June 1916. Then he was wounded and taken back to England with a leg missing and his shoulder and right arm badly shattered. Jensen's mining days were over.

When he was returned to this country he was sent to the Orthopedic Hospital to be cared for until the Commission fitted him an artificial limb, and training which would prepare him to earn a livelihood.

The vocational officers, seeking to find an occupation related to his former work, asked him what he thought of assaying. Jensen lost no time in telling them that he had been thinking about it as long as he could remember, and the course was started.

He works not only as long as they will let him in the day time now, but attends night school twice a week, and in a few weeks he will return to the Cobalt a qualified assayer.

A GIRL PAYING TELLER IN BANK OF MONTREAL

Miss Henrietta Lee, Whose Parents Reside in St. Thomas, Enters Bank as Stenographer and Is Now Paying Teller—Tells Why She Prefers Banking to Teaching School.

(BY MINNIE CAGE.)

WINDSOR.—When the banks of this city began employing young women to take the places of the young men who had enlisted, many persons deplored the necessity and scornfully predicted a lowering of efficiency. But the girls have "made good," and even those who were the most pessimistic have been compelled to acknowledge that the service has improved. Still, many wagged their heads and declared that while girls might do very well in minor positions they had no "future" in banking, as they hadn't the ability to fill the higher positions.

Others remarked, "Give the girls time. They are new at the business."

Already, in less than three years since the innovation, Windsor can boast at least one young woman who is holding a responsible position in a bank, Miss Henrietta Lea, paying teller of the Bank of Montreal. She received her last promotion two weeks ago and great success is predicted for her.

Started as Stenographer.

Miss Lea entered the bank two years ago last June as stenographer. Soon afterwards she was put on the ledger and her rise has been rapid. She likes the work and is optimistic regarding the opportunities that banking offers to girls with good education.

Her ambition, at one time, was to be a school teacher, she said, but she is glad that she changed her mind, as she believes banking offers far better opportunities to young women than the teaching profession.

"From a financial standpoint," she said, "banking is away ahead of teaching. There is a limit to the amount of money a teacher can make and the limit is soon reached, while in banking one can go on and on increasing one's earning ability. The girls start in the banks at much higher salaries than were paid to the boys. For one thing, the boys entered the banks at fifteen or sixteen, before completing their high school course, while the girls who are entering have at least finished high school and they have a better foundation to build on."

Every Day Complete.

"Every day is complete in the banking business. There is nothing hanging over from one day to another. One can go home care-free, while in teaching there is always the strain of having to 'pass' a certain percentage of pupils in order to hold one's position. Although teachers are supposed to have easy hours compared with banking hours, they always have papers to read, subjects to prepare and examinations to get up, whereas girls working in a bank can go home at night and forget about their work until the next day."

Miss Lea had considerable experience in other lines of business and is thus qualified to make comparisons. She prefers banking to any other line.

"The surroundings are always so clean and pleasant, and one always has the best of people to work for," she said. "It has been my experience that bank managers are more considerate and courteous to the girls whom they employ than are business men in other lines."

"Another feature of my work that appeals to me," continued Miss Lea, "is meeting the public. If one is a stenographer, for instance, she comes in contact with one's employer and office associates only, whereas the position of teller gives one a superior opportunity of learning human nature. It is very fascinating to me."

M. H. C. SEEKS EARLY VETERANS OF THE WAR

Will Offer Industrial Re-education to Men Who Returned Before Courses Were Available

Every returned soldier who received his discharge before the present machinery of the Military Hospitals Commission for vocational training had reached its present stage of development, is being notified by the Commission that he is eligible for industrial education at the expense of the Government, if his wounds were of such a nature as to prevent him from returning to his old occupation.

Many men who suffered such injuries took what work offered when they returned to civilian life. Their old jobs were out of the question, but the shortage of labour made employment easy to secure. This, however, will not be the case when the close competition after the war sets in and it is the aim of the Commission to see that every man has skill in some occupation which will secure him a living.

SOME HAVE ASKED

To give them the benefit of the vocational courses which the Commission now offers, every effort is being made to get in touch with such men. In some instances they have come to the unit headquarters and asked for courses in new occupations, but most of the men do not know that such courses are available to them.

There have been cases in which neither the man nor the officers at first considered the injuries of such a nature as to prevent him returning to his old occupation but after a short trial it developed that the man was no longer fit. For instance, a bricklayer returned to Montreal minus a thumb and finger on his left hand. He regarded the injury as very minor and no hindrance, but experience showed that he could not lay bricks with sufficient speed to prove efficient.

This man is being given a course in structural work which will make him a capable foreman to direct the work of other bricklayers.

"To find employment for returned men is not enough," declared Mr. T. B. Kidner, secretary of vocational training for the M.H.C. "They must be trained to positions which will be permanent and the importance of looking to the future is to be urged upon every man who returns to Canada. For this reason we are anxious to get in touch with every man."

Lansdowne Is New Addition To Bolsheviki

Professor MacNaughton, of McGill, Speaks Plainly Before St. Andrew's Society of Peer Who Turned Pacifist —Want the Earth

"Lord Lansdowne has joined the Bolsheviki," declared Professor MacNaughton, of Mc Gill University, before the St. Andrew's Society at their luncheon in the Queen's Hotel yesterday afternoon.

"What makes it worse," continued the Professor in arraigning the peer who has turned pacifist, "is that he should have once been our Governor-General."

"This is the saddest thing in the whole war," thundered the speaker, and when he referred to Lord Lansdowne as a man of "faint heart and feeble backbone," the members vigorously applauded.

Want Earth, Moon and Stars.

"There is a peace party in Germany," continued Professor MacNaughton, "and Lord Lanedowne is encouraging it." He then declared with emphasis that the Germans wanted the earth, the moon, and the stars.

"I won't be content till we kick the Hohenzollern out. He must go," he said, adding, "and I am sorry we can't send the race where it belongs."

Referring again to Lord Lansdowne, Professor MacNaughton labelled his article to the press, which he threw to the floor, as "weakening stuff."

"They will sweep him in Britain," he stated, "in to the rubbish heap, where he belongs with the other refuse." Prolonged applause again greeted the speaker when he referred to the Kaiser as "the great brute," under whose heel Belgium and Serbia and other small nations were being crushed.

Scotland's Splendid Record.

The Professor paid a tribute to General Byng in giving the Germans such a good crack. "Byng is the first man," he said, "to catch Fritz in a bending position." This brought forth a round of laughter.

The speaker then stated: "Scotland in this war has done beyond her measure. It is almost incredible, when you think that one out of every five of the population of Scotland is doing something in this war."

Mr. Herbert Mowat, K.C., Unionist candidate for Parkdale, was chairman, and seated at the head table were Sir John Hendrie, Major-General Logie, Archbishop MacNeill, Justice [illegible] and Rev. A. Logan [illegible].

CATTLE MARKET

The cattle trade has developed a good strong undertone, with a tendency to higher prices for anything in the line of good to choice stable finished butcher steers and heifers. The week's offerings were again overloaded with too many rough half-fat cattle, fresh off the grass, and showing the results of keeping cattle outdoors too long during he cold weather, and shipping them straight to market before giving them a warm-up in the stable. A good many of these cattle should have been shipped in a month ago, since which time they have deteriorated rather than improved for killing. In spite however, of the inferior quality of a large part of the week's offerings, the demand for cattle has been good and active, and prices have been well sustained, while for the well-finished stable cattle there has been a good advance of 25c to 40c. Canners also have been in better demand at 15c to 25c higher than last week. Choice fat cows and butcher bulls have held very strong at higher prices. Deliveries of Christmas fat cattle are expected during next week.

The demand for stockers and feeders of good quality has continued good and steady, with no material change in prices. Common light stockers are not much in request.

Choice milch cows and forward springers continue in good demand.

Choice veal calves have held good and strong at steady prices.

With fairly heavy receipts of hogs the packers succeeded in taking from 25c to 50c off the earlier prices, though a large number of hogs were delivered at the early contract prices, in some cases 25c higher than the market quotations for the free hogs. The market closed practically at $17.75.

Cattle Receipts.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

"Not a thing. How about the photograph we were going to trace?"

Mr. Baker frowned.

It's a curious thing," he replied. "Most curious. The picture in question was, I find, taken from the files by Mr. Moore, our president, and placed on his desk. He always admired it, and kept it there, along with a number of others, to show to persons calling upon him. Now, it seems, it has disappeared. There's not the slightest trace of it."

"But," Duvall objected, "who could have taken it?"

"A dozen people. Half a hundred, I guess. You see, Mr. Moore's office is a big room, just beyond here." He rose and led the detective through a short corridor. "Here it is," he went on, throwing open the door. "This is where Mr. Moore receives his callers. It is his reception room, and no private papers are kept here. They are all in the smaller office adjoining. This room is open at any time. After Mr. Moore leaves in the evening, and he often leaves early, anyone might come in here. And when the offices are closed at night I suppose any employee of the company might look in if he cared to do so, without anyone objecting. You see this is a sort of public room. The inner office is always kept locked but there has never seemed to be any good reason for locking this one."

"Still, although you cannot tell who has taken the picture it seems clear enough that it must have been removed by some one employed in the studio."

"Even that is by no means certain. So many people come here every day. All sorts of visitors, writers, actors and the like. After business hours I don't doubt any number of persons enter this room to look at the pictures of our great successes that hang on its wall. And then there are the caretakers, the scrub women and their friends. I find that they, many of them, bring in outsiders after working hours, to look at the studio, and the famous offices. Of course it should not be, and it will not be, in the future, but up to now we have rather welcomed people from outside. It seemed good advertising."

Duvall followed his companion back to his office.

"Then this clue, like all the others in this singular case," he remarked, "seems to end in a blind alley."

"It seems so," assented Mr. Baker gloomily.

"What was your plan about the new film we're going to show tonight?"

Duvall was about to speak but before he could do so they heard a slight commotion in the hall outside. Then someone rapped violently on the door.

Both he and Baker sprang to their feet.

"Come in," the latter cried.

The door was flung open and Mr. Edwards, the director, who was making the picture upon which Ruth Morton was working, strode hastily into the room.

"Mr. Baker!" he exclaimed, then paused upon seeing Duvall.

"What is it?" Baker replied.

"Will you look here a minute, — please?"

Baker went up to him, his face showing the greatest uneasiness.

"What's the matter?" he asked, anything wrong?"

"Yes. Miss Morton was going through the scene in the first part, where she gets the telegram, you know, and when she opened the message, and read it, she fainted."

"Fainted? What was in the telegram to make her faint?"

"Well it ought to have read, 'Will call for you to-night with marriage license—Jimmy.' That was the prop message we had prepared. But somebody must have substituted another for it. This is what she read." He handed Baker a yellow slip of paper. "I can't make anything out of it."

Baker snatched the telegram from his hand with a growl of rage, and read it hastily. Then he passed it over to Duvall.

"What do you think of that?" he asked.

Duvall gazed at the telegram with a feeling of helpless anger.

"Twenty six days more," it read. "When you appear in your new picture at the Grand to-night it will be your last. I shall be there." The grinning death's head seal was appended in lieu of a signature, as before.

A feeling of resentment swept over the detective. It seemed that these pople acted as they saw fit, with supreme indifference to the fact that he was on their trail. Never before had he felt his skill so flouted, his ability made so light of. And yet, as usual, the message had apparently been delivered in such a way as to make tracing it impossible.

"Still at it, it seems," Mr. Baker remarked. "This thing has got to stop, and at once. I don't propose to let anybody make a monkey of me."

Duvall turned to the director, Mr. Edwards.

"Who prepared the original telegram?" he asked quickly.

Mr. Edwards looked at the detective in surprise, evidently wondering what this stranger had to do with the matter.

"Answer, Edwards. It's all right," snapped Mr. Baker.

"I prepared the property telegram," the director answered.

"When?"

"Last night. I knew it would be needed to-day."

"What did you do with it?"

"I left it on my desk. This morning I took it into the studio, and when the moment arrived I gave it to the actor who took it to Miss Morton."

"Was he out of your sight after you gave him the telegram?"

"No. He took it and walked right on the scene."

"Then he could not have substituted another for it?"

"No. It would have been impossible, unless he used sleight of hand."

"Before you gave the man the telegram, where was it?"

"In my coat pocket."

"No chance, I suppose, of anyone having taken it out and substituting another."

"Then it is clear that the substitution must have been effected between the time you left your office last night and your arrival here this morning."

"Yes."

"Was this possible?"

"Undoubtedly. I left my office last night about six. It is never locked. The caretakers, the women who clean the offices, were in there later, and from seven to nine this morning, it would also have been a simple matter for anyone to enter and make the change."

Duvall turned to Mr. Baker.

"It's the same story," he said. "Someone who works in this building is responsible for this thing, or else is able to bribe one or more of your employees to act for them. But we won't get very far looking for the guilty person, with several hundred people to watch and no clues whatever to go on. Suppose we go back to your office, and I will tell you what I had in mind about this evening."

"Is Miss Morton able to go on with the scene?" Baker asked, as Edwards started away.

"No. She seems all broken up. I don't think she is very well. Her mother is going to take her home, as soon as she feels better."

"Will you ask Mrs. Morton to wait a little while, Mr. Edwards? Tell her that Mr. Duvall will join her presently, and go back to the city with her."

Mr. Edwards nodded, and withdrew, and Duvall and Mr. Baker retired to the latter's private office.

"What did you have in mind about that new film we're going to release to-night?" Mr. Baker asked.

"I'll explain that presently. First, tell me how long it will take you to make a short section of film, say enough to show for about ten seconds?"

"I'll explain that presently. But you could make such a section of film, develop and print it, and insert it in the picture you are going to show to-night, if you had to, couldn't you?"

"Yes—if we had to. But what's the idea?"

Duvall took a bit of paper from his pocket and handed it to Baker.

"I want you to make a picture of this, and have it inserted in the film, at any convenient point—say, at the beginning of the second part. And you had better have the cutting and pasting-in done by some trusted person under your personal supervision."

"But," said Baker, gazing in amazement at the bit of paper Duvall had handed him. "What's the idea of putting this in the picture? It would not do at all."

"Look at that telegram, Mr. Edwards just gave you. The writer says in it, 'I shall be there.' Now if the person who is causing all the trouble is going to be in the audience at the Grand Theatre to-night, it is our business to find her. I say her, because I am convinced that the guilty person is a woman."

A look of comprehension began to dawn upon Mr. Baker's face.

"By George!" he exclaimed. "You figure out that this will cause her to disclose herself—make some sign?"

"I feel certain of it."

"Then we will put it in."

He laid the square of paper on his desk. "I will have the section of film made privately, and at once. I shall not tell even the other officers of the company about it. I suppose they will give me the devil, until after they know the reasons for it, but then of course, it will be all right."

Duvall rose and held out his hand. "You will be there to-night of course?"

"Of course. And you?"

"Oh, I'll be on hand all right, although you may not recognize me. Good day." With a quick handshake he left the room, and went to look for Ruth and her mother.

He found them in the girl's dressing room, ready to depart. Ruth was pale and terrified, showing the most intense nervousness in every word and movement. Mrs. Morton, scarcely less affected, strove with all her power to remain calm, in order that her daughter might not break down completely. Duvall did his best to cheer them up.

"You must not let this thing prey on your mind, Miss Morton," he said. "We are going to put a stop to it, and that very soon."

"I hope so," Mr. Duvall," the girl replied. "If you don't, I'm afraid I shall break down completely."

"I think we had better go home at once," Mrs. Morton said. "Ruth is in no condition to do any more work today."

WANT PEOPLE TO EAT 54,000,000 EGGS

To Reduce Surplus Stocks in Storage—Great Advertising Campaign Planned

VANCOUVER, Nov. 30.— The Province has the following:

"Local wholesale dealers carrying stocks of storage eggs have received a telegram from an official of the Food Controller's office requesting their co-operation in supplying a fund to start an advertising campaign throughout Canada to induce domestic consumers to buy the surplus stock of storage eggs which were purchased largely by eastern firms for export to Great Britain.

"These eggs cannot now be shipped out on account of lack of tonnage. The telegram says the non-exportables amount to 150,000 cases, which equals 4,500,000 dozen or 54,000,000 eggs. It appears from the communication that eastern houses have tentatively agreed to put up $10,000 for this fund on the understanding that the Food Controller's office or the Department of Agriculture will put up dollar for dollar with the egg owners.

"The telegram further states in effect that unless some such action is taken it is feared that there will be a loss to those egg owners if an attempt is made to unload the stocks on the Canadian markets. It is suggested that the greater consumption of eggs will ease the demand for other foodstuffs needed for the overseas service.

"The Vancouver dealers were asked if they would contribute to the advertising fund at the rate of five cents for every case of eggs held by them in cold storage. At an informal conference yesterday the matter was discussed by the trade here, and it was decided that no action would be taken.

"In discussing the matter, dealers stated that holdings of storage eggs in British Columbia were not enough to cause the many worry, it being generally figured that the storage market here will go to a clean-up before the 'flush' season begins in March."

The Day of The Pleat

LOOKING HEMWORD

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—"Service" is a wonderful word; it applies to things big and little, and in these stirring times it has taken on a new significance. We are all serving, in some way or other, and so in our clothes, the outward symbol of ourselves, we express our ideas of service. There has been a great deal of talk about simplicity, about lack of trimming on the new modes, and how very smart and distinctive these frocks are. Back of this feature of the mode of the moment stands the real motive, patriotism, and we can call it by any name we please so long as we follow its lead.

To Be or Not to Be—Pleated.

There is something very satisfying about the pleated dress. The long lines, uninterrupted by trimming, are becoming to old and young. The effect of narrowness is preserved without the uncomfortableness of the extremely narrow skirt. The smart frock illustrated here is of tan broadcloth, the colour of a meerschaum pipe, and the collar, unusual in size and arrangement, is of white broadcloth. Simple, yes, but absolutely charming and appropriate for any occasion when one wishes to be particularly well-dressed. The sleeves are long and tight, and the belt does not define the figure, but carries out the straight silhouette. The skirt is longer than one is accustomed to see, but this instep length is a new feature in the winter fashions.

© McCALL

The Straight Way of Pleats.

Pleats, indeed, are very fashionable this year. They are found on skirts, tunics and even coats. The box-pleat seems to be the most favoured, though the tiny knife-pleat and the wider side-pleat are being used a great deal.

Hems, Even and Uneven.

Quite a good deal of interest is being centred in the hem. It is often quite wide, nine or ten inches, and can be beaded, embroidered or braided, or left plain as the occasion demands. One of the most attractive dresses I have seen lately was a simple affair of rose Georgette crepe, with a ten-inch hem, headed by four rows of hemstitching in the same colour. There was a Gothic tower design on the waist in hemstitching, and the surplice collar and long full sleeves were picot-edged.

The uneven hem is found on some very smart frocks. Very long on one side, the skirt is either draped in the back, bustle-wise, or on one hip. The hem is then faced back with some contrasting colour, and the result is charming. Tunics, too, have these uneven hems. Some are short on both sides and longer in the front and back, others being just the other way, longer on the sides than in the front and back.

About the Neck.

Collars are being much elaborated on, and new ideas are constantly being seen. The thin collar of organdie on a costume of heavy material is much favoured. They may be very plain, the material cut double, without any trimming whatsoever, or they may have tiny pleatings of the same material, lace or net. Some are elaborately beaded and embroidered. One stunning collar-and-cuff set was of white organdie, embroidered in silver. Crepe de chene, Georgette crepe, silk and satin are used extensively. Flannel, broadcloth and pique are worn with the woollen dress. One odd set on a green jersey suit was of chamois, pinked around the edges.

Some of the big shops here in New York are showing blouses and dresses made without a collar. The neck is either rounded or cut in the straight across fashion of the Grecian tunic. Sometimes the collar on the afternoon or evening dress takes the form of a frame of tulle or satin outlining the square neck. The draped or monk collar is still popular, and of course the old favourite, the sailor collar, is with us in many forms, both large and small. Heavy tassels weigh down some of the collars in the front or back; others, standing high around the throat, fasten on one side. The jabot of lace or lace-edged and embroidered materials is used on some of the smart French waists.

The Street Costume.

For morning and to wear on the street, French worsteds, in stripes, plaids and checks, are considered very chic. It has a deep yoke, shaped cuffs and an odd arrangement of the belt. The sleeves fit smoothly into the armhole, giving the narrow shoulder which is such a feature of the present mode.

Home Health Club

(Edited by Dr. David H. Reeder, Chicago, Ill.)

DIAGNOSIS AND SURGERY: — One of the most important things in the treatment of the sick is a correct diagnosis. Locate the cause and half the battle is won. Remove the cause and Nature does the curing so all the battle is won.

For a great many years it was the fashion for doctors to "look wise and talk doubtful," give a prescription and wait for developments. Under this safety plan there were more recoveries than under the next fashion which was to at once order the sick person to the hospital for an operation. Under that system it is reported of one brilliant young graduate in medicine that after he had operated on a certain rich patient, another and older physician asked him the next day what he operated for and he answered, "$500.00." "I mean," said the older doctor "what did he have?" "$500.00" again came the reply.

I remember well the cases of two sisters who came to the Home Health Club a few years ago. Their mother, a sister and a brother, had died of Cancer and the two were suffering with lumps in the breasts. Both had been pronounced as probably Cancerous and under a careful test by the Byo-dynamic method of diagnosis, the "probable" condition was positively confirmed. I advised against surgery and recommended what was then to me a new form of treatment but looked sensible. One of the sisters acted upon my suggestion and was completely restored to good health in about three months. The other went to a hospital and had the breast removed. At the end of a year they returned together, one was apparently in perfect health while in the other a condition or action called Metastasis had occurred, the Cancer had passed from the breast to the womb. She was suffering much more than before the operation, but as she was of a strong constitution I suggested a trial of treatment like that which proved so effectual in her sister's case.

Of course, her surgeon wanted to operate and remove the womb, but once was enough, and she took the non-surgical treatment with very good results. It is doubtful if she will ever be as well as before the operation, but the last time I saw her she appeared to be in excellent health and spirits. Of course I naturally gave a great deal of credit in her case to the strict dietetic regime which I planned for her in what I call a "Home Sanitarium Treatment," which consists in living, eating, exercising, bathing and resting at home for a certain number of weeks just as you would be directed and compelled to do at a sanitarium, but without the same expense.

Surgery should be the last resort. A correct diagnosis should be the first thing sought. If in doubt about the diagnosis, clean up and clean out. Empty the entire alimenarty canal, and let it remain empty for a day or so by not eating and see that the bowels move freely until you are satisfied that there is no impaction of waste or fecal matter in any of the folds of the colon. There may be nothing more serious the matter with you than auto-toxemia, and a thorough house-cleaning may set everything to rights. In any event don't hesitate to write to the Home Health Club or consult the club books when you don't feel as you should when in perfect health.

CLUB NOTES.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if the same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with four cents postage.

Dear Doctor: I can tell you that I am now well again although I have had severe pains in the bladder up to to-day. Please do not think that I took all the medicine that the doctor gave me because I did not, but I did not like to tell him otherwise. I only took three of the powders he gave me to ease my hardest pains. I took so much medicine from so many doctors for the last 16 years that I am through with them now. I used the hot compresses over my abdomen and this relieved the pain considerably. You have done more for me during the last two months than 20 doctors have done in 16 years. I hope some day to have the pleasure of thanking you personally for having made a new person of me. I enjoyed reading your books during my last illnesses and had ample time to do so. They are very interesting and instructive. In regard to the osteopathic treatments you advised me to take, I have to inform you that it is out of the question at the present time on account of our low finances but I am very grateful for the benefit I have already received and life seems more worth living than it did before.

Mrs. C. A.

(Answer): I assure you that I thank you very much for telling me how well pleased you are with our home Sanitarium Treatment. I get many such letters from people who have been restored to good health, but the most satisfactory part of it is that the people now stay well because they know how to take care of themselves in the future. They know that they should always turn to the Home Health Club for advice and for instructions. We also find that they usually get their friends to send also and they likewise are benefitted.

For the bladder trouble you should use the Ointment. I think that you should have some of his left and you should rub it in very thoroughly and freely all over the lower part of the abdomen. It will give you relief much more quickly than any medicine that the doctor can give you, and it will not do you any harm. I shall be glad to hear from you again if anything occurs that requires attention.

Don't Avoid Corns
But Don't Keep Them

With dainty footwear, corns can hardly be avoided. But they matter little when you know the way to end them.

As soon as a corn starts, attach a Blue-jay and forget it. The corn will never pain. In two days, if it is a new corn, it will disappear. Sometimes old corns need a second application.

It is almost as simple as removing a dirt spot. Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. It fits the toe like a glove. When you remove it—in 48 hours—the whole corn is done for. Blue-jay is a scientific method. A noted chemist invented it, and a famous laboratory prepares it.

It is not mussy, it is not harsh. It centers action on the corn alone, so it doesn't lead to soreness. And it is sure. No corn can resist it. Its millions of users have no dread of corns.

For your own sake, prove it on one corn. See how easily these kill-joys can be ended.

B&B Blue-jay Corn Plasters
Stop Pain Instantly
End Corns Completely
25c Packages at Druggists

BAUER & BLACK, Limited, Makers of Surgical Dressings, Etc. Toronto, Canada

How Blue-jay Acts

A is a thin, soft pad which stops the pain by relieving the pressure.

B is the B&B wax, which gently undermines the corn. Usually it takes only 48 hours to end the corn completely.

C is rubber adhesive which sticks without wetting. It wraps around the toe and makes the plaster snug and comfortable.

Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. After that, one doesn't feel the corn. The action is gentle, and applied to the corn alone. So the corn disappears without soreness.

Startling Facts Brought Out By Strict Medical Examination

THIS great war, with all its suffering and terrors, is teaching us many lessons. As the result of strict medical examinations many are learning of defects and of derangements which they had not even suspected.

Recently a record was kept of several thousand men who were examined. The average age was 36, and 97 per cent. were found to be defective in one way or another. Most of those included in this class were unaware of any impairment of health.

35 per cent. were found to have derangements of the kidneys and 23 per cent. hardening of the arteries.

Many of these men would live for years, but life could be greatly prolonged by immediate steps to improve health, and in many cases the derangements would entirely disappear.

35 Per Cent. of Several Thousands Examined Had Kidney Trouble

The Evidence

Mr. J. F. Robson, R.R. No. 4, Komoka, Ont., writes: "I am certainly glad to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anyone suffering from kidney trouble. I suffered for a long time from kidney disease and pains in the back. I commenced using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and found that by using two pills a week the kidneys and bowels were kept in perfect order, and that I had no more pains in the back. We always keep these pills in the house for general use."

Mr. A. D. MacKinnon, Kirkwood, Inverness Co., N.S., writes: "I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to all suffering from weak kidneys. I suffered from kidney disease for a long time. I may also say that for three years I was nearly always troubled with headaches, and no treatment seemed to do more than afford temporary relief. I was finally told of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and after using a few boxes was completely cured. I have also used Dr. Chase's Ointment, with the best results, and never fail to recommend these wonderful remedies."

You may know something of the reputation of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as a means of overcoming derangements of the kidneys. Reports of cures are appearing in the leading newspapers throughout Canada. There can be no doubt of the efficiency of this great medicine. But how are you to be aroused to your condition?

Backache is one of the early symptoms, headache, loss of flesh, dryness of the skin are others. Deposits in the water after standing for twenty-four hours are a positive warning.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are effective when other treatments fail, because they awaken the action of the liver and bowels as well as the kidneys. They reach the source of trouble when most complicated. You can depend on them for splendid results.

USING UP THE HOG

Not Even a Hair of Him Is Wasted by the Big Packers.

GOOD PROFIT IN THE OFFAL.

It Yields as Great a Financial Return as Do the Main Food Products of the Carcase—How the Various Parts of the Animal Are Utilized.

There is a use for everything that is removed from a hog. After years of experimenting packers have reduced their business to such a system that they realize as much profit from the offal as they do from the main carcass.

The meat of a hog is from 70 to 80 per cent of the live weight. The 20 to 30 per cent that is classed as offal makes the money for the packers. Exclusive of condemnations by government inspectors, about 17 per cent of each carcass is lost at various stages of dressing and by evaporation in processing and curing, so that really only about 60 per cent actually goes into cuts to be retailed to the consumer. The various cuts—hams, bacon, loins, spareribs and pork sides—are the main products.

Among the edible byproducts is pepsin, which is derived from the stomach of the hog. The liver is used for food as it is taken from the body, and it is also made into liver sausage. Brains are prepared in many ways. Tongues find their way into the making of canned and pickled meats. Hearts are used in sausage.

Tails, snouts and ears are rich in gelatin or glue, but most of them are sold for boiling with kraut and other vegetables and are much in favor with lovers of boiled meals. Kidneys enter into the fresh meat trade or when the supply is too large are frozen or canned.

Neutral is a specially prepared lard, largely used abroad, and in this country an important ingredient in the manufacture of oleomargarine. Lard proper is not commonly called a byproduct of the hog; it is one of the primary products. About 15 per cent of the average hog goes into the making of lard. The demand for lard has increased greatly during the past few years. It is now used commonly in cooking in place of butter. Part of the lard is further processed into lard oil and stearine, the former used as a lubricant and for illuminating purposes, the latter entering into the manufacture of lard compounds, chewing gum, soft candles, fancy toilet soaps and other toilet preparations.

Small quantities of blood are used in the making of blood puddings, but most of it is dried and ground into blood meal, a popular ration with poultry raisers as well as a feed for calves that are being fed on skimmilk.

Stomachs are used as sausage containers, the lining first being removed and used as a source of pepsin. The "black" or curly intestines of the hog are carefully cleaned, processed and made into chitterlings, an inexpensive food that is fried like oysters, much in favor with colored people.

Seven per cent of the weight of the hog is represented in nonedible byproducts in the raw state, which are afterward manufactured into glue, soap, glycerin, blood meal, tankage, curled hair and fertilizer. In the finished state these products represent about 4½ per cent of the hog's weight, the balance being lost in evaporation.

The rinds from skinned hams and bacon, as well as the back skin of the hog, are saved. Pigskin is used in athletic goods.

Hair enters into many lines of manufacture. A large part is used in the making of brushes, and the finer the bristle the higher priced brush is produced. It is also curled and used for upholstering.

The waste waters are evaporated to a thick brown wax known as "stick" because of its adhesive properties. It is used in the manufacture of fertilizer, as it has a high nitrogen content.

Bones are used in making phosphates for baking powder and other compounds. They are also ground into poultry feed, and a large tonnage finds its way into the fertilizer trade. Bones are also burned for charcoal for use in the purification of sirups in the manufacture of sugar. Bone ash is used in making crucibles for glassmaking and metal refining.

Tankage is a bone and tissue substance that is taken from the tanks after the different parts are rendered for grease. It is used chiefly in stock and poultry feed.—Joseph M. Carroll in Country Gentleman.

Where the Fruit Grows.

A politician who had been in office and on the payroll of a certain city for many years was addressing a meeting of his fellow citizens. It was a labor meeting.

"You men must know," spouted the orator, "that you are the great body politic in this city. You are the roots and trunk of our great municipal tree, while we who represent you in office are merely branches on that magnificent tree."

"True for you!" piped a man in the back of the hall. "But did ye ever notice all the fruit grows on the branches?"

What He Would Do.

At the time that Frederick II. used to sup with his French philosophers he demanded of them one day, "What would you do if you were the king of Prussia?"

Every guest tried a flattering and witty rejoinder. When the Marquis d'Argens' turn came he said: "Sire, what would I do? I would sell my kingdom and acquire a small province in France."

SEVEN YEARS TORTURE

Nothing Helped Him Until He Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

ALBERT VARNER

Buckingham, Que., May 3rd, 1915.

For seven years, I suffered terribly from Severe Headaches and Indigestion. I had belching gas from the stomach, bitter stuff would come up into my mouth after eating, while at times I had nausea and vomiting, and had chronic Constipation. I went to several doctors and wrote to a specialist in Boston but without benefit. I tried many remedies but nothing did me good. Finally, a friend advised "Fruit-a-tives". I took this grand fruit medicine and it made me well. I am grateful to "Fruit-a-tives", and to everyone who has miserable health with Constipation and Indigestion and Bad Stomach, I say take "Fruit-a-tives", and you will get well".

MADE HIM SPEAK.

Former Lindsay Doctor Effects a Wonderful Cure.

London, Ont., December 1. — An extraordinary cure just effected at Wolseley Barracks Military Hospital, is attracting widespread attention. Fourteen months ago Pte. Holl, a Smith street man, was blown up by high explosives in France. The result of the shell shock was that he lost his voice, and since that time he has not spoken a word.

Treatments in hospitals in France and England failed to restore him. He called at the military hospital at Wolseley Barracks and made known his condition to Major W. J. Brown, a former Lindsay, Ontario, man, and a graduate of Trinity College, who had been on overseas duty for the past three years.

Entering the clinic noiseless he was given attention and within a few minutes he emerged with his old time vocal powers.

"I just rubbed some medicine on his larnyx and got his confidence," Major Brown said. "I told him that he would be able to speak and when he tried he could. It was largely a mental condition, resulting from shell shock. I have seen many cases of the kind in England, though the longest I had ever known before was only seven months. Holl had been without his voice for 14 months."

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

The prompt and positive action of this simple, inexpensive home-made remedy in quickly healing the inflamed or swollen membranes of the throat, chest or bronchial tubes and breaking up tight coughs, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in the throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. You then have 16 ounces—a family supply of a much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and is known the world over for its promptness, ease and certainty in overcoming stubborn coughs and chest colds.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Woman is Responsible For the Feeding of Canada's Convalescent Soldiers

One of the biggest jobs in the Dominion to-day is held by a woman, Miss Violet M. Ryley, General Organizing Dietitian for the Military Hospitals Commission, upon whose belt swing the keys to every kitchen in the military convalescent hospitals of Canada.

Miss Ryley is responsible for 35,000 meals every day. In what ratio the recovery of the 11,000 men in the various hospitals to-day depend upon her genius only the medical officers in charge will ever know, but the men from coast to coast declare that the meals in the Canadian hospitals are the best ever.

Roast Beef Well Done.

Roast beef with brown gravy, after long seasons when bully beef and hard tack had to suffice, looks like the Feast of the Prodigal Son to the men. At the Discharge Depots at Halifax and Quebec when they first return, they suspect that it is a feast in honour of their arrival, but it is only the usual run of meals they find.

Here are three typical menus selected at random from those served in the institutions: Breakfast— Rolled oats, bacon and eggs, orange marmalade, rolls, butter and coffee. Dinner: Barley soup, roast beef and gravy, cabbage, mashed potatoes, bread and butter, creamed tapioca and tea. Supper: Cold ham, scalloped potatoes, preserved fruit, cake, bread and butter and tea.

12,000 Eggs.

This means that in one day the returned boys consume 12,000 eggs, 18,000 rolls, 6,000 lbs. of butter, 12,000 pieces of cake, 1,200 jars of fruit, 2,400 quarts of coffee, 5,600 quarts of tea and 5,060 lbs. of raw beef.

Ton of Fish Per Meal.

In the big Discharge Depot at Quebec, where there are at times 2,000 men quartered temporarily, 6,000 meals are served in a day. In such an aggregation if the day happens to be Friday the boys lay away a ton of fish for one meal.

To assist Miss Ryley in this work, of course, there are assistant dietitians in charge of each hospital who follow out her plans. These assistants are also women trained in the work of dieting hospital patients whose business it is to plan the menus, order supplies and see that all the food is up to the standard before it is served.

The HOME CIRCLE COLUM'

MODERN LIVING.

Modern living is a complex affair, greatly in contrast with the simple modes of life of the earlier Americans and of their immediate descendants. All the appliances which have been invented—notably during the past generation—to give heightened comfort to the home, and to make labor easier, have added to the complexity of living and most materially to its cost. How materially one would hardly believe until he had studied the matter for himself and discovered beyond a question that to-day a man cannot support a wife and bring up one child, living in a comforting and not at all lavish manner, upon what his ancestor would have considered sufficient to rear a large family. He cannot do it on what it cost his ancestor of only two generations ago. As men and women are educated, and taught to think for themselves, they will no longer follow blindly the lead of the called "fashionable" bellwethers; will recognize the charm of independent modes of thought and life, and will permit themselves to live according to their own ideals and in their own ways. They will see the folloy of attempting to imitate the methods of the millionaire on the income of the average business or professional man, but will live their own lives, happy in doing the things which they really care to do, instead of the things which they do just because somebody else does them.

WHAT DOES OUR TOWN NEED?

As one who reads and admires your Home Circle Department and who believes it is moulding public opinion, and doing good, we would contribute a few thoughts taking for our text—"What is the best thing that could happen to our town in 1918?"

If there are circumstances to be changed or evils to be averted, it is folly to hide our heads—ostrich-like in their presence. It is not sane nor safe to simply pain the pump of a poisoned well, or shoot the faithful dog for barking at a burglar. "No man liveth to himself." Somebody was responsible for the inquisition of the Iroquois—for the hell and holocaust kindled on the sacred path of the happy holidays. The curse-causeless shall not come. Not earthquakes, famine or tempest, but man himself is his own worst foe, and greatest menace to his kind. Man's inhumanity to man makes countless millions mourn. Everyone helps to mend or mar the fabric of the future. Water does not go higher or get better than its source. Human effort strives in vain to purify the stream of life if a hog happens to be hidden in the fountain. Only good trees produce good fruit. The magnolia pouring perfume from a hundred thousand chastened cups received its strength and support from roots beneath the soil and its sweetness from the dew. So our security rests upon the ground and granite virtues of truth, honor, and fidelity; our success is a quotation of worship, righteousness and charity from above. Business clubs, labor unions, political parties, social guilds and ecclesiastical machinery, have their place an part; but they stand only in the Gentile court, while integrity, industry, patriotism, friendship and true religion occupy the heart's "holy of holies"—the royal racanum of the soul. "Get right with God and do unto others as you would have others d unto you."

What our city needs in 1918, and all along the weary waste of years—is a "Pentecost of Spiritual Responsibility;" a clear vision of moral oughtness; a vice-like grip on the eternal and ethical imperative; a fresh baptism of broadmindedness; every able hand faithfully employed at fair compensation; stainless honesty in every business house; peace, purity, and plenty in every home; a vacant jail, full schools and church; cards and dice relieved from their active service; every humbug retired from duty as soon as their copyrights expire; the papers realizing that many things not known as news are richly worth attention, and much parading as the news before a curious public ought to perish a foundling on the inhospitable doorstep of friendless notice; respectable citizens so keeping the Sabbath and obeying law—human and divine, in letter and spirit, that the evil inclined of the community may be shamed into courses of law and order or at least find no encouragement or extenuations for his violation. And finally exalt man and merit above money; sense above sensation; enlightenment above entertainment; conscience above cold calculation; God above our greatness, greed or glory. For righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.

If these suggestions meet with your approval will be pleased to read them in your Home Circle Department.

The test of our heroism must come. Some time in every human life this problem must be decided. That the world exists, that stars gleam, that flowers bloom, that men live, are not more actual realities in the realm of fact than that before every one is placed the choice of good or evil. It is within the province of every individual to say whether his character shall be luminous or lustreless. And in the hour when the valley of decision is entered, and choice must be made, comes the test which must determine whether he or she is of heroic mould. The pathway of human existence is lined with wrecks of those who could not stand the test when the supreme hour came. When they heard the call they could not say "Here am I; send me." It may have involved a sacrifice, which they deemed it cruelty for them to be called upon to make. Why forego the pleasure of the moment with so little prospect of satisfactory substitution? The opportunity lost—then the long period of regret.

LET a woman ease your suffering. I want you to write, and let me tell you of my simple method of home treatment, send you ten days' free trial, postpaid, and put you in touch with women in Canada who will gladly tell what my method has done for them.

If you are troubled with weak, tired feelings, headache, backache, bearing down sensations, bladder weakness, constipation, menstrual conditions, pain in the sides, regularly irregularly, bloating, sense of falling or displacement of internal organs, nervousness, desire to cry, palpitation, hot flashes, dark rings under the eyes, or a loss of interest in life, write to me to-day. "Shall Canada's effort in this war be maintained or withdrawn? Such is the issue."

Sir Robert Borden, at Halifax

United in the Cause of Liberty

UNION Government in Canada, clearly became necessary for the successful prosecution of the war. In it are united the representative men of the two great political parties.

These men have joined forces to make Canada's effort in the war most effective in the support of our men at the front with additional forces, and to direct and control the industrial and economic life of Canada to the one end of winning the war.

If this policy represents your judgment of Canada's duty, you should

Support Union Government

Four hundred thousand of Canada's manhood have gone into Khaki. THEY are united in the cause of liberty. Today the insistent, the imperative call is for an additional hundred thousand re-inforcements. The policy of Union Government is to raise this force quickly and impartially under the provisions of the Military Service Act.

The Election Issue is Clear

If you are in favor of supporting the men at the Front you will vote for the Unionist Candidates. If you prefer that our soldiers should NOT receive the reinforcements they so urgently need, the Referendum proposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his adherents is the instrument through which you can sacrifice the men already at the front, who have set aside their business ambitions and have given up their home life and loved ones in the defence of YOUR liberty, and indeed, the liberty of the world.

There can be only one course for every Patriotic Canadian—Support the Unionist Candidates

The Food Value of Good Milk

That is—Pure, Clarified and Pasteurized Milk

This is a matter that every person should understand for reasons of Economy, as well as for its relations to Health.

Milk is one of the most wonderful foods. It is one of the cheapest foods on the market. It is also one of the most easily digested foods. It is very nourishing. It contains the chief parts of the different foods commonly used on the table.

Milk is the equal to a meal consisting of meat and eggs, sugar and cereals, oils and fats, with salt and water. A milk diet, therefore, is like a mixed diet. Milk contains all the elements necessary to sustain life. As to the comparative cost of milk as a food, it gives more for the money than any animal food you use.

To get the nourishment contained in a quart of milk—according to Prof. Rosenau of Harvard—you would have to buy and prepare ¾ pound of beef, or 8 eggs, or 2 pounds of chicken, or 2 pounds of codfish. Each of these cost you more, to say nothing of the time, labor and fuel required in preparation.

BEGIN TO-DAY TO DRINK MORE MILK. TEACH YOUR FAMILY TO KNOW ITS VALUE.

OVER 40 YEARS ON THE ROAD

The name of W. G. Reid of Hamilton, Ont., is a familiar one to thousands throughout the Dominion. For over forty years Mr. Reid has been service as a commercial traveller. A letter recently received from him indicates how he suffered from Rheumatism, and at last found relief.

Read this letter:

Hamilton, Ont.

"About four years ago I wrote you of my condition from Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble and my efforts through travel and change of climate to rid myself of these unwelcome guests, and how I only found relief in Gin Pills after spending a lot of time and money in foreign lands.

Since then Gin Pills have been my sheet anchor. I find in advancing years a tendency of the kidneys to get out of order more easily than formerly but a few doses of Gin Pills puts them right and wards off other and more serious trouble. I feel it not only a duty but a pleasure to recommend Gin Pills for Kidney and Bladder Troubles to my thousands of personal friends throughout Canada to whom I am well known as a commercial traveller of over forty years' service."

Yours truly,

PUBLIC OPINION

SEA CONTROL.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

Bismarck saw the real difficulty of Germany's position, just as Napoleon did that of France in his attempt to conquer Europe. It lay in the non-possession of sea power. Both leaders understood economics as well as they did military strategy and tactics. They appreciated that only the nation in possession of naval supremacy could dominate the world, and they realized, perhaps too late, that not military strength was the real factor in world power, but economic superiority. "Our future lies on the sea," said the Kaiser, when urging the construction of the German navy nearly two decades ago. And in a multitude of foolish words, the Kaiser uttered some startling facts which betrayed a keen mind and a grasp of facts hidden from his contemporaries.

The end of the German dream of world power will come in the collapse of the nation in an economic sense. The test is at hand and of the outcome there can be no doubt; Neither Germany nor any other country is self sustaining. That sounds like the old doctrine of free trade, but, analysed, the economic theory of free trade is unanswerable, and this war is in a fair way to demonstrate that fact.

THE NON-ESSENTIALS.

(Boston News Bureau.)

Slowly, but inevitably, the screws are beginning to turn upon the "non-essential" industry. Pleasure and luxury must learn to give way in war time. If after the needs of direct and indirect war work there is left no adequate margin of raw material or labor or factory capacity or bank capital, the crafts that minister to luxury or pleasure, must, to that degree do without.

But in this country that degree is yet indeterminate and is easy to exaggerate. Neither is it wholly easy to define with precision just what shall constitute "luxury." There is no design to crush or even to derange more or less "non-essential" activities that are already in full being: their only danger is the extent of their infringement on "war work." And sometimes such an industry may itself be diverted to war uses. A typical case in all these phases is that of the passenger automobile.

Mrs. Jinks—My husband was a confirmed smoker when I married him, but to-day he never smokes.

Mrs. Binks—Good! to break off a lifetime habit like that requires a strong will.

TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION

From 16 to 20

Constipation is one of the commonest ills of mankind, and one too often allowed to go unlooked after until some serious complication sets in.

If the bowels are properly looked after there will be no constipation, jaundice, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, coated tongue, sour stomach, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will keep your bowels so regulated that in no time the constipation will disappear entirely.

Miss Emma E. Melanson, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I am now 20 years of age, and since I was 16 I have been greatly troubled with constipation, so much so that at times I would be in bed 3 or 4 days a month. I tried all the old-fashioned remedies, castor oil, cascara, etc., with only temporary relief, until my sister-in-law gave me some of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. From the first they seemed beneficial, and I gave them a fair trial. This was two years ago, and with an occasional dose I have kept entirely free from constipation for the period mentioned."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

LOST—A BOY.

Not kidnapped by bandits and hidden away in a cave to weep and starve and rouse a nation to frenzied searching. Were that the case, one hundred thousand men would rise to the rescut if need be. Unfortunately, the losing of the lad is without any dramatic excitement, though very sad and very real. The fact is, his father lost him! Being too busy to sit with him at the fireside and answer his trivial questions during the years when fathers are the only great heroes of the boys, he let go his hold upon him. Yes, his mother lost him? Being much engrossed in her teas, dinners and club programme, she let the maid hear the boy say his prayers and thus her grip slipped and the boy was lost to his home. Aye, the church lost him! Being so much occupied with sermons for the wise and elderly who pay the bills, and having good care for dignity, the minister and elder were unmindful of the human feelings of the boy in the pew, and made no provision in sermon or song or manly sport for his boyishness, and so the church and many sad-hearted parents are now looking earnestly for the lost boy.—Author Unknown.

HOME.

Our nature demands home. It is the first essential element of our social being, which cannot be complete without the home relations. There would be no proper equilibrim of life and character without the home influence. The heart, when bereaved and disappointed, naturally turns for refuge to home life and sympathy. There is a mothers' love and a father's influence, the loving brother's and sister's. Oh, what is life without these? Our habits, too, are under the moulding power of home. Every young woman should feel that just what she is at home she will appear abroad. If she attempts to appear otherwise, everybody will soon see through the attempt. All the duties and labours of home, when rightly understood, are so many means of improvement. To love home with a deep and abiding interest, with a view to its elevating influence, is to love truth and right, heaven and God. The grand idea of home is a quiet, secluded spot, where loving hearts dwell, set apart and dedicated to improvements.

MOTHER'S LIFE.

One of our valued exchanges most truly says your mother's life has not been easy. Your father was a poor man, from the day she married him, stood by his side, fighting as a woman must fight. She worked, not the eight or ten-hour day of the union, but the twenty-four-hour day of the poor wife and mother. She cooked and cleaned and scrubbed and patched and nursed from dawn until bedtime and in the night was up and down getting drinks for thirsty lips, covering restless little sleepers, listening time to say the things that spurred your ambition on. She never forgot to cook the little dishes you liked. She did without the dresses she needed that you might not be ashamed of your clothes before your fellows. Remember this now while there is yet time, while she is yet living, to pay back to her in love and tenderness some of the debt you owe her. You can never pay it all.

IF ONLY

The inner side of every cloud
Is bright and shining
I therefore turn my clouds about
And always wear them inside out,
To show the lining.

If you can't have what you like, like what you have. But that's just what the majority of us don't do. Instead of resolutely making up our minds to like what we have, our lives are one continual lament that we can't have what we like—or think we should like. Distance lends enchantment to the view, sometimes. It is wonderful into what discontented grumblers we can degenerate too, once let ourselves go, and forget to look for the silver linings of our lives. It's the easiest thing in the world to cure ourself of the habit once it has got a hold of one.

And the worst of it is that people who grumble not only make themselves utterly miserable, but are extremely unpleasant to live with, and make things miserable for other people, too.

The husband of the "if only" woman is the man to be sincerely pitied. Her children likewise, are in need of help. Fancy bright youth compelled to spend its days with a mother who is always lamenting the fact that she hasn't and can't have what she likes! If they don't grow up to be pessimists it certainly isn't her fault; and imagine what pleasure it would give you to return to such a home. My dear friends, if you're in the habit of wearing your silver inside, do make up your minds to "turn your clouds about." That silver lining would be so much more inspiring, so much more cheerful, to live with, than the cloud side you so persistently turn to the world.

No. Make up your mind that whatever you may have done in the past you will in the future wear your clouds "inside out, and show the lining." We all have clouds, but that is no reason why we should draw the attention of the world to them. It is the brave, cheerful soldiers who inspire the others. So if you can't get what you like, determine to like what you have or, at all events, to make the best of it and go on your way bravely, without complaining.

Give the children work as well as play. An idle person is neither a benefit nor an ornament. Let the children learn music. It is a great charm in a family, and that, in connection with books and instructive games, will make better children and make them like to stay at home.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns soft corns or any kind of corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of freezone at any drug store, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and while sticky, dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

This announcement will interest many women here, for it is said that ting corns on practically every woman's feet.

CENTURY OF ANTHRACITE.

Statistics of the Growth of Pennsylvania's Coal Output.

James Tilghman of Philadelphia, discovered anthracite in the Wyoming Valley in 1766.

He sent a little chunk of it to Thomas and William Penn in London with this accurately prophetic message:

"This bed of coal, situated as it is on the side of the river, may some day or other be a thing of great value."

Thomas Pen, in giving thanks for the specimen, promised to have it "examined by some person skilled in that article," and to transmit the report.

In 1800 an enterprising pioneer named Wm. Morris brought a wagonload of Tamaqua coal nearly 100 miles to Philadelphia and couldn't find a purchaser.

Three years later two "ark" loads of Lehigh anthracite—two hundred tons—were brought to this city via the Lehigh and Delaware Rivers.

For the fifteen miles below Mauch Chunk, in a drop of about 300 feet, the rapid current swirling over hidden rocks made it an adventurous journey, and those who handled the boats, ninety feet long, sixteen feet wide, and four feet deep, took a sporting chance.

A flotilla of five boats started for Philadelphia on this first journey. But only the two survived. And when they reached the city nobody was able to make the coal burn, and it was given away to be used for "graveling" pathways.

But by the following year people had learned how to use it, and the coal brought here by boat at a total cost of $5 per ton could be sold at a profit of 100 per cent. for $10.

It was by no means plain sailing (or at any rate boating) for the coal merchants even then. The Lehigh Coal Company brought 365 tons here in 1820 and had great difficulty in disposing of so large a quantity.

But in four years it had increased the amount to 9,541 tons; 1,825 found the figure set at 29,393 tons, and by 1832 it was delivering 70,000 tons.

In 1839 it reached 221,850 tons, which was considered prodigious.

The credit for teaching Philadelphia how to burn anthracite is largely due to three citizens of Wilkes-Barre named Miner, Cist and Robinson.

On the 9th of August, 1814, they started an ark laden with coal from Mauch Chunk for Philadelphia. It had gone about a quarter of a mile when it struck a rock. The boatmen stuffed the hole with their clothes and proceeded undismayed.

After five days the ark reached Philadelphia on a Sunday morning at 8 o'clock.

The owners had printed handbills in English and German and broadcast them among our householders

These handbills told how to make the coal burn, and presented testimonials from blacksmiths and others, who had turned the trick

Moreover, stoves were set up in various places, coal fires were started in them, and the incredulous public was invited to behold the miracle.

According to the Geological Survey, Pennsylvania produced 88,095,061 tons of anthracite in 1915.

Some authorities estimate that the Pennsylvania deposits will last a century or so longer at the present rate of production.

But the world need hardly worry as to what will happen then, for a careful estimate of the supply available in the province of Shan-si, China, gives 630,000,000,000 tons. — Philadelphia Public Ledger.

$100 in Christmas Prizes

WHAT PRESENTS ARE IN THE CARS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

$100 IN CASH PRIZES FOR THE BEST REPLIES

SO that we may become acquainted with more young people this Christmas, we are giving you this train loaded down with Christmas presents. Each car contains one kind of present and the name is on each car but the man who painted the name got the letters all jumbled. Worse still, the man who coupled the cars got them in the wrong order. Now, can you straighten things out and re-arrange the letters in the names of the presents in each car and put the cars in their right order behind the locomotive?

Car No. 6, DOES ILL, contains "Dollies." The other cars may contain gloves, candy, baseballs, animals, bicycles, building blocks, skipping ropes, nine pins, engines, skates, Noah's Ark, perfume, lanterns, tools, footballs, games, or something else. It is for you to find out.

Should you get the cars behind the locomotive in their right order, you will find that the first letter of the correct name of each Christmas present in each car when these first letters are all put together will spell out the name of a great Nation in Europe, one of the Allies—a Nation whose Navy controls the Oceans.

On Christmas Day, Uncle Peter, who edits the Bunny Page in EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, will judge the answers and award the following big cash prizes to young people under seventeen years of age complying with the conditions of the contest, whose answers are all correct or nearest correct, neatest and best written. So get busy and send in an answer to-day, and this Christmas Season may be the happiest you have ever had.

The Big Cash Prizes

$25.00 Cash to the Boy or Girl who sends us the best reply. $15.00 Cash to the Boy or Girl sending the second best reply. $10.00 Cash to the Boy or Girl sending the third best reply. DOLLAR BILLS. Fifty bright, new, crisp $1.00 bills to the fifty next Boys and Girls with the 50 next best replies.

If you are bright and quick you will also have the opportunity of winning a Shetland Pony and Cart or Bicycle and many other fine prizes in a pleasant contest even more interesting that this one.

Write your answers in pen and ink, using only one side of the paper. Put your name, address and age, in the upper right hand corner of each sheet.

Send Your Answer This Very Evening!

THERE are 53 Cash Prizes and in addition other fine awards for every young person who qualifies his or her entry in this fascinating contest. Each boy or girl desiring his or her entry to compete for one of the fine prizes will be required to perform a small service for Everywoman's World for which additional Reward or Cash Payment will be given. Wouldn't you like $25.00 Cash? Wouldn't you like a Shetland Pony and Cart or Bicycle? These fine prizes will go to our young friends and we would like you to get the best of them. Address your answers as follows:

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined Federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however low, advance with age and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

TWO VIEWS OF A FACE

A Story For Halloween

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

It is singular how certain callings will be considered criminal in one age and respectable in another. There was a period—the early part of the nineteenth century—when the professional gambler in what is now the middle west was quite a prominent personage in the community. So in England there was a period when the highwayman, especially he who robbed the rich and gave to the poor, was regarded a very good medium for the equalizing of funds. Some of England's best blood has been represented on the highway.

One evening a couple of hundred ears ago a gentleman and his daughter were bumping along in a chaise on an unpaved road that led from London to their home near Clough when they were stopped by a masked horseman who appeared at the window and demanded their valuables. Sir Evan Brierly, the father, produced his money and his watch without resistance, but Evelyn, his daughter, demurred.

"I will give you, sir," she said, "the only valuable article I have which you cannot take from me by force, provided you will give me a glimpse of your features."

"Pray what may that be?"

"I shall not tell you."

The robber hesitated, then lifted his mask, and by the side light on the chaise Evelyn saw the face of a young man, singularly handsome and refined. She remained silent for a time, and the highwayman said:

"I have kept my part of the contract. It only remains for you to keep yours. What is this article that I may not take by force?"

"My heart."

At that moment there was a sound of horses' hoofs coming, and the highwayman rode away with the words:

"So be it. I shall some day call for it."

Evelyn Brierly was but seventeen when she made this bargain. When questioned as to her intent when she made it she replied that she could not explain what induced her to say that in exchange for a view of the man's features she would give the only valuable article she had, nor had she framed a reply as to what the article was. She only knew that when she saw the strikingly handsome features of a gentleman the answer came to her from she knew not where and her reply was involuntary.

That was a period when Cromwell's Ironsides had defeated the forces of King Charles I. and Cromwell had made himself lord protector of England. The king's adherents were deprived of their fortunes and scattered. Some of them sought service in the armies of foreign sovereigns, and some, in order to make a living, took to the road. Among these was Lord Walter Wheatleigh, whose father, the Earl of Portland, had been killed at Naseby fighting for the king. Walter, the last of his race, had served under Prince Rupert, and after the beheading of the king his estates had been confiscated, leaving him penniless. He was one of those who took to the road for a living, and it was he who had stopped the chaise of Sir Evan Brierly and made the singular bargain with Evelyn. He afterward joined the young king (Charles II.) on the continent and at the restoration returned with the king, who restored to him his ancestral estates.

Meanwhile Evelyn Brierly grew to be a handsome woman. The face of the highwayman and the mysterious influence that had induced her to pledge him her heart in exchange for a glimpse of it never left her. The years went by, and he did not return to claim his own. Sometimes she dreaded he would and sometimes feared he would not. After awhile she began to think that he had suffered for his crimes on the gallows.

One October evening—it was Halloween—Evelyn stole out of her home and went across the fields to the river bank. The moon was but a few days old and was dividing the day and the night. Evelyn stood on the river bank among scattered trees and, raising a mirror she held in her hand, said aloud:

"Good moon, show me my future husband."

There was a sound of breaking twigs behind her, and a face appeared reflected in the glass. It was the well remembered face of the highwayman.

"Mistress Brierly," he said, "one night some years ago I gave you a sight of my face for your heart. To give you good measure I give you another sight of the same unworthy object."

Evelyn dropped the mirror and turned.

"The highwayman!" she exclaimed.

"The repentant highwayman, formerly Walter Wheatleigh of Prince Rupert's army, then reduced to make a living on the road, now Earl of Pentland."

"I did not know what I was saying," said the girl, turning away. The young earl caught her, saying:

"Nevertheless you said it, and I have come for my own."

Evelyn Brierly became Countess of Pentland and for a short while a member of the court of King Charles. But the profligacy of the court soon drove her to her husband's home near Windsor, where she remained, living a somewhat secluded life with her husband and her children.

Purely Business.

Little Bobbie, aged five, was one of those who permitted few things to escape his attention and consequently was always asking questions. Some of the members of the family were talking about life insurance, and Bobbie had to know what that was. He was told it was a provision whereby, when his father died, the family would receive a certain sum of money. This seemed clear to the youngster, but it was noticed he seemed to be engaged in deep thought. Finally he said, "But, mamma, how soon will we have to kill him?"—Indianapolis News.

Equal Division.

"It's a good thing for man and wife to have tastes in common."

"True to some extent. But you can divide the newspaper more amicably when she's satisfied with the society news and doesn't want to take the sporting section away from you."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Their Opportunity.

Miss Fluffy—I made quite an impression at the reception, didn't I? Everybody seemed to be talking about me. Candid Friend—They talked still more about you after you had gone.

Mean.

"What did the lady say when you told her I was out?"

"She smiled and said, 'Friday's not always an unlucky day.'"

Good.

"He has a good wife, hasn't he?"

"I should say so. He can always borrow money from her when he goes broke himself."

Earth and Sun.

A body weighing one pound on earth would weigh twenty-seven and a half pounds upon the sun.

Truth.

We are born to inquire after truth. It belongs to a greater power to possess it. It is not, as Democritus said, hid in the bottom of the deeps, but rather elevated to an infinite height in the divine knowledge.—Michael de Montaigne.

THE NEWSPAPER INDUSTRY.

(Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.)

For twenty years the number of newspapers and periodicals in the United States has been steadily declining, relatively to population. In the last decade or so the number of daily newspapers has notably decreased. A contemporary reports that, though the population of the fourteen largest cities in Michigan, has doubled, the number of daily papers has fallen from 42 to 23.

No doubt like causes have produced a like effect elsewhere. Quite recently consolidations of dailies in first-class cities have attracted attention. The number of considerable cities with no morning paper and of still bigger places with only one morning paper appears to increase. Within our recollection five morning papers have disappeared from Chicago though the population of the city has much more than doubled.

The cause of course is the steadily increasing cost of establishing and publishing a newspaper. The investment which formerly would have launched a daily paper in Chicago or New York, now hardly suffices for Kalamazoo, and operating costs are so high that a paper must win very substantial support or lose a lot of money.

War has greatly increased operating costs by raising the price of paper, other materials and labor. Probably these war costs have been a governing motive in some recent consolidations.

We should not be surprised if two daily papers in a city with anything less than a hundred thousand inhabitants became the exception rather than the rule.

ENVOYS TO REVIVE FRENCH RACE PRIDE

An Atlantic Port, Nov. 29.—Three envoys of French fellowship to their Canadian brethren, sent by the French government, were passengers on a French liner arriving at this port to-day. The men are Captain Eugene Duthoit, Lieut. Charles Flory and Sergt. Joseph Dobelle.

"We are here to revive on the banks of the St. Lawrence the traditional friendship existing between us who speak the same tongue," said Capt. Duthoit, "and to exalt the new fraternal spirit of the common cause of the allies which is upheld by the sons of France. We will tell the people of Canada how laws of international right and of humanity have been torn to pieces by the brutality of the Germans. We will also tell them how France appreciates the efforts of the Canadian people, and endeavor to aid in stimulating them to greater endeavor."

Captain Duthoit, who, before the war occupied the chair of right and political economy at the Catholic University of Lille, commanded a battalion at the Yser and before Verdun, and received the Cross of the Legion of Honour, and the Cross of War, with a star, for conspicuous bravery. Lieut. Flory, an Alsatian, won the Cross of the Legion of Honor and the insignia of Fourragare, at Mulhouse. Sergt. Dobelle was decorated with the Cross of War after the Verdun battle.

CONCRETE HOUSE WORKS HAVOC IN SWINE BREEDI N

HARRISBURG, Pa.—The builders of concrete hog houses are blown out of the water in a statement issued by L. W. Lighty, farm adviser for the department of agriculture.

"When I look at these ornate, cold rock shelters," he said, "I find them better adapted for root cellars than swine houses. No wonder the state of Nennsylvania isn't producing as much pork as it did years ago, comparatively speaking. No wonder the pigs have rheumatism and other diseases and that hog cholera runs through a drove and kills every member.

LITTERS GROW SMALLER

"I never met a man who had the heart to build a dog house the way the average modern hog house is built. The litter of the old sow of the woods used to be from ten to fourteen pigs. The 'new' sow, bred to all sorts of fancy 'points' that do not count in pork pounds, and kept in sixteen foot high solid concrete stables with all kinds of automatic fixtures for the owner's amusement, litters from two to six pigs. The new arrangements are cold storage houses, that's all."

Lighty severely condemns the swine growers who provide inadequate shelter for their animals. Some growers keep a warmly clad cow in a warmly built barn that is altogether too warm for the animal, and they keep their poorly clad pigs in a poorly constructed shelter that is far too cold for any hairless animal.

TELLS BALD TRUTH.

"A large percentage of the stuff we read these days about pork production comes from a vivid imagination," concludes Lighty. "For more than twenty-five years my swine department was a very profitable investment and what I say is the bald truth and until the swine growers of Pennsylvania wake up we're going to be falling back of the parade more and more each year."

TALIANS FIGHTING AGAINST ODDS OF 5-1

Attacks Are Almost Continuous, But Enemy Fails to Dent the Line.

Italian Army Headquarters in Northern Italy, Nov. 26.—During a trip of one hundred miles to-day through the fighting zone in the north, the correspondent met the major-general in command of the most exposed front between the Brenta and Piave Rivers looked out upon a great stretch of the Brenta valley where the enemy is concentrating his forces to break through to Bassano and the Venetian plains.

It was a stirring scene, but the general paused long enough to give a good general idea of the situation, and details of the splendid fight they are making against heavy odds. The general estimates these odds at four or five to one.

Even against such odds his men were fighting with a power of resistance, courage and dash beyond all praise. Attacks were almost continuous at one point or another, but the Italians were always ready to respond and had not only repulsed attacks, but driven the enemy back after a series of heroic charges.

The general summed up the physical conditions of the battleground which made the struggle particularly trying on the troops. First, he said, there was that terrible strain of endurance and natural fatigue accompanying nights and days of ceaseless fighting with the relentless foes. Then there was the extreme cold.

After summing up the physical hardships, the general added that there was the still more serious condition of many commands being with very few officers, as the continuous fighting had told terribly on officers.

The general said that there have been fearful losses among the troops, which required a constant re-forming of companies, regiments, brigades and divisions, but with all these terrible conditions, the general said the spirit of the men was unabated in the determination to hold at any cost.

DRESS EASE IN ENGLAND.

Never before have women in England dressed so comfortably. Not only must the clothes the patriotic women wear be inexpensive, but they must be suited admirably to the task which the wearer has to perform, they must minimize clothes discomfort which at any time works against efficiency. In fact the feeling is that a woman can well afford to spend a good sum on her clothes if the be part of her working equipment, and enable her to do her bit more effectively.

Ward shoes are popular for house shoes in England and they are identical to those worn by the nurses in the wards. This type of footgear is a light slipper with an ankle strap and a graceful round toe and fairly low heel. It is the easiest shoe in the world to get on, but the strap prevents it from slipping off. It is usualy made of glace kid in black.

Women's overalls are not all of the bifurcated sort, and the e is a certain sort of garment originally intended for hospital nurses known as an overall that simply amounts to a loose, easy to get into cross between a frock and an apron. It is made of blue gray cotton cloth and is fitted with a wide black patent leather belt. It is admirable for housework, and as it may be washed as easily as an apron, precludes the necessity of wearing one of these homely garments which a good many housewives abhor.

Never did the wardrobes of English women contain so many rea. robes as at the present time and these rest robes are more than negligees. They are for the most part made of fairly substantial fabric, for houses in England, drafty, badly heated at all times, are at this time of the year, under present conditions, not favorable settings for chiffon and Georgette crepe. A good many of these rest robes are of corduroy or velvet. Sometimes they are made of effective challis and sometimes henrietta cloth or cashmere is the fabric chosen.

GOT WET FEET TOOK AWFUL COLD

COULD NOT SLEEP FOR COUGH

A bad cold accompanied by a distressing cough that keeps you awake at night is most aggravating, and unless it is attended to at once may develop into something very serious.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the remedy you should take. It heals the mucous surfaces, relieves oppression and tightness of the chest, removes the accumulation of phlegm, quiets the most obstinate and distressing coughs, and secures rest and sleep at night, not only to the sufferer, but to others whose rest would be otherwise broken.

Mrs. Ezekiel Acker, Lake Pleasant, N.S., writes: "I got wet feet and took an awful cold; could not sleep at night, and would do nothing but cough. My husband got me a bottle of medicine, but it was not worth bringing home. I was going to call the doctor in when a friend asked me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I told her I had little faith in it, but she urged me to get a bottle. I did, and I must say that of all the medicine I ever took, it is the best, and relieved me the quickest of anything I ever saw."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

GRAIN MARKET

There were but fractional changes in a quiet market yesterday. The demand is good for all offerings, which are still light, the mild weather stopping all chances for the present for good sleighing to enable the farmers to get their grain out to delivery points. There is an active demand for rye for export.

IF BACKACHY OR KIONEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat also take glass of Salts before eating breakfast

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad. Eat less meat, drink lots of water also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a table spoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithea-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Floral Fashion.

At one of the prettiest weddings of the late summer the bride carried a great bouquet of white jasmine and blue delphinium, and the maid of honour wore mauve and blue chiffon, carrying also as her bouquet white pasmine and blue delphinium. Everybody exclaimed over the exquisite colour scheme, which was much more original and effective than a conventional scheme of pink satin and roses, the flowers ordered from a hothouse. At a late September wedding the bride carried a great bunch of pale ping cosmos and the bridesmaids, dressed in satin and chiffon, matched their costumes with a deeper ping cosmos. And all the flowers came from the garden.

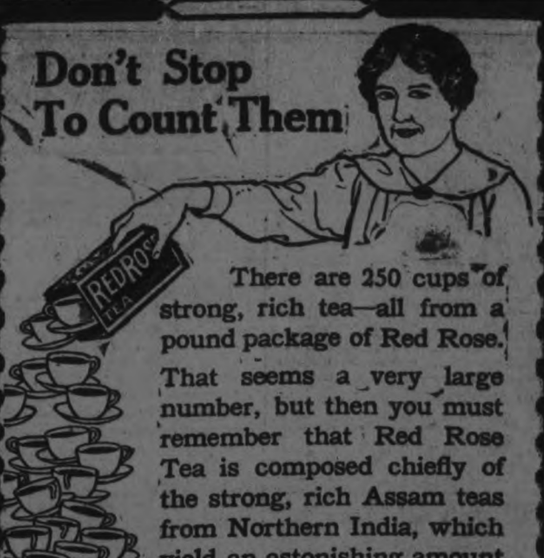
Don't Stop To Count Them



There are 250 cups of strong, rich tea—all from a pound package of Red Rose.

That seems a very large number, but then you must remember that Red Rose Tea is composed chiefly of the strong, rich Assam teas from Northern India, which yield an astonishing amount of tea essence.

Why! You can brew five generous cups from about one cent's worth of Red Rose.

Doesn't it seem a real war-time economy to use Red Rose Tea, which tastes better and goes further?

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

Double Blow Aimed At British Front Near Cambrai

Failed to Net Any Considerable Gain---Battle is Continuing---Earlier Attacks Cost the Germans Dearly---Enemy Attacks on French Positions Also Fail and French Line is Maintained Intact

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 1. — The Germans last night made no further large attacks on the Cambrai front where they conducted a violent offensive yesterday in an effort to regain the ground captured by the British last week. The following official announcement was given out here to-day:

"On the Cambrai battle front the Germans during the night made no effort to renew their principal attacks.

"Southwest of Vendhuile local attacks were successfully repulsed by us. The hostile artillery has been more active than usual in the Scarpe Valley. Three raids attempted by the enemy last night southwest of LaBassee were driven off by our fire. We made two successful raids in the neighbourhood of Warneton inflicting many casualties on the enemy and securing prisoners on both occasions."

(By William Philip Simms.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, December 1.—A double blow aimed by Crown Prince Rupprecht at General Byng's front failed to net any considerable gain to-day. The battle is continuing as this despatch is sent.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), December 1.—The Germans made a violent attack last night on the Verdun front, the War Office reports. Two efforts were defeated by the French, who after a severe engagement, held their line intact.

The statement follows: The attempts of the enemy to raid our positions in the region of Leiprey, northwest of Rheims, and in the Argonne, near Courteschaussees, were repulsed by our fire. We made successful incursion in to the German line near St. Maria the region of the heights of the Meuse and brought back prisoners. On the right bank of the Meuse, Verdun front, the artillery fighting became intense on the sector between Beaumont and Chaume Wood, and was followed by a violent attack of the enemy against our positions north of Fosses Wood. The assailants made two efforts, and in both instances were driven back to their trenches. After a spirited combat our lines was maintained completely.

LONDON, December 1.—Austria is prepared to negotiate a general peace, without "territorial or economic violations."

Premier Seidler told the Austrian Parliament, according to a Central News despatch from Amsterdam to-day.

The despatch quoted Vienna advices stating the Premier had made his announcement in a speech detailed how Austria was conducting negotiations with Russia "in a conciliatory spirit."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Friday—M. Maklakoff, Russian Ambassador to France, has been declared dismissed from his post by Leon Trotzky, Bolsheviki Commissary for Foreign Affairs. This action was taken because of the Ambassador's participation in the Inter-Allied Conference, which is considered a state offence entailing a heavy penalty.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 1. — The Gergan Foreign Secretary Dr. Van Kuchlmann, is quoted in a Central News despatch from Amsterdam as saying it was absurd to imagine Germany would enter a peace conference with large claims.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

BERLIN, via London, December 1.— "It is absurd to imagine that Germany will enter the peace conference with large aims," declared German Foreign Secretary Kuehlmann in a Reichstag speech to-day. "If the Entente wants to know our condition the way is simple—but the Entente wants only victory."

Germans Strike Back In Cambrai Region---Claim 4000 Prisoners

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, December 1.—In operations in the Cambrai regions yesterday the German began a turning movement, but the British were able to pull back most of their troops and guns at the first attack and save them from being caught. The British blew up a certain number of guns. So far as could be ascertained this morning no British guns were captured by the Germans. The German casualties yesterday were exceedingly large. The British probably lost a considerable number of men.

There is no concealing the fact that the enemy gave the British an uncomfortable hour or two yesterday, but the situation this morning is not one to cause particular uneasiness. Some scattered British in the front line may have fallen into the hands of the Germans, but most of the troops are reported having been withdrawn safely. Some ground has been lost, but unless unforeseen events arise, the German plans have been frustrated with the infliction of serious losses on them. The fighting is still proceeding today. The British are continuing their counter attacks.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, via London, December 1.—The Germans yesterday captured four thousand British and several batteries in the Cambrai region, the War Office announces.

A GRUESOME FIND IN KITCHENER

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

KITCHENER, Dec. 1.—A gruesome find was made by neighbours this morning on Simpson Street, when H. Gerbigewas was found lying in bed with his throat partly cut, but is still living, and his wife was dead in a pool of blood on the cellar way.

Mrs. Gerbigewas was apparently murdered, and it is believed her husband attempted to commit suicide.

The couple had been missing since Thursday, when they were last seen by neighbours.

GERMANS LOSE HEAVILY IN VAIN COUNTER ATTACKS

Charged Full Into British Machine Gun Positions in Densely Packed Masses and Were Torn to Pieces by Machine Gun and Artillery Fire

RUPPRECHT DESPERATE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Dec. 1.—British troops holding the ground between Mouovres and Bourlon to-day are clinging to a field of sorrows. The ground is littered with German dead.

The British are "dug in" amidst shattered human bodies, and broken implements of war. A great German wave moved across this ground in a counter attack against the British last night. The wave receded, to leave behind a quivering foam, literally composed of strips of flesh; bits of bodies, uniforms, metal and cloth.

Using their old storming methods the Germans charged full into British machine-gun positions in densely packed masses. Into the wall of humanity the machine guns poured a steady fire. British artillery far behind, accurately caught the wall with heavy shells. They exploded, tearing to pieces sections of the German line that still stood in the face of the tearing of machine guns.

The advancing wall melted away.

Exploding shells flung bits of what had been human beings, over the field, and machine gun fire continued to slice holes in the quivering columns.

Then the pitiful remnants turned, and dissolved in flight. This was only one of the numerous, almost continuous German counter attacks. All were heavy.

Crown Prince Rupprecht evidently has determined on every effort by the massing of every available man, to regain some if not all, of the ground newly won by British. He hopes for some blow which will regain the prestige the German arms have lost. It is evident from the attitude of the German prisoners that Byng's drive was the hardest blow struck the German morale since the French drove the German Crown Prince back from Verdun in February, 1916.

A great German attack around Graincourt cost countless dead for every yard of gain—and that gain did not hold in face of an instantaneous British infantry counter blow. The Prussian artillery, throughout the whole Cambrai sectors is laying down an almost ceaseless barrage of shrapnel, high explosive shells and gas. In the Bourlon sector to-day their airmen were busier than usual.

A DARING EXPLOIT.

I saw one exceptionally daring exploit by a German fighting pilot. While the sky was literally flecked with British airmen a lone German, watching his chance, slipped through the cordon and charged a British sausage observation balloon. He swooped above it, loosed an incendiary missile and curved beyond. Then he turned home in a whirlwind of shell bursts. The balloon had been hit. It burst almost on one end and escaped back suddenly into a mass of flames. One observer in its basket leaped out, his parachute gracefully unfolding and gently depositing him on the ground. The second occupant of the basket, with iron nerve, waited until the balloon started falling before he jumped with his parachute. By a mircle the heavier and more rapidly falling mass of flames just grazed him. He slid to the earth unscratched.

Mr. and Mrs. George Curtis Receive Military Medal Won by Their Son the Late Lance-Sergt. Howard Curtis of the 2nd Battalion

LOCAL CASUALTIES

On Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Curtis were summoned to Kingston, and there at the Armouries the Military Medal won by their dead son, Lance-Sergt. William Howard Curtis, of the 2nd Battalion, was presented to them by Brigadier-General Hemming, commanding No. 3 Military District.

Lance-Sergt. Curtis made the supreme sacrifice in France in October of last year, and did not live to receive the medal that his bravery had won. The award was given for untiring bravery in carrying wounded from the front line trenches.

Lance-Sergt. Curtis was several times wounded before he laid down his life for the cause of Empire.

"Spike," as he was familiarly known to his many friends, went overseas with the 93rd and was transferred to the 21st Battalion in France.

Mrs. Hallihan's brother, Pte. Jack Murray, was wounded a short time ago.

PTE. S. J. CURTIS.

Pte. S. J. Curtis, a Peterborough member of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded. He went overseas with the 93rd and was transferred to another battalion at the front.

PTE. P. C. WHITE.

To-day's casualty list contains the name of another former member of the 93rd Battalion in the person of Pte. P. C. White, who is officially reported wounded.

The Taxes May Be Remitted To Quaker Oats

Meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council

At a meeting of the Finance committee of the City Council held yesterday afternoon, it was recommended that steps be taken to have an application made to the Provincial Legislature to amend the Hospital Act so that a period of residence of two years in a municipality will be sufficient to make the municipality responsible for the maintenance of indigent patients.

Remission of Taxes.

A letter was read from the Quaker Oats Company asking for a remission or reduction of taxes for 1917, on account of the plant having been destroyed by fire. Mr. W. H. Denham and Mr. E. A. Peck, representing the company, were heard, and after some discussion it was decided to recommend that the Council instruct City Solicitor Gordon to inform the County Judge whei the appeal of the Quaker Oats Company comes before him that the Council is willing to have a remission of taxes made on an assessment of $240,000, representing garbage tax, patriotic rate and provincial war tax for the year 1917.

Suspected "Dip" Arrested At The Armouries Meeting

Charlie Grant, of Montreal, suspected of picking-pockets, was arrested at the Armouries last night by Detectives Newhall and Meagher, and this morning was remanded on a charge of vagrancy. Reports from Millbrook last night indicated that a gang of "dips" had found easy picking among the crowd of farmers that overflowed both the Town Hall and Armouries in their attempt to hear Sir Robert Borden, who spoke there in the afternoon. A number of them reported that they had been robbed of their money, and the local police were forewarned of a possible invasion of Peterborough. The Police Department waf reticent on the details of the affair which had more than local interest, and involved others than the suspect Grant.

Unionist Leaders Welcomed At Meeting In The Armouries

COMPLAINS THAT MAIL WAS TAMPERED WITH

Mr. R. R. Hall States That Many of His Notices Were Not Delivered Through the Mails—Rousing Addresses at Selwyn and Young's Point.

Mr. R. R. Hall yesterday afternoon addressed a representative gathering at Selwyn, and at Young's Point in hte evening.

The meeting at Young's Point Mr. Hall explained was not as large as he had expected owing to the fact that His Majesty's mail had been tampered with by some post office official and that many of the notices advising the electors of the meeting had not been distributed from His Majesty's post office, although they were mailed in time.

Mr. Hall in his address at Young's Point further stated that he had mailed to the electors his election address and also the information regarding the Union between Sir Robert Borden and the Quebec Nationalists, whereby Sir Robert Borden proposed to take only 5,000 men frem the Province of Quebec and to take 95,000 from the rest of the English-speaking Canada.

"His Majesty's mail has also been tampered with and these addresses were not delivered throug'; the mail to take only 5,000 men from the Proed," said Mr. Hall. "I cannot believe for one moment that this is done with the knowledge and connivance of Mr. J. H. Burnham, the Conservative candidate, but I wish to draw Mr. Burnham's attention to this, and who ever is responsible for the commission of this crime against the people of Young's Point and the district surrounding it, must be punished or else Mr. Burnham must take the responsibility of not putting the law immediately in motion.

Mr. Hall stated to the electors that the high cost of living was agitating the minds of the people living in our cities and towns, but the high cost of living must go higher if the farmers are producing less, and if the demands upon Canada for food stuffs are growing greater. There are some people in this riding who do not think for themselves, who proclaim that if we raise 100,000 men in the Dominion of Canada and ship them over to Great Britain and France, that the war will be won and some think that if we raise 200,000 men and send them over to Great Britain and France that the war will be won. More must be done than send men to Great Britain. Italy has lost in this last month or more 250,000 men and still the war goes on. Great Britain has pointed out to Canada some of her greatest needs. She wants ships to carry food to her markets and to transport troops to her shores. The United States have hundreds of thousands of troops already to be sent over, and they are short of ships to carry them, and Sir Robert Borden has made no effort whatever to supply ships to England.. Great Britain must be supplied with food and Sir Robert Borden has no policy whatever whereby he indicates that Government assistance will be given to the farmers to increase food production.

"The Globe newspaper is now unworthy of belief," said Mr. Hall. "It has proved itself false and traitorous to the great trust that has for two generations been reposed in it. I do not care what evil influence has caused it to conceal the truth. It is enough for me that that paper does conceal the truth and is now unworthy of belief."

GERARD'S VIEWS OF LANSDOWNE'S PEACE LETTER

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 1.—Jas. W. Gerard, former American Ambassador to Germany, agrees with that part of the Marquis of Lansdowne's letter urging that Germany be not annihilated. He so declared in a statement published here to-day. He did assert, however, that "we must teach Germany that war of conquest is forever ended, and that wanton wrongs, like the invasion of Belgium and the murders of the Lusitania, must not occur again. The Kaiser told me he would stand no nonsense from America after this war," Gerard declared. "We want to be sure that after this war we shall not have to stand any nonsense from the Kaiser.

"Germany cannot be wiped out as a nation, except at a cost of blood and treasure that will beggar the world in men and money for two centuries.

"When the Germans themselves understand they are not to be compelled to fight a desperate war of defence, they will themselves stop a war where German conquest is not to be thought of or permitted even though all the men of the Allies perish in the trenches, for it there is one thing certain it is that the world will not suffer German domiantion.

"We cannot let the end of the war leave Germany with increased territory and therefore increased man power and in possession of a government which has threatened us with invasion after proving their evil intention by murdering our citizens."

Thousands Give Attentive Hearing to Sir Robert Borden, Hon. Newton Rowell and General Sir Sam Hughes — Military Service Act the Chief Theme.

MEETING WAS ORDERLY

A huge crowd welcomed Sir Robert Borden, Hon. N. W. Rowell and General Sir Sam Hughes at the armouries last night at the mass meeting in the interests of the Union government.

The main floor and galleries of the big building were jammed with people, many of whom were in their places an hour and a half before the meeting opened. The rush to get in commenced at 6.30 and in a short time the seating accommodation was exhausted. However, there was plenty of standing room available at the back and corners of the building and this provided an opportunity for the later comers.

The building was lavishly decorated with flags and bunting and mottoes, among others the following: "Shall We Do or Shall We Delay?" and "What Will Peterborough Cable to the Men at the Front?"

The meeting was very orderly. There was not the slightest sign of heckling or disturbance, and all the speakers were given an attentive hearing, the order being so good that those at the back of the hall were able to hear distinctly.

Sir Robert Borden, who was escorted to the armouries by a guard of honour composed of returned soldiers in uniform, arrived shortly after eight o'clock and was given a flattering reception from the big audience. Sir Sam Hughes was also cheered, and Hon. N. W. Rowell, who came in later, while Capt. Burnham was speaking, was well received.

The chief theme discussed by all the speakers was the Military Service Act and the need of immediate reinforcements for Canada's army overseas. Sir Robert Borden's address was not a lengthhy one, and the Premier gave the impression that he was tired by the strain of the campaign. Hon. Mr. Rowell's voice also showed the effect of his many speeches in the past few weeks.

The platform quota included many women, while the front seats were occupied by returned soldiers, forming a khaki background for the speakers.

The meeting was opened with the singing of the National Anthem, led by the 57th Band.

Chairman's Address.

Comrade Sidney Whatley, secretary of the Great War Veterans' Association, who saw much of the hard fighting in the early days of the war, including the first battle of Yyres in the autumn of 1914, looked after the duties as chairman in good style.

In his opening address he said that the War Veterans had been criticized for plunging into politics. It was true that they were a non-political body owing allegiance to no particular party, but in the present crisis they did not regard the coming election as a political fight. It was a much more serious thing than that; it was a question of whether Canada was going to remain in the war or quit.

"When a question of that kind is the issue," said the speaker, "how can anybody expect the War Veterans to refrain from supporting the government that is keeping faith with the boys at the front. We could not be true to ourselves. We could not be true to our comrades in Flanders. We could not above all be true to the boys who have died for liberty if we did not take a public stand on the biggest question the people of Canada have ever been called upon to settle. We must support the party that will send immediate reinforcements overseas. If that is politics then we are in politics and we propose to stay there until the war is won."

"In the name of common sense," asked the chairman, "could anybody expect to find the War Veterans, men who have fought for Canada in Flanders, lining up with the French Nationalists, the pro-Germans, the British-haters and the hoodlums of Kitchener to support a policy that would mean the gradual disappearance of our valiant army overseas?"

Discussing the food question the speaker said that it would be an encouraging message to send over to the soldiers in France. "There's no more men coming boys, but cheer up, Bob Hall is sending you over some more bread."

RELEASING THE CAT.

The lady orator at the women's meeting in Victoria Hall "let the cat out of the bag" in a way to disturb the tottering belief that the Union government is a real union government, and not the Borden government in disguise.

After praising the Union government for its patriotic constitution and aims, and perhaps thinking that she had said too much for the straight partizans who feel that no government can be good that has Grits in it, she sought to restore faith by the comforting assurance that after all it is the same old government with a new label."

That is exactly the position in which thousands of honest thinking Canadians place it. The marks of the "same old government" are too plain to permit any other belief—the same old following of "big interests," profiteers, and predatory camp-followers, the use of the franchise act, designed to permit the "same old Borden government" to win the game of election with loaded dice.

Sir Sam Hughes declared in an interview given at Lindsay on October 16th, the origin of the Union government idea, of which he says the present combination "is a splendid triumph for the plans laid long ago by Sir Joseph Flavelle and Sir Thomas White," the mouth-pieces of the "big interests." The "big interests" would not stand by the Union government, unless "the same old government" that had stood by them remained in essence, even if changed in form.

If people want to vote for the "Union" under the delusion that they are voting for an improvement in the Borden government, they should do so with their eyes open.

The Borden government put the "Red Cross" sign "Union" upon itself to escape popular bombardment, as Hun officers paint red crosses on the roof of their headquarters to protect them from the high-minded enemy, who would not fire on a hospital.

MORE FOOD THE CALL.

Evidence accumulates that the great need of the hour in the way of war winning is food supply, and the vital necessity of increasing supply by both production and conservation.

Dr. J. W. Robertson, Canada's greatest agricultural specialist, who is known to many in this county, says the world food situation is "alarming."

At the meeting of the Conservation Commission in Ottawa, Dr. Robertson on Friday spoke, pointing out how serious was the food situation, and how vital the necessity of food economy in Canada, said that so serious were "some facts about the situation that they could not be made public;" but they "were sufficient to justify the most urgent warning to Canada."

The discussion that followed Dr. Robertson's remarks was in the most serious vein; some of the speakers sharply criticising the conscription of farm labour, and demanding that farm labour already enlisted should be returned to the farms.

While the government through its shallow-thinking advocates, is denying and minimising the necessity of greater food production, the government's own Department of Agriculture is sounding a loud warning, as will be seen by referring to the Department's bulletin reprinted on this page. The bulletin not only emphasized the "enormous demand" for the armies of our allies, but points out the necessity of increased production. It declares there is "serious shortage" of bacon animals. Sir Joseph Flavelle, as head of the Davies Company, by a preferred contract, was able to rob the country of hogs, which the Department almost frantically urges the country to increase.

BUY A VICTORY BOND.

PRODUCTION.

The great problem of increased production is labour—its scarcity. One cannot confidently forecast labour conditions next spring, but it is hardly probable that without organized effort the conditions will be any better than they were last year. We know that while scarcity of labour last year prevented as extensive seeding and planting as desirable, the same scarcity prevented complete harvesting what was planted with so great difficulty.

All over the country we have reports of crops that went back into the soil for lack of hands to reap them; of potatoes by acres and acres being left ungathered. We are told of many cases of large areas of potatoes in the Canadian west only partially lifted, left in the ground.

This, however, is not a loss, it is only a postponement. The plots of potatoes unharvested were some of them in the west, and whether the severer frost there will make any difference, it is known, and has repeatedly been proved, in Ontario, that potatoes left in the ground during the winter, and allowed to freeze and thaw without being disturbed, will, in the spring be sound as a nut. In Peterborough potatoes of first rate quality have been gathered from seed left in the ground or planted the previous autumn. So that potatoes left in the ground unharvested are not a loss but a virtual gain; they will be good in the spring, and the labour of lifting and storing during the winter has been avoided, and so much precious labour saved.

In providing for increased production available labour is the needed element; the only way to secure it, if it is at all procurable, is timely organization. In providing for more recruits, the government is confronted with the problem of differentation: getting the number of recruits required, without leaving industrial and productive activities unmanned, and their requirements unmet.

The key to success in either providing men for military service abroad, or providing men for equally important productive service at home, is organization, and government organization is the best.

If the government would put into a campaign for production, the energy, the organization skill, it threw into the mobilization of the Victory Loan, something worth while in the matter of production would be effected.

The government has the authority; it has the means in the shape of money, to accomplish enective organization. Let the government take the whole of the offerings of the Victory Loan and let a liberal share of it be devoted to complete organization to meet one of the emergent requirements of victory—food for our troops and those of our allies.

The labour-hood of the country might be thoroughly organized, to include and incorporate every element.

There must be direct and effective appeal to the whole nation's spirit of sacrifice and service.

We are enforcing military service; organizing thoroughly to bring every fighting man into the ranks. Why not bring into play the same policy, varied and adapted, to mobolizing a great army for production?

Industries unimportant in their productions, occupied in the production of things that are not absolutely essentials, are drawn upon to secure men for fighting. There are many left who are not eligible physically for the fighting front; but are eligible for enrollment in the home army of production.

To grasp the nettle firmly — to bring productive organizations into play, why could the government not organize, equip and finance Production Battalions, as it organized Forestry Battalions and Construction Battalions?

There might be a scarcity of men, but men could be provided by more largely enlisting the services of women, who, if not so well fitted for farm work, could be put into the place of men in many occupations, and release many men for heavier work.

Mrs. Hamilton, of the National Council of Women, declared that conscription of men did not necessarily rob the farm; that women were willing and able to take the places of men on the farm.

In providing the greatly needed organization for greater production, the poverb, "Where there's a will, there's a way," applies.

Let the government "get busy." If it will throw into production mobilization of productive forces the energy and organization that contributed to making the Victory Loan a sweeping success, the thing can be accomplished.

Conscription organization is completed, and in the process of application. The government has little more concern in that; all that it has to do is to see that the machinery is kept moving.

Let the government concentrate attention upon organising for a successful solution of the production problem.

Where do we stand? The Militia Department of the Union Government says we must have men for the army, and the Department of Agriculture says we must have more hogs—that is hogs that can be eaten, instead of eating us.

If the Borden government had discharged its trust as faithfully and honestly and effectively as the Canadian soldeirs have discharged their thrust, we should not now need to appeal for more men by compulsory methods.

CHASING SLACKERS.

Half a Dozen U. S.—Allied Treaties Now Ready.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27— Negotiations between the United States and the Allies on the alien slacker problem have progressed to such a stage that when Congress reconvenes next Monday, the Secretary of State, Mr. Lansing, will be prepared to submit a number of treaties authorizing the reciprocal drafting for military service of the citizens or subjects of one country resident within the other country.

In the meantime a great many foreigners resident in the United States have hastened to file their declarations of intention to become American citizens, in many instances with the express purpose of escaping military service under their own flags in the event of a roundup of aliens in the United States by British, French and Italian recruiting officers. By filing these "first papers" the declarant renders himself liable to draft into the American army.

There is only one chance in four of his being actually drafted as an American, however, even afte regis-

SOLDIERS CANNOT FIGHT TO VICTORY ON EMPTY STOMACHS

Soldiers, Women and Children Urgently Need Food

The following energetic bulletin has been issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, and its call for greatly increased production emphasizes the claimant need for more food as the dominant need of the time. The Bulletin reads:

There is a serious shortage of food in Britain, France and Italy, and stringent food regulations are in force.

The enormous demands of the armies for food must be supplied. Soldiers cannot fight on empty stomachs.

And the women and children overseas! They must not be denied the urgently needed food.

The Allies look to the United States and Canada to meet the critical situation. Increased production of grains, beef and hogs particularly hogs—is a military necessity.

EUROPEAN HERDS DECREASING.

At the present time there are 115,000,000 fewer animals in the herds of Europe than before the war. In hogs alone, there is a shortage of 12,425,000.

Realizing the urgency of the situation, the Governments of the United States and Canada are doing their utmost to secure increased production.

The Dominion government is cooperating with the Provincial Governments to get every province to largely increase its production of hogs in 1918.

Steps have been taken both to safeguard and encourage the producers.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

The Packing Houses are now under Government control, and their profits are restricted. The hog producer is assured HIS FAIR SHARE of the price paid by the consumer.

The Flour Mills are under a form of license and will be operated with restrictions on profits. Bran and shorts will be available at reasonable prices.

This year's huge United States corn crop will be available to Canadian producers. It is estimated at 600,000,000 bushels greater than last year's, and there will be a large surplus for export. This corn crop is under effective United States Government control to prevent speculation.

The buying of the meat for the Allies will all be done by the one commission representing the Allies, which will be an influence in stabilising the market and preventing wide fluctuations in price. This fact alone, considered in association with the great meat shortage in Europe, justifies confidence in the profitable possibilities of hog raising in 1918.

EVERY POUND OF PORK NEEDED.

Every pound of pork that can be raised is urgently needed. The troops alone must have millions and millions of pounds of bacon, the British Army ration calling for 1-4 pound of bacon per man per day.

The people of Canada are heart and soul with the heroic boys fighting and tolling in the mud, rain, snow and cold on the European battlefields. The women and children of Britain who have sacrificed so much, those of France who have done men's work in factories and fields, and those of Italy, which is now suffering invasion by the German despoilers, all of these, as well as the soldiers, need a vast quantity of food that only Canada and the United States can supply by greatly increased production.

SAVE THE YOUNG SOWS.

Young sows which are slaughtered now only produce about 150 pounds of meat per sow. Each one that is bred will produce many times that quantity of meat in 1918.

The FORD Car

Still "Going Strong" all over the World

But the sooner you buy your Ford the less it will cost you.

From information received a car shortage is inevitable, and an upward revision of prices may be looked for any day.

It is obvious, therefore, that unless the prospective buyer acts reasonably soon, he will find it a difficult matter to obtain the car he wants at any price.

It is practically certain that the demand for Ford Cars will very soon exceed the output, and that the shortage will compel a radical revision in car prices upwards.

The Ford Touring Car is still the Universal motor car of the world—the car of the multitudes; and, up to date, is still selling at last year's price, viz., $495, F.O.B. Ford. The cheapest car of any similar model of any other make is nearly Double the price.

The sum and substance of the whole matter is: that the prospective car buyer will save money now and afterwards by booking his order NOW. We have put into effect a plan which should prove eminently satisfactory to those who can book their order forthwith for future delivery. Our salesmen will be glad to explain this plan.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Your Town Council and the city need you pay your poll tax now. Having been in this glorious City of Peterborough, working two weeks for the Quaker Oats, and wearing out $5.00 worth of side walks, I suggest it very near time the City of Peterborough exempted the returned soldiers. (That is the man who has seen active service) from poll tax. I as one of those boys, think it an evil shame to make them pay this lovely sum. How this money is being utilized goodness knows. Oh, for a labour leader who could work things out to better end! Why is one not up for Peterborough?. I should take away sore recollections of Peterborough.

Thanking you for your valuable space. Gott straffe poll tax three times. I am an Australian.

H. WHITE,
C.W.V.A.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Many absurd and puerile remarks have been made by the members of the Tribunal Board in this city, but the offence of yesterday, in which the physicians were accused of hampering the work of the Medical Board because they were not on it, is so extravagant and insulting as to demand instant refutation. To use Judge Huycke's own words: "The doctors are making a record with their letters. They're trying to block the work of the Medical Board because they are not on it." I have no knowledge of the letter in question or of the doctor who wrote it.

One can hardly realise that anyone, even in a less exalted position than Judge Huycke, could or would dare hurl such an insult at the medical profession—a profession that ranks highest of professions next to that of the clergy—a profession for which the most precious gifts are sacrificed, health and strength—a profession where a man is brought into closer contact than any other, with life and death.

To say the physicians would sign a certificate, which is practically taking an oath, and not do so sacredly and conscientiously, is most scandalous. Anyone who has a small and narrow confidence in his fellow man must miss a lot of the best in life.

Not only does Judge Huycke insult the physicians not on the Medical Board, but the medical men who are presiding as well. Certainly they would resent such remarks as regards "Because they're not on it."

Does Judge Huycke mean the other physicians are jealous of the popularity of the Medical Tribunal? Or does he mean they are envious of the big fee of five dollars per day? Surely Judge Huycke does not think the doctors on the Medical Board are being well paid or have an easy job. Does he realise at what a sacrifice these men are offering their services? They are certainly are not doing it for the remuntration that is in it or the pouplarity either. They must do it from a feeling inspired by patriotism. Even insurance companies pay four dollars for a single examination.

I am certain any of the medical men on the Medical Board would accept as correct any report, if it were submitted to them, from a man's family physician. A family physician is certainly in a better position to know one's physical capability, knowing the family history.

The Medical Tribunal physicians have such numbers to examine that it is almost impossible for them not to occasionally overlook ailments. Many people have not told their troubles to the physicians, partly as it would sound dictatory, and more particularly because a man of even average refinement is so shocked at the procedure of examination that he is almost speechless.

However, Judge Huycke's views do not need any explanation to the people. It will take more than his scathing remarks to shatter the confidence, love and affection one feels for his family physician. Despite the fact that Judge Huycke doubts and questions the honour, sincerity, and truth of a physician, as a general belief, it is an undisputed fact that when a physician gives a certificate that a man should be exempted, he gives it from an honest conviction, carefully thought out, that the applicant, even after training, would not be physically fit to go in the firing line.

Judge Huycke's attitude serves merely to instance how military enthusiasm will override even an otherwise calm and judicial mind.—I remain, yours truly,

Louise M. McNulty.

Peterborough, Dec. 1, 1917.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—In the excitement of a Parliamentary election at the present time we are apt to forget that there will be a municipal election in a month's time, and as Mayor Duffus' term expires at the end of this year, it will be up to the ratepayers to choose a man to preside over the Council for the next term. It is not likely that Mr. Hartley or Mr. Green will offer themselves as candidates again, and Alderman Duncan has also been turned down by the ratepayers, so he will hardly try it again. The only aspirants that I can see would be Alderman McIntyre or Alderman Stratton, two very good men, but as to Alderman Stratton—since he has taken over the Review newspaper, I would be inclined to think that he would hardly care to give the time that the office would demand. If such would be the case, why, Alderman McIntyre would appear to be the only aspirant for the Mayor's chair, and if no other man aspires, why, it would save an election by electing him by acclamation. Of course, Mr. McIntyre may not care to undertake the job; but if he should, I have no doubt he would fill the position satisfactorily. Let the ratepayers think this matter over and not leave it to the last moment. Every ratepayer should take an interest in the welfare of the city. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space.—Yours truly,

An Interested Ratepayer.

AN ELECTION LEMON.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—According to an Ottawa announcement, packing house profits are to be cut very materially. This is election time, and something must be done. There are to be no more one or two or four million dollar years among our food "controllers." The Government, now on trial, says that "up to seven per cent. the packing firm may keep all its profits. If the profits exceed seven per cent., and do not exceed fifteen per cent., one-half of the profits in excess of seven per cent. are to go to the Government and the other half to the packer. All profits in excess of fifteen per cent., are to go to the Government."

Will you tell me, Mr. Editor, how this is going to help to cheapen the price of bacon to the working man? If the excessive profits are to be handed over to the Government, how will that reduce the price of bacon to the consumer?

Will it prevent the packing houses from continuing to pay long prices for hogs in their eagerness to fill fat contracts? Will it bring down the price of hogs so that the working man may hope for a change in the price of pork?

If the Government had been in earnest in trying to reduce the cost of living, why did they not fix the profits to packing houses the way profits have been fixed for coal dealers. Then there would be no undue inflating of the market prices of hogs and retail prices would soon come down.

Whether this apparent peach, as worked out by Ottawa officials, turns into a lemon depends largely on what the Government will do with the rebated excessive profits of the pork packers.—Yours,

Inquirer.

Sir,—In consequence of numerous complaints made to me by the farmers as to the working out of the Military Service Act by the Exemption Tribunals, I recently sent a letter to the Prime Minister asking for a full explanation of how the Government intend to make the selective draft after the Tribunals have completed their work, and in reply have received the following letter:

"Military Service Branch,

"Ottawa, 30th November, 1917.

Military Service Act, 1917.

"Sir,—I have the honour, by direction to reply to your letter of the 26th addressed to the Right Honorable, the Prime Minister.

"You will have noticed in the press of a few days ago that the Prime Minister pointed out very clearly that food production of all kinds was essential, and that farmers and others bona fidely engaged in this work must not be selected.

"You have doubtless also noticed in a speech of the Honorable the Minister of Militia, in which he stated that even if those engaged in food production, such as farmers, etc., were drafted in error, that on proper proof to him, he would see that they were discharged.

"I think this fully meets the suggestion contained in your letter.

"Yours truly,

MODEL BALLOON HERE FROM ITALY RIVALS ZEPPELIN

AN ATLANTIC PORT.—Bringing a model of a dirigible baloon the marvelous performance of which, it is believed, will cast the Zeppelins into the discard altogether and be a great factor in bringing the war to an end, Lieutenant Luigi Crescentini, a civil engineer connected with the Italian Aviation Corps, arrived here to discuss the future of the new airship with the American army and navy authorities.

MAJOR C. A. V. McCORMACK, 3rd Toronto Battalion, "Solider Win-the War" candidate, who is contesting Parkdale Riding against H. Mowat, Unionist, and Gordon Waldron, Laurierite.

"I am not at liberty to disclose the details of the new Ferlanini dirigible," said Lieutenant Crescentini, "but I may say that it is shaped somewhat like a dolphin; 360 feet in length and is capable of going at the rate of fifty to sixty miles an hour at an altitude of 5,600 meters. This is more than fourteen hundred meters higher than the Zeppelins can rise.

"The Ferlanini dirigible can carry, in addition to its crew, four towns of bombs. Without so ponderous and space-occupying a cargo, it can easily carry fifty passengers."

Coming here on a special mission from his government, was Colonel Ettore Mazzucco, of the Italian infantry, who was wounded recently at the Isonzo front. The Colonel wore two bars of service stripes, having been through all the Italian campaign from the Abyssinian war to the present one.

The steamship brought in addition to sixteen first and 165 second cabin and 651 steerage passengers, 340 sacks of mail, the first mail matter sent from Italy directly in many mont's. She is also said to be the only vessel carrying passengers between this country and Italy at the present time.

The voyage, both passengers and officers said, was wholly uneventful.

OLD KING COAL.

He may be a jolly, warm-hearted soul, but he has fits of being very severe with his subjects. The dusky old monarch is reigning with a tight hand and closed fist for this winter. He is not the genial, generous giver of heat and power in abundance and to spare. His palace is in the mines of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and the Central States. His servants, with their petty squabbles, do not move him out as fast as his subjects would like to see him come. And when he is out the railroads find him so big they can hardly move him at all.

The people up in the North-Western states said King Coal was going to Canada too much, so Uncle Sam persuaded him to make Minnesota a visit and cheer up the people there. This was done as requested, but tied up so many boats in the Lakes that Uncle Sam decided the king had better look out a bit more after the Canadians, so now we shall have enough of his mineral majesty to keep things going this winter.

Fixing the price of coal will not bring any more from the mine. Perhaps a pinch will wake us up.

Old King Coal is a good friend to us all. Let us not waste his bounty any longer.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Toys, Toys, For Little Girls and Boys

A Visit to the Toyman's Shop on the Third Floor of Richard Hall & Sons, With Santa Claus At Home

A peep into the "Toyman's Shop," on the third floor of Richard Hall and Sons, will bring joy to any child — grown-ups, too! Here you will find all the old favourites as well as many new ones, too—toys for the girls—toys for the boys—toys for the little tots—and some more toys.

Such a complete and varied stock of play things you won't be able to resist them—for they are the liveliest, cunningest, queerest, most fascinating little frivolities you can imagine. And they didn't come from Germany, either, but are the ingenious handy work of Canadian, American and Japanese geniuses in toy making.

With the first fall of snow, preparations for the "Toyman's Shop" were begun, and a large section of the third floor in the Hall store was attractively fitted up for the reception of Santa Claus and his big load of toys. For the next three weeks "Toyman's Shop" will be all primed up for filling the little stockings with the cheer which helps to make Christmas the supreme holiday of the year for the little folks.

Don't disappoint your boy and girl by being too late. Do as much of your toy buying as is possible early in the season. This works out to your advantage as well as to the advantage of the salespeople in "Toyman's Shop," because it enables them to give you more attention, and obviates the last minute Christmas rush.

Among the playthings, large and small, that are calculated to amuse and satisfy dreams of childhood, the display includes a varied assortment of dolls of all kinds, stuffed animals, horses, donkeys, elephants, rabbits, pigs, etc., musical chimes, horns, shoe fly rockers, doll's tea sets, metal trains, engines, fire trucks, friction locomotives and motors, dolls' buggies, Teddy bears, drums, blocks of all kinds, lead soldiers, girls' sleighs, and boys' sleighs, games, decorated toy furniture, and many kinds of mechanical toys. Take the elevator to "Toyman's Shop." The whole store is in Christmas garb.

SKATER IS DROWNED

Companion Saved by Heroic Action of Young Girl

Canadian Press Despatch:

KINGSTON, Dec. 1.—While skating near Tichborne, Clifford Knapp was drowned, and his companion, Daniel McEwen, was rescued through the persistent and heroic efforts of fifteen year old Louise Sadow, who in answer to his calls for help, hurried over one mile of ice to the rescue. McEwen had broken through several times and was too exhausted to seize the pole extended to him by the girl. She twisted it around his clothing, however, and dragged him up to solid ice.

Commencement At Collegiate On Tues. Evening, Dec. 4th

The citizens are cordially invited to attend the annual commencement exercises at the Collegiate Institute on Tuesday evening, December 4th. The students have prepared an interesting programme, and there will be the presentation of the prizes won during the year. A feature of this commencement will doubtless be the address by the Principal, Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, on "Our Heroic Dead," a tribute to the former students who have fallen in battle. The Collegiate's Honour Roll now numbers thirty-nine, and their memory is being perpetuated by their individual pictures hung in the Collegiate's corridors. Graduates of the Collegiate should make a special effort to attend the commencement exercises, which have been arranged as follows:

Musical Selection—The Institute Orchestra.

The Chairman's Address—Vincent Eastwood, Esq.

Presentation High School Entrance Prize—Capt. J. H. Burnham.

Swedish Folk Drill—Collegiate Institute Girls, under direction of Miss L. Sanderson, B.A.

AMERICAN ASSISTANCE TO RUSSIA

Russian Ambassador Discusses Best Form It Can Take

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

PARIS, Dec. 1.—America's greatest aid to Russia now would be to assume leadership in a movement for the Allies to restate their war aims in simple, unmistakable language, in the opinion of Russia's envoy at the Inter-Allied Conference. Mr. Makelakoff, whom Premier Kerenesky appointed Ambassador to France, and who sits by courtesy in the Inter-Allied Conference as Russia's unofficial representative, told the United Press to-day he was hopeful of the conference approving such a plan of support and of restating the Allied aims.

"How can America best help Russia," he reiterated, answering the United Press correspondent's question.

"First of all, by helping other allies in their military work. It is impossible for America to assist Russia in a military way at the present time.

"Second. America should support Russia's sane elements in their effort to defeat the Bolsheviki propaganda, which asserts this is an Imperial war. This could best be effected by restating in unmistakable language the exact aims of America and of the Allies.

"Third, when Russia established a government that America resume splendid material assistance heretofore given us."

"The second suggestion I have given is the most important of all, because Russia will liven to America. She knows America's unselfish purposes. From the highest sources to-day the United Press learned that after several conferences between Makelakoff and members of the American mission, the delegates come to United States sympathize with Makelakoff's suggestions. They will probably give firm support to his plans when the Inter-Allied Conference discussed that phase.

ENGLAND HOPES THE WORLD IS NOT MISLED BY LETTER

Most of the Papers Agree With Bonar Law That the Publication of Lansdowne's Letter Was a "National Misfortune"

"MARQUIS OF HANDS UP"

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Dec. 1.—England fervently hopes the world is not misled by the Marquis of Lansdowne's letter. There is apprehension lest the viewpoint taken by the statesman be mistakenly attributed as that of the majority of Englishmen. The publication of Lansdowne's views has created a bitter whirlwind of dispute. Supporters pro and con are both quoting President Wilson freely in support of and against the former Foreigner Minister's views. The anti-Lansdowne adherents insist the principles enumerated are utterly opposed to the Wilsonian viewpoint, while the supporters of the "no knockout" idea declare it is the essence of the American President's policies. Most of the press agreed with Bonar Law to-day that the publication of the letter was a "national misfortune." The Evening News, one of the Northcliffe papers, dubbed Lansdowne "the Marquis of Hands Up" and bitterly denounced his message. The Globe referred to the Marquis' pronouncement as a stab in the back, comparing him to Caillaux in France. The Westminster Gazette believed that powerful interests were behind Lansdowne. The Star defended the letter as likely at least to cause discussion, out of which might arise some concrete fact of value. The Evening Standard likewise interpreted it not as a slogan of pacifism.

Y. M. C. A. WORK TO BE ILLUSTRATED BY LANTERN SLIDES

On Saturday evening at 7.15 o'clock a treat has been prepared for the "B" and "C" Employed Boys and School Boys at the Y.M.C.A. A series of views showing Y.M.C.A. work throughout Canada and overseas will be shown with the assistance of Vernon Fiske and his lantern. On Sunday evening at 8.30 o'clock these views and a few others will be shown to the older boys and men, this service to take the place of the regular Sunday afternoon meeting. Every man and older boy is cordially invited to attend the Sunday evening service, when an enjoyable time will be had by means of the Association views and the use of appropriate song slides.

We would call the attention of the parents of Peterborough to the fact that now is the time when a boy would appreciate a Y.M.C.A. membership more than at any other time of the year. All Y.M.C.A. activities are now at their height, and gymnasium, plunge and game rooms are being very largely used by the boys. The six classes of the Boys Department are engaged in a membership campaign for a supper and a pennant; so as these boys seek to persuade their chums to join the Association, we trust that the parents' consent may readily be obtained, for it means much to a boy to be given a Y.M.C.A. membership early in life.

SO that we may become better acquainted with more of our boys and girls this Christmas, we are giving you this fine Christmas Tree loaded down with beautiful and valuable presents. Ten of the presents are in sealed boxes. Nobody but Uncle Peter has seen what they contain, but on each one has been drawn a puzzle picture that tells what is in it. No. 8 represents Boxing Gloves. Now can you guess what Christmas present for a boy or girl is in each of the other nine? Get some one to help you if you like, but write out yourself your answers to all of the ten pictures. On January 31, 1918, Uncle Peter, who edits our page for boys and girls, will judge the answers and award the big cash prizes as above to the boys and girls complying with the conditions of the contest whose answers are all correct, neatest and best written. So get busy and send in an answer to-day, and this Christmas may be the happiest you have ever had.

Our "Success Club" for Boys and Girls has provided these fine prizes and hundreds of Christmas presents as well. You'll hear all about the "Success Club" when you send your answers, and if you wish you can become a member free and receive the lovely Club Emblem Pin.

Thousands of boys and girls in Canada are already in the "Success Club" and proudly wear the Club Pin. If you are bright and quick to send in the answers, you can join the "Success Club" too and win a big cash prize and a dandy Christmas present as well.

Only boys and girls under fifteen years of age may send answers, and each boy and girl desiring his entry to compete for one of the fine prizes will be required to perform a small service for the Club, for which an additional valuable reward will be given. Address your answers to

My Dear Mrs. Wood.—Your shipment of clothing arrived at a most opfor up and down the Coast when the portune time last week. It is all very useful, indeed. I was just despairing over getting enough to do up parcels steamer arrived with several bales, barrels, etc. Our two mail boats are leaving this week on their last trip and it is our last opportunity of sending parcels to the needy ones North and West of here, and the real destitute ones are North.

I think I have a parcel for every family; I also had to get the Christmas boxes ready to go. Fortunately I had enough toys on hand to make up five boxes. These are sent to the school teacher in each place, and she carefully secrets them until the proper time. Our real cold weather is starting now—stormy and windy.

Thank you and you co-workers for your help in this corner of the Master's Vineyard.

Very sincerely yours,
M. S. MURRAY, R.N.

TEMPLE CORPS TO HOLD BANQUET

The Temple Corps of the Salvation Army are having a great banquet and entertainment on Monday night to their adherents, those who attend their meetings and whose names are not on their official roll.

Nearly 300 invitations have been sent out, and those with families will be bringing them all. The banquet, which starts at 6:45, will be followed by a splendid entertainment including some war pictures, thrown on the screen by Adjutant McElhiney.

Adjutant Burton will arrive in town at 4 o'clock and will conduct a special meeting to-night and all day Sunday.

KIDNEY DISEASE OVERCOME.

Mr. James Proux, cattle dealer, Shebo, Sask., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease; at times I was bad with backache, and derangements of the digestive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney-Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six years, all I need say is that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

SCANDANAVIAN RULERS AGREE ON STRICT NEUTRALITY

Kings of Norway, Denmark and Sweden Have Reached a New Agreement to Maintain Cordial Relations Between Kingdoms

AN IMPORTANT DECISION

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CHRISTIANIA, Friday — The kings of Norway, Denmark and Sweden, at their conference here, says an official statement, reached an agreement that by reason of the harmony existing between the three countries, however long the war may last, and whatever form it may take, the cordial relations and mutual confidence of the three kingdoms shall be maintained. It is the full intention of their governments each for itself to observe the utmost degree of neutrality toward all belligerent powers.

THE C.P.R. AND FOOD CONSERVATION

Nothing that the C.P.R. has done in the direction of food conservation has resulted in so many letters of commendation, as the footnote printed on all menu cards on C.P.R. dining-cars and hotels." This reads:—

"In the interest of food conservation, young lambs, little chickens, little pigs, and their by-products, are not used in the C.P.R. service."

The editor of a prominent mining journal says in a leading article:—

"It must have required some grit, as well as a full sense of duty for an institution which includes such hotels and restaurants as are found on that railway, to put such a memorandum before their high-class patrons. But it has been done and its moral effect has been wider than the actual wastage that has been saved. Those who have read the notice have, in some cases at all events, followed the good example of the railway, and have given up purchasing any of the immature animal food.

"If the food controller could prohibit the sale or use of these young animals it would be another means of food economy."

Few of them have been more good-humoured than Grant Rightmeyer, 569 Sherbrooke Street, who resignedly accepted the Tribunal's decision to disallow his exemption, as if he were expecting it. He applied on domestic grounds, stating that he was helping keep up the home to which he gave generous support. His parents are living, and he has one brother making shells in town. He agreed with Mr. Aylmer that sacrifices had to be made, and when the Board refused his appeal, he asked Mayor Duffus to recommend him for the mechanical branch of the Aviation Corps, for which he is fitted by reason of his occupation.

Afraid of the Food.

It was a question of food, quality not quantity, that restrained the enlisment impulse that had urged Jas. Smith, 47 Alfred Street, to consider military service before Conscription came into force. At one time he worked on the farm, until the bulky pay envelopes of the munitions factories lured him into the city.

"I'd have enlisted long ago, only my constitution wasn't strong enough. I've been doctoring for years for acute indigestion, which affects my heart."

"Making munitions is not easy work," Mr. Aylmer remarked.

"I was able to get good food at my boarding house."

"They feed you well in the Army," Mr. Moore mentioned.

"It's the quality I'm thinking of," Smith replied.

Mr. Aylmer remarked that Smith was an A2 man, and had already been examined.

"No, I wasn't examined," he said. "I was only overlooked."

Smith was sent up for re-examination.

Hadn't a Care in the World.

Ernest S. Davey, 167 Brock Street, was perfectly frank in his admissions to the Tribunal.

He was willing to accept exemption on any grounds, and would leave it to the Board to select for him the best reason they could think of. He wasn't particular about it, and was willing to abide by the Tribunal's choice.

Davey is a man of good appearance, and his nonchalant attitude was a variant in the long list of appeals. He admitted he had no responsibility, no one to care for, and no one to care for him. He has no home here, is unattached, and apparently fancy free. The Tribunal couldn't think of any adequate reason for exempting him, and recommended to him the responsibility of fighting for the Empire.

Claim disallowed.

Lorne D. W. Deeves, 265 Park Street, applied on domestic grounds. He said his father was unable to work and the support of the family fell largely upon himself. There are four younger brothers, the oldest being 18 years. Exemption disallowed.

Leo Galvin, R. R. No. 4, Smith, applied for exemption as a farmer. He said he was the only man on one hundred acres he was working. Exemption allowed until he ceases to be employed as a farmer.

Asked That Brother Be Left.

Alonzo Coughlin said he would rather go than his brother, whose claim was rejected last week. Their father is dead, and the applicant felt that one of the boys should be at home. As he had not been examined, but had sought exemption on medical grounds, he was sent up to the doctors.

Donald O. Post, 111 Stewart Street, expected his exemption to be a mere formality, as he had lost his right eye two years ago. The Tribunal was not a medical board, Mr. Aylmer stated, and a certificate of disability from the military doctors was necessary.

John A. Storey, 407 Wolfe Street, applied on domestic grounds. To-day is his 24th birthday. He gave the details of his appeal, and also asked for another medical examination, which was granted.

Willis A. Rutherford, who lives with his parents in North Monaghan, near the city, applied on domestic grounds. He has two brothers working out of town. Both of them have been in the Army, but neither has got farther than Canadian camps, and both are now discharged. Rutherford asked for exemption as the support of his parents. Disallowed.

Orville Jinks appeared again claiming exemption on physical grounds, and also because of his father's enlistment with the 93rd Battalion. He was sent up for re-examination, and returned with his A2 category unchanged.

Mr. Aylmer referred to his father's medical history sheet, doubting that Mr. Jinks had given his right age.

GERMAN VIEW OF VICTORY

Lensch Thinks It Will Be Won If the Old Frontiers Are Held

Germany would be bound to emerge the victor in the world war if a "peace by understanding" were to leave her present territory practically intact, asserts Dr. Paul Lensch, writing in a recent issue of Die Glocke, the weekly organ of the pro-Kaiser Socialist majority faction. Dr. Lensch, who is one of the strongest defenders in the Reichstag of the pro-Government attitude adopted at the outbreak of the war by the so-called Scheidmann Socialists, backs up his contention as follows:

"Just as Frederick the Great is counted the victor in the Seven Years' War because he succeeded in maintaining the status quo against vastly superior forces and in sticking to Silesia, so, in this case, the Central Powers will be counted the victors if they succeed in preventing any diminution in the extent of their former frontiers, in keeping Alsace-Lorraine, the colonies, and Trent and Trieste, and in refusing their enemies any indemnity. The consequences which such a peace would have for British world power we have often explained. It would be for Great Britain the greatest defeat in its history and the beginning of its ruin. It is just because people in Britain are well aware of that that they are resolute for the war and will hear nothing of a peace by understanding.

"For that very reason, on the other hand, the Central Powers will and can press all the more persistently for such a peace. . . . Germany will have won the war if she does not lose it, but Britain will have lost the war if she does not win it."

Then, as summarized by The London Times, he goes on to explain that the map, as this war leaves it, will be nothing final, and that only in the coming decades "will the process of economic and political disintegration which this war has produced in many countries show its effects." Only then will "the true time of harvest" come for Germany. The mistake of the Pan-Germans is not that they want too much, but that they "want everything at once."

In his connection Herr Lensch remarks:

"Here the Bible saying appplies. 'Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.' First bring about the peace by understanding which secures Germany's political independence, territorial integrity, and economic freedom of development, and then Germany will have shown herself so strong that 'all these things' shall be added unto her."

Herr Lensch denounces the Pan-Germans on the one hand and the Socialist anti-Kaiser minority on the other hand, because all interferences with "the unity between Government and Parliament," and with Foreign Minister von Kuhlmann, who has preached unity to the Reichstag Committee in "very happy, not to say fiery, words," is calculated to spoil the German plan.

Dr. Lensch began his article by complaining that "in one night a frost has fallen upon the flowery dreams of our peace prophets." The frost was the speech delivered at Leeds by the "English barrister, Asquith." Herr Lensch exclaims:

"These people do not want any peace by understanding; they want the smashing of Germany, and, with this end in view, declarations as to Germany's readiness for peace do not suit their book at all.

"These declarations act, no less than our submarine war, as gradually weakening agencies upon the warlike temper of the peoples and they prepare people's minds for the 'understanding' which Britain cannot ultimately avoid."

PRESENTED CASE OF PIPES TO P. C. PRATT

P. C. Pratt was surprised by the members of the Police Department yesterday afternoon when, on the eve of his leaving the force, he was presented with a case of pipes. Chief Thompson made the presentation on behalf of the men and while expressing regret at P. C. Pratt's departure, extended the best wishes of the men for his success in his new position as one of the shippers with the Matthews-Blackwell Co. P. C. Pratt made a brief reply, thanking the Chief and the men for their kindness.

Anyway, the golden rule comes in handy for measuring the conduct of others.

UNIONIST LEADERS WELCOMED AT MEETING IN ARMOURIES

There was only one issue, the speaker declared, and that was, "Are you for sending reinforcements through the Military Service Act, or are you going to wait and take a referendum?"

The Union government stood for immediate reinforcements and that was why the War Veterans were present to support Sir Robert Borden. The chairman then introduced Capt. J. H. Burnham, who was well received.

Capt. Burnham.

The West Peterborough candidate spoke but briefly. In beginning his address he said the audience should be guided in their votes by what the boys at the front wanted. "If the boys at the front told me to oppose Sir Robert Borden, and to support Sir Wilfrid Laurier, I would do so," declared Capt. Burnham, who remarked that he was wedded to no party.

Discussing the Military Service Act Capt. Burnham argued that there was nothing new in the principal of conscription. For instance men were compelled to pay their taxes. If there was any one in the audience who would not pay taxes if he didn't have to he would like him to stand up so he could get a photograph of him. Men were compelled to be decent or else they would go to hell—the hell where some people had consigned war profits.

The former Minister of Militia turned his staccato delivery first to the question of the composition of the Union Government. The Conservative party had been joined by the leading Liberals of Canada. The Hon. N. W. Rowell, leader of the Liberals of Ontario, Mr. Morris, the leader of the Liberals of Manitoba, Mr. Calder of Saskatchewan, and Mr. A. L. Sifton of Alberta; in Nova Scotia, Messrs. Murray and MacLean, and Mr. Carvell of New Brunswick. "In short these men have not deserted the Liberal party, they have carried the Liberal party with them. The Union Government contains the best elements of all the people of Canada, of those who love liberty and are freemen. We have against us Laurier and his retrograde policy; his policy of negation."

Referring to the Kitchener and Sherbrooke demonstrations Sir Sam said: "It is true that it hasn't come to an open scrap yet, but the boys had better get their sleeves rolled up. Human liberty is in danger in Canada to-day, owing to the intriguing, the machiavellian treachery and the cringing diplomacy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his present followers."

VOLUNTARY ENLISTMENT.

Recalling the first enthusiasm of voluntary enlistment, General Hughes said that the administration had no conception that the war would become one of exhaustion. Hence the system of voluntary recruiting was followed. Of those contingents that assembled at Valcartier there was no finer detachment than that which Peterborough had sent under Col. Mills and the late Major Bennett. Referring to the participation of the Province of Quebec at that time, General Hughes said he had not found that same measure of enthusiasm, nor the sentiment that had been expected through the racial ties with old France.

"I must say of the old 65th regiment of Montreal that it did its duty and that during the first five weeks they did rally to the colours. Gradually the recruits contented themselves with volunteering for home service, and by winter there was not the spirit there should have been."

"I waited on Sir Wilfrid Laurier to obtain his support. He spoke at Napanee, the old United Empire Loyalist centre, at Montreal, where he devoted most of his address to bilingualism, and in Quebec. These are all I can trace of what he has done. I must say Mr. Lemieux gave me valuable assistance. We tried to get the sons of the leading men of Quebec to enlist, but they didn't respond as we expected. We waited on the Cardinal in an endavour to get him to take an interest, and called on Archbishop Bruchesi. I am free to say that his whole heart and soul is in the war, but unfortunately our efforts were futile."

General Hughes told of the commission he had given to recruit a pioneer or woodsman's battalion among the French-Canadians, but after the time allotted Col. White had to relinquish his task, admitting that he couldn't raise the men. They had told him, he said, that their leaders had advised them not to go to the front, to let the Englishmen go and their jobs in Ontario and the other provinces would be filled by these men after the war.

Sir Sam said he had seen around Campbellford young men from Quebec who would make good soldiers filling the jobs that ought to be filled by men of that district. Turning to Sir Robert Borden he said: "It is a matter of great importance that Quebec be brought up to the status of the other provinces." That province should line up with the others in the number of men gone to the front before the industries of the other provinces are depleted by the number of their men who have gone to the front. In Victoria County he had seen hundreds of farms with hardly one man on them and the work being done by women.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN

Sir Sam said he did not regard that as even-handed justice, "not that we don't want our boys to go, tribunals couldn't hold them, but we feel that action should be taken to compel those men to go who have not gone as they should."

"I have heard people say they would vote against the Government because one son out of three or four had been taken. By what right has that son to remain at home because his father owns five or six hundred acres when the sons of the poor people have to go to the front to be shot at? I say we want the honours to go to these families that have four or five boys." A family should be ashamed of itself, he added, if it hadn't a son in khaki, no matter how many acres it had.

Less than forty battleships of the first line was the only power that prevented Germany from invading Canada, said Sir Sam, and in his picture of a possible naval invasion of the St. Lawrence he placed "these young gentlemen taking to the tall timbers, leaving their wives and families to the mercy of the invader."

General Hughes briefly described the feature of the battle of St. Julien, when the thin Canadian line, outnumbered ten to one, checked the German army of 120,000, and saved Calais and British control of the Channel and of the seas.

Sir Sam closed with an exhortation to the men and women electors to stand by the men overseas by placing the Union Government in power on December 17th.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN.

Sir Robert Borden opened his address with a few words of welcome to the large number of ladies present. "The ladies," said the speaker, "have been called upon to make the greatest sacrifices of the war. Should the conflict continue longer than we anticipate, the women of Canada will be called upon to make still greater sacrifices and we have no doubt they will live up to the high traditions of sacrifice and service that has characterized the work of their sisters in the old land.

I do not come before you as a leader of a political party, said Sir Robert, but as one who has sought to bring together men who are animated by a sincere desire to win the war. We have in the Government at the present time, eight Liberals who are inspired by a spirit of unity and self sacrifice. The Union Government is a non-party government. It is not a question of party with the men in that government any more than it is among the boys at the front. The Liberals who have entered the Union Government hold important posts. It would have been futile to have formed a Union Government unless we gave to the Liberals equal representation. This has been my pledge and it is my pledge now.

Military Service Act.

Turning to the Military Service Act the speaker introduced a few words of appreciation of the services performed by Sir Sam Hughes in connection with the formation of the first Canadian contingent. Sir Robert recalled an occasion when he visited Valcartier and found Sir Sam Hughes greatly perturbed over the prospects of having to leave a surplus of several thousand men behind in Canada when the first contingent sailed for overseas. Sir Robert Borden advised the then Minister of Militia to send them all over, as they might be needed. Relieved of the unwelcome prospect of leaving behind several thousand men, Sir Sam wept like a child.

"These men," said Robert Borden, have brought home a record which Canada, pray God, may never lose. It was due to the valiant conduct of the Canadians that the Huns did not back their way to Calais. Our first line of defence is overseas, where our men are now fighting. Our second line is at home. If the line over there gives way the battle will have to be fought on the second line. What does my political future amount to in the face of such a supreme issue? asked Sir Robert.

Two Alternatives.

Upon my return from Great Britain last summer I realized that there was one of two alternatives before me, and that the Canadian forces overseas could no longer be supported unless we had some system of selective draft to keep the Canadian forces up to strength. It was not an agreeable task to ask the flower of Canada's youth to enter that struggle. It was a hard and painful duty to decide that the law of Canada which had been on the statute books for forty-nine years should be invoked. In enforcing the act we decided to follow the course adopted in other countries and appoint exemption tribunals throughout the country. If exemptions have been granted too freely then the Government of the country will exercise its right of appeal and see that justice is done. It is the intention of the Government to see that the act is enforced fairly.

The Issue.

The issue in this election, said the speaker, is to decide whether the Act will be enforced or whether we will have a referendum. I want to tell you that so long as I am Prime Minister there will be no referendum. It would be some time next summer before a referendum could be submitted to the people. With the utmost expedition in the enforcement of the Military Act we will be barely in time. There must be no delay and there will be no delay.

"Now is the hour of salvation," interjected a voice in the audience.

"I quite agree with you my friend," replied Sir Robert. "You have put it more cogently than I have."

The only men who would approve of delay in the enforcement of the Military Service Act are the men who are facing our men on the other side of No Man's Land. Is Canada to stand where she stood in August, 1914, or is she to go out of this war with that honoured name of hers written in gold before the world, soiled and tarnished by her withdrawal. I will leave the matter with you, feeling confident that you will do your duty."

HON. N. W. ROWELL.

The presence of the large number of women at this and the other meetings he had addressed was a striking testimony to their continued interest in the men at the front and in the cause the men are fighting for, observed Hon. Mr. Rowell. "The women of this province and of Canada realize that the issue is of deep and vital moment to the women of Canada, to the homes of Canada and to all that the women and homes stand for in Canada throughout the world." Referring to the returned soldiers, he continued, "it is not without significance in this contest that the men who have served and suffered at the front and whose hearts are across the seas with the men holding the lines are back of the government that is backing up the men."

SIR SAM HUGHES

Mr. Rowell replied to the criticism that the government is not truly union with the present representation of Liberals by pointing out that the first coalition government that effected Confederation, had only three Liberals, George Brown, Oliver Mowat, and William McDougall. "Although there were only three Liberals and twice as many Conservatives there was sufficient Liberals to make coalition government. It was said of George Brown that he had betrayed his friends for office. But we have had a real comfortable time compared with what George Brown had when he joined with Sir John McDonald. What difference does it make what is thought if a great national service is done?"

Union Government Acts.

"We are only six weeks old," continued Mr. Rowell, "and a six months baby is not expected to walk." However, he said, the Union Government had undertaken certain important changes that deserved the public's attention. In the first place all patronage lists have been wiped out. The war purchasing department has been reorganized and in future all supplies for the Department will be purchased by a commission, irrespective of the political views or affiliations of any man who wishes to deal with the government. The Civil Service Act has been extended to apply to the outside service, and hereafter political appointments will not be based on political service or considerations, but on the ability of the men to fill the positions or offices to which they may be appointed.

Dealing with the question of food supplies and prices, and the agitation in connection with the packing industry, the government had decided that the packers were not entitled to more than two per cent. on the actual turnover or total sales for one year. If that two per cent. netted more than seven per cent. on the actual capital invested in the business, the packers may keep up to seven per cent, but between seven and fifteen per cent. the government takes one half of the profits for the state and if the profits exceed fifteen per cent. the whole of that excess is diverted to the state for the benefit of the people and to help defray the expense of the war. No packing house can retain more than eleven per cent. of the actual capital invested, apart from the other war taxes to which the earnings are subjected.

Mr. Rowell emphasized the policy of the government which he said would conscript the wealth as well as the manhood of the country.

"I submit that this is fair and right. When we recall the fact that the majority who have gone overseas were registered as manual labourers, with no asset but the life God had given them, and that threw this whole asset into the scales for liberty, it is only just that wealth and property protected at home should bear their share of the burden in this struggle; and it is the intention of the government to see that they do bear a fair share of the burden."

The representation given to Labour and Agriculture in the new government was mentioned, and Mr. Rowell turned to the Military Service Act. In proceeding to enforce the Act during an election the government was fully aware of the political disadvantage it might create and of local irritation in some places.

"We had to face the issue of whether we should run the risk of losing some seats or face delay in reinforcing the men at the front. The government said, 'let the political disadvantage be what it may, let the local irritation be what it may, we stake our political future on the issue of standing by the men at the front, and trust the people of Canada to back us up in doing so. And if we fail, we fail because we've had too much faith in you. We felt we could trust the courage and patriotism of the Canadian people in this hour of national crisis, that they would stand by the men who stood by us. What are you going to do about it?

A voice from the crowd—"Stay with you."

"I believe you are," replied Mr. Rowell, who concluded his address with a gripping quotation from Rupert Brooke and an appeal for ardent support of the Union government that the sacrifices already made may not have been in vain.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members
Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

William George Lockie, 223 Antrim street, claimed exemption on the grounds of ill health. Applicant has a brother in the 52nd Battery. Lockie said he had stomach trouble.

"Most of us have trouble in getting enough to fill our stomachs. Brown bread and plain living would help you" said Mr. Dumble.

"I have always had it," put in the applicant.

"Then you are used to it by now," observed Mr. Dumble.

The claim was disallowed.

Rating Was Changed.

Egbert Lugora Duffus, 53 Lock street, has his medical rating changed from "A2" to "B1."

The exemption claim of John J. Collins, 38 Hunter street, was disallowed.

J. J. Donegan, R.R. No. 9, was refused exemption.

O. E. Varcoe, teller in the Bank of Montreal, and J. J. Maker, 545 Homewood avenue, both B men, were exempted until B men are required.

D. A. Donoghue, 526 Water street, was sent up for further medical examination.

"E" Men Exempted.

Arthur H. Beatman, Engleburn avenue, Victor J. Sullivan, 57 Hunter street, Alvin Mahaffy, 370 Burnham street, J. E. Genge, 637 Bethune street, H. A. Dunford, 240 Rubidge street, R. C. Prophet, North Monaghan, J. E. Kylie, 556 Rogers St., Samuel Donovan, 52 Olive avenue, K. F. Routley, 416 Stewart street, Garret Allen, Pakeley post office, W. C. Russell, 578 Charlotte street, and W. G. Hendy, 338 Aylmer street, all "E" men were exempted until "E" men are required.

The exemption claim of John Cuttle, 166 Dufferin street, was disallowed.

Over Age.

Robert Andrew Simpson was a little too old for the draft. Applicant said he was willing to go, but his sight was effected. The Board advised Simpson that he was not required to appear before the tribunal as he was over the age limit.

Was Disallowed.

Clinton Henry, 123 Murray street, claimed to be the sole support of his mother.

Mr. Dumble assured the applicant that his mother would receive just as much money if he went to war.

"I don't want to let him go," put in Mrs. Henry, who was present on behalf of her son.

"There are a lot of mothers in the same position," observed Judge Huycke.

The claim was disallowed.

Was Refused Exemption.

John Joseph Hickey, 535 Reid street, was refused exemption.

Oron Varty, 545 Chamberlen street, was sent up for further medical examination.

Guy Nimmo, 203 Perry street, a foreman tool maker, claimed exemption on the grounds of the national importance of his present line of employment. Nimmo was formerly employed with the Canadian Vickers, a Montreal shipbuilding plant. He has two brothers in the war and two brothers are ranching in the west.

The Board was inclined to believe that Nimmo should confine his efforts to the shipbuilding trade rather than shell making.

"I think you have a good claim, but we should have more evidence from your employers," said Judge Huycke.

The claim was disallowed and Nimmo was instructed to appeal and submit sufficient evidence to substantiate his claim for exemption.

Bert Duffus, one of five brothers, one of whom is Mayor J. J. Duffus, appeared before the Tribunal this morning with a claim for exemption on the ground of ill-health and infirmity. Duffus, who is an A2 man, said he had to give up the management of the Duffus Garage, Norwood, on account of his health.

The applicant was sent up for further medical examination.

MR. HALL'S ADDRESS

The Wrongs to the Soldier and His Family Must be Righted.

THE WAR MUST BE WON

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH,—

The following are some of the many reasons why the Electors of West Peterborough, and more particularly the women electors, are appealed to not to vote for Sir Robert Borden and his Candidate, Mr. J. H. Burnham:

BECAUSE Sir Robert Borden sent our soldiers overseas to fight the Ross Rifle, which he knew would jam in the front line trenches and would become a useless weapon when the enemy was pressing them the hardest.

BECAUSE facts are coming to light which give grounds to believe that our Canadian Soldiers are now and have been forced by Sir Robert Borden to do duty overtime to induce them to vote for the Government in order to get a rest.

BECAUSE there are over 100,000 Canadian Soldiers in England who have not been utilized by Sir Robert Borden to give a rest to our weary worn warriors on the firing line.

BECAUSE Sir Robert Borden sent our soldiers overseas to fight for $1.10 a day while the men who remained at home in safety received from $3.75 to $11.00 per day, and recruiting was discouraged on that account.

BECAUSE the pay of our soldiers has not been increased by Sir Robert Borden with the increased cost of living and he does not increase their pay although he knows they are worthy of it.

BECAUSE our soldier's family is suffered by Sir Robert Borden to live on assigned pay and separation allowance of only $35.00 per month when he knows that owing to increased cost of living $1.67 will not go as far as $1.00 did three years ago.

BECAUSE Sir Robert Borden has compelled the soldiers' dependents at home to live on starvation wages; and to answer questions which independent womanhood resents to share in the patriotic funds.

BECAUSE Sir Robert Borden has permitted the Food Barons to bleed our country while our soldiers bleed for it.

BECAUSE Sir Robert Borden has failed to justly reward the soldiers who have returned, has failed to establish technical training schools where their talents and ability could be trained to the best advantage of themselves and has failed to support and maintain our returned soldiers in any way worthy of the great sufferings they have endured.

BECAUSE Sir Robert Borden has allowed the dependents of soldiers to be made the objects of public subscriptions when their dear ones are making such noble sacrifices for Canada.

BECAUSE Sir Robert Borden has failed to co-operate with the United States to assist her to send to France millions of men from the United States who are only too anxious to take their place in the firing line and give the trench tired Canadian, English and French soldiers a period of rest.

BECAUSE Canada has already 400,000 men under arms. The United States should have 5,500,000 men under arms before she has done as well as Canada. She only lacks ships to carry her soldiers to France, and Sir Robert Borden has really done nothing to provide these ships.

BECAUSE Sir Robert Borden, through his Quebec Nationalist Ministers, Blondin and Sevigny, discouraged recruiting in the Province of Quebec, and now seeks to take under the Military Service Act only about 5,000 men from the Province of Quebec and to take the remaining 95,000 men from the rest of English-speaking Canada.

BECAUSE Sir Robert Borden, through Food Controller Hanna, tells the soldiers' dependents to eat less instead of assisting the Farmers to produce more.

BECAUSE the British Statesmen have appealed to Sir Robert Borden for food to feed the British people but he neglects to take any steps whatever to assist in food production. The Allies ask for bread. Sir Robert gives a stone.

BECAUSE Sir Robert Borden is feeding the enemy with the false news that we in Canada are divided; and thus the enemy are encouraged to fight on.

BECAUSE the foreigner from enemy countries can stay at home in safety and draw big wages but our Canadian boys have got to go overseas and fight for $1.10 per day and see their families come to want while the foreigner's family lives in comfort in our midst.

I SHALL SUPPORT any measure that will right these many wrongs and help to win the war.

I SHALL SUPPORT any effective war measure that will bring immediate and constant relief and assistance to our boys at the front.

I SHALL SUPPORT any measure that will increase the soldier's pay and pension.

I SHALL SUPPORT any measure that will increase the allowance to the soldier's family.

I SHALL SUPPORT any measure that will rid this country of the profiteer and grafter and make him disgorge his ill-gotten gains for the benefit of the soldier and his dependents.

I SHALL SUPPORT any measure that will reduce the high cost of living, and will secure increased food production and that will give full value for every dollar paid.

These are some of the many reasons why I confidently appeal to you for your vote and influence in the pending election.

Your Obedient Servant,

R. R. HALL.

Auto Production Will Not Be Cut

U. S. Board Finds Curtailment is Unnecessary

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Drastic curtailment of passenger automobile production which has been talked of since the manufacturers were called into conference recently with the advisory commission of the council of national defence has been found unnecessary, according to expert advisers of the commission. Facilities of the plants were said to-day to be sufficient for handling government work now in sight and steel manufacturers have given assurance they can supply all the metal needed.

Judge Lovett, priority director of the war industries board, said last night he did not contemplate an order shutting off freight cars from the automobile industries. The statement was prompted by exaggerated reports of what the government intended to do in restricting the manufacture of so-called non-essential products.

The automobile industries board has a plan to transfer overland all cars intended for sale within 100 miles of the city of manufacture. It was said there was no reason why the radius of transfer might not be extended.

WHAT A LITTLE AD. DID

The other day Mr. Charley Banks, the hustling business getter of the Banks' garage and sporting goods house, Charlotte street, was given such an evidence of the value of "Examiner" advertising that made him "sit up and take notice."

Mr. Banks had a second-hand Overland car, which he wanted a customer for at once, and he very wisely wrote out a short, snappy little advt. to be inserted in the "For Sale" columns of The Examiner. The result was, according to his own statement, three eager applicants were chasing after that Overland actually before the Examiner had time to reach his garage. Needless to say the car was sold that evening, proving that "He who would reap well must sow well," and that "hungry horses make a clean manger."

OBITUARY

JOSEPH LEVASSEUR.

Joseph Levasseur, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Levasseur, of Edison avenue, died this morning in St. Joseph's Hospital, after an illness of about one week's duration.

Deceased who was 17 years of age, was an employee of the De Laval Company up to the time of his illness. He leaves of the immediate family his parents, four brothers, Louis of Rochester, Archie with the United States' army in New Jersey camp, Eldrick and Wilfrid at home and three sisters, Mrs. Birdgenaw and Mrs. Elliott of this city, and Miss Margaret at home.

The funeral will take place on Monday morning at 9 o'clock to the Sacred Heart church, thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

CROUTER—REID.

At St. James' Parsonage, a quiet wedding was solemnized yesterday afternoon, when Mrs. Lily E. Reid was married to Mr. George W. Crouter. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Billington, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. B. Greatrix, pastor of St. James' Church.

LEATHER TAKES A DROP

The buying activities of the Walk-Easy Shoe Store, 330 George Street, touches every corner, and where there is an actual bargain to be had in boots and shoes, this firm tries to get it. Recently the proprietor made a lucky purchase of a $6,000 bankrupt stock, and succeeded in buying at a very low rate on the dollar.

To-day was the first day of the sensational sale of these winter boots; and the way the people kept flocking in for them would look as if the prices were so reduced as to quickly draw buyers.

The price list shows Ladies' $6 Boots for $3.98 and $4.50 Boots for $2.98. In the Men's class, Neolin sole $7 Boots are offered at $4.50, and $5 gun metal Boots at $3.50.

Similar reductions have been made in Misses' and Boys' Boots. The proprietor thinks it is likely that another offer in winter boots like this will occur while the war lasts.

WOUNDED GERMAN SOLDIERS AND THEIR CANADIAN CAPTORS RECEIVING HOT COFFEE AND ROLLS FROM Y. M. C. A. "HUT."

Dr. Depoye, of the Belgian Army Hospital Corps, shakes hands with King Victor of Italy, while King Albert of Belgium is seen getting out of the royal motor car.

Russia's Premier, Kerensky, in a serious mood, consulting a map in the compartment of a railway coach, carrying him on one of his recent hurried trips out of Petrograd.

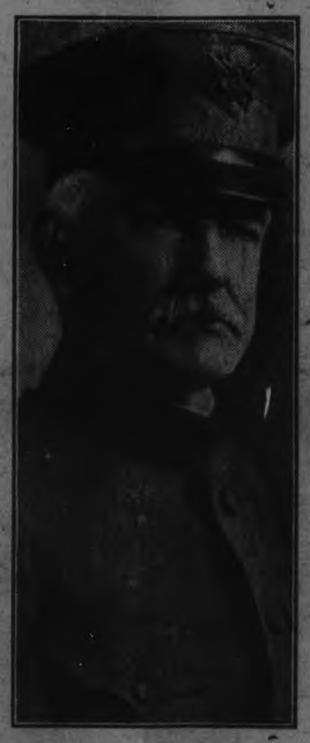
Carrier pigeons are cared for by German "regulation" as carefully as the men themselves. In this front line trench Fritz has designed a special coop with a gas filter sudden gas attack.

How often you hear the question asked: "How do the soldier boys keep warm in their tents during the winter months?" Here is the clever, compact little wood-burning tent stove that does the trick.

Here is the way they serve midday "chow" at the U. S. Army Training Camp, Fort Oglethorpe. This camp boasts of over six miles of trenches and the men undergo intensive training in them for twenty-four hours at a stretch.

Kaiser William II., German Emperor, with members of his staff and of the Imperial party, visiting the oil wells of Rumania, destroyed by the Retreating Rumanians, now restored to full operation by the Germans. So far as known, this is the first photograph of the Kaiser to reach this country since the British authorities excluded German photog raphs and propaganda from the mails. It shows the Kaiser much older appearing than photographs taken early in the war, and that he continues to wear a band of mourning on his undeveloped left arm.

"On Leave." Harry B. Lachman, the painter, ma de this photograph of a young French soldier from the trenches on a visit to his family. The picture has been published widely in Paris periodicals and on French postcards.



Surgeon-General William C. Gorgas, Chief of the Medical Forces of the United States, to whom the health of the American armies at home and abroad is committed. From a new photograph.

British Tommies riveting the base of a veteran 15-inch gun for service in a new sector, the inscription testifying to its record in 1915-16, and at Vimy Ridge in 1917.

First photograph to reach the United States of the German capture and occupation of the Russian port of Riga early in September, visited a few days later by the German Emperor, who made there a speech of victory to his troops. In the background can be seen a bridge destroyed on the day before the Germans entered the city.

Sitting, Pte. Everett E. Miller, and standing, Pte. Overton W. Miller, sons of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Miller, Napanee, enlisted January, 1916; went overseas with the 146th Battalion in September, 1916; transferred to the 99th Reserve Battalion. Everett was drafted to the 4th C.M.R. in France, where he served 11 months in the trenches. Reported killed in action Oct. 26th, 1917. His youngest brother, Overton, is still serving with the 2nd Canadian Labor Battalion "somewhere in France."

Kitty, mascot bear of the Kingston Depot Battalion, proves to be of a very affectionate nature, particularly where "eats" are concerned.

Dr. W. T. Asselstine, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Asselstine, 138 Bay Street, left Kingston with the 72nd Battery, October, 1916. Served ten months in France; now sick in hospital in England.

Gunner S. A. Parker, enlisted in 33rd Battery, C.F.A., in July, 1915. Killed in action on Oct. 20th.

Pte. Frank Payea, of Canonto, Ontario, now serving in France. Photo was taken just after he came out of the firing line.

Pte. G. C. Todd, of Stamford, Ontario, on left, and Pte. Wright, of Falls View, on right. Pte. Todd has won the Military Medal for good work on the field under heavy shell fire, and has several times been recommended for good work. Pte. Wright was a 98th Battalion man, but is now serving with the 3rd Battalion in France.

Above is one of the first photographs of the Kaiser to reach this country in many months. It was taken some time last winter on the occasion of the German Emperor's visit to Rumania, and shows the war lord and his staff sadly inspecting the instruments with which representatives of the Standard Oil Company destroyed the country's great oil wells on the approach of the Austro-German invaders. The mourning band of the Kaiser's withered left ram is in marked contrast to the numerous war crosses that are spread over his breast.

ALL ABOUT STRENGTH AND VIGOR

MR. READER:

Here is something we have to offer you absolutely for nothing—a little private book of special information about the legitimate uses and unnatural abuses of manly strength; about the preservation and its possible self-restoration, an illustrated pocket compendium of 8,000 words, 72 pages and 30 half-tone photograph reproductions—which I am very pleased to send by mail, absolutely free of charge, in a plain sealed envelope, to any man, young or elderly, single or married, who writes for it.

Over a million of these books have been thus sent to applicants all over the world since my free offer first appeared. Publishers are charging as much as $2 for books on sex subjects, while my book is free. Therefore, reader, if you would like a great fund of inside information relating directly to the subject of manly strength, all put in perfectly plain, exact-to-fact language, with many hints that you may easily apply to your own self, no matter how strong you may be, or how nervous or rundown you may be—if you want to know the facts about this particular subject, given to you without a single shave, then fill in the coupon below, send no coin and receive my book sealed, by return mail. In one part of this little publication I describe a mechanical invention of my own, which I call the SANDEN Vitaliser, something you wear at night as an aid to the restoration of waning strength. You are not expected to get one of these appliances unless you decide for yourself that you want one. The book is complete, and there is absolutely nothing you are required to buy or pay. Therefore, please send your name and address to-day. SANDEN, Author.

MANHOOD WINS IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE.

MANHOOD! The quality which rules the world to-day. My friend, there never was a time in the history of the human race when real, sturdy manhood, manly vigor and manly courage counted for so much as they do now, this very minute. No matter what your years, whether you are 20 or 60, you must be either entirely in the race or entirely out of it. It is inevitable: the fellow who grows up strongest in this human strength that forges to the front, while weaklings stand aside; he is the one who is in most demand, and most sought after by all classes of his community, simply because he radiates that marvellous magnetic influence which only an abundant vigor and rugged manly health can radiate. I believe any man can hope to completely develop or mature this same vigorous strength, no matter what his past may have been, provided he is willing to REALLY MAKE THE EFFORT, and provided, of course, he is not weighed down by extreme old age or is not incurably diseased. To my mind, the road of the one who wants more vitality is perfectly plain, but it is a road that any man MUST travel if he attains the highest ideals in this respect. See information in my free book.

As to the SANDEN Vitaliser, previously mentioned, will say it is a little mechanical appliance, weighing but a few ounces, which you wear at night. This Vitaliser generates and sends forth a certain soft, penetrating force which I call Vitality. It drives this Vitality into your nerves, blood, muscles, and organs as you sleep. It is quieting to the nervous system—or, at least, so users say. Men write that it takes pain out of the back often at once, and restores vital strength in 90 days. Remember, the general information of the free book is independent of this Vitaliser, and you are not expected to get one of these little appliances unless you want to. You can write me later as to that, if you so desire. With special attachments, my Vitaliser is used by women as well as men, for rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder disorders, etc. If you live in or near this city I should be most pleased to have you call in person at my office, where you may see and test the Vitaliser free of charge. Hours—9 to 6. Or if convenient to call, do not fail to write for the free booklet. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case.

TO GET FREE BOOK PLEASE USE COUPON.

If you cannot call, please fill in the coupon below and send it. Wife (at breakfast)—Oh, John, I'll bet I know who you gave your seat to coming home in the car last night.

Hub (who had been out having a quiet little game) — Nonsense, my dear! How could you guess? How do you know I gave up my seat to any one?

Wife—Yes, you did. You dear, kind old boy, you let a poor old Irishman have it, for I distinctly heard you say in your sleep 'Oh, that's all right, I'll stand pat.'

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mr. Arthur Haines, Ashton Farm, Berley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country; our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid results. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days."

Lord Northcliffe told a sea story at a banquet in New York. Thanks to the Hun," he began, "the sea to all of us is as hateful now as it was in peace time to the Burnley chap. A seasick Burnley chap on the Isle of Man boat was heard to say to his son: 'Jimmy, I've gotten a stick wi' a silver knob on't a' whoam. Tha can have it. There's two or thre quid i' the bank, an' that's for t' buryin'. And Jimmy, bury me in t' Isle of Man. I can't stand this trip again, alive or dead.'"

Red Guards, Organized by Socialists, Rove About Murdering and Pillaging at Will—Present Political Situation an Impasse—General Strike Developed Into a Revolution

NOVELIST TELLS ABOUT IT

PETROGRAD, Dec. 3.— History is rushing at such breakneck pace in Eastern Europe that one grows breathless in pursuit. Things have happened during the last ten days in Finland, within 10 miles of Petrograd, which would in other conditions have marked an epoch, but now are mere details in the general flux of traditions, laws, manners, and politics. Finland is the most democratic country in the world, but not sufficiently democratic for its own Socialists. A new Diet, elected in place of the predominantly Socialist Diet, dissolved last August, has a small anti-Socialist majority. The first step of the Socialists was to demand immediate confirmation of the bills adopted by the last Diet, among which was the Independence bill which led to dissolution by the Russian Government. The majority deferred consideration of the question. Thereupon the Socialists decided to apply force.

The upheaval in Petrograd favoured their plans, and on Nov. 14 they declared a general strike throughout the country. They had organised a Red Guard of workmen who secured arms from the Russian garrison and fleet, and the strike became a revolution.

The Russian Garrison committees declared for the Socialists, but in the conflict the bulk of garrison held aloof. The middle classes organised a White Guard of students and others to support the police, but the Red Guard after seizing the Government buildings arrested a large number of officials, police and prominent citizens, and unbroke into houses and robbed and murdered throughout the country.

In frequent skirmishes between Red and White guards many were killed and wounded and a large number of peaceful citizens suffered. In the search for arms roving hands seized large sums of money and country estates. In Abo a revolutionary committee resolved to confiscate half a million marks in the local treasury, but were restrained.

The actual strike lasted four days and the Diet was compelled to yield. The semi-Socialist Agrarian Party went over to the Socialists and a majority was secured in favour of the immediate adoption of the Independence bill, which gives the Diet and Government elected by it supreme power within Finland, in place of the Russian authorities. The Senate or Government resigned and the Socialists wished to elect a Red Senate in its place, but since the majority of the Diet is strongly anti-Socialist such a Government would be wholly unconstitutional. Officials refused to work under such conditions, and at present the political situation is an impasse.

The Socialist leaders, having organized and armed roving bands of marauders, who now infest the country, disclaim responsibility for their acts of brutal violence. Russian authority in the country is now represented only by the garrison and fleet, who are hated by the peaceful population because of the assistance they gave to the Socialists. Governor-General Nekrasoff left Helsingfors during the Bolshevist disturbances in Petrograd and has not returned since. Assistant Governor-General Baron Korff had previously resigned. Garrison and fleet committees have gone through the farce of electing a sailor as Governor General. A number of imprisoned citizens has been released, but bands of Red Guard are still robbing and murdering in various parts of the country.

Stories illustrating the methods of the Reds are vividly told by the novelist Juhani. He writes:

"I did not actually see the murder of Bjon at Malm, near Helsingfors, but I feel as though I had been an eyewitness. Brigands of the Socialist revolutionary organization came to this house, led him out, and ordered him to come to the Malm Picture Palace, which they had seized and made their centre. Bjon was a Swede, and knew no Finnish. He hesitated to follow them, because he could not understand their object. Then they changed their minds, placed the old man against the wall of his own own house, and fired shots at him.

"The wife of the murdered man heard the shots. She ran out, and saw her husband lying with his face to the ground. She tried to carry the body away but couldn't. She cried, 'Isn't there one man who will help me?' The murderers laughed, with that peculiarly Finnish, coarse, grating, laughter, the like of which I have never heard among any other people, and walked off. The wife stood weeping beside the corpse. Then a helper came. Who was he? A Russian soldier. Tender-hearted, gentle, Russian sovarishch (comrade) he helped Bjon's widow to carry the body into the house. The murdered man was a teacher in the elementary school.

"Another case was that of the master of an old estate at Hertonnaes. A quiet, kindly old man he was, sitting at lunch with his family, when in burst seven Red Guards shouting 'Hands up!' Bergbom, who was hard of hearing, seeing the intruders, asked, 'What are they saying?' In reply, he got a bullet in the forehead, and fell dead, blood spurting from the wound."

These instances are typical of scores which took place, and are still taking place all over Finland. All the Finnish parties claim the independence of their country, but there is a bitter outcry against such method of winning."

Sailors Like Irish Eyes

In the neighbourhood of an American Naval Base, Nov. 29.— Though the exact figures are not known, it is said that the number of marriages amongst the American sailors since their arrival here is very great, and that in the flotillas stationed in Ireland, marriages now nearly number a hundred since they made their headquarters here, just over six months ago. Irish girls and men of the American fleet get on very well together, and the smiling blue eyes of Irish colleens captivated the strangers. A large percentage of the American sailors are Irishmen and they have married girls whom they knew before they went to the United States.

Many Prices Advanced In The Past Week

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs, appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE.

Markets for grocery commodities presented numerous changes during the week and included such lines as sealing wax, candles, grape juice, tobaccos, catsup, jam, baking powder, molasses, dates, pink salmon, cream of tartar, pecan nuts and shelled walnuts. The run of lake herring came to a rather abrupt end due to the storms of the lakes and cold weather which froze the bays. Frozen fish will now take the place of fresh lake fish. The science of freezing fish has been developed within recent years, and large stocks of this food product are thereby conserved which would otherwise go to waste.

An embargo placed on the shipment of cottonseed oil by the United States Government has had the effect of shutting this basic material in shortening out of the Canadian market for the time at least. It is anticipated that licenses will be granted by the United States Government to bring this commodity into Canada, but in the mean time stocks are very light. Some manufacturers are not quoting on shortening as a result and prices have been firmer in consequence.

Representatives of the Cuban cane planters have agreed to accept a price for their sugar on the basis of 4.90c per pound cost and freight Atlantic ports. If the International Sugar Commission thinks favourably of this offer and agrees to take Cuban sugar for the Allies at this figure there should be a reduction in the price of refined sugar to the extent of about one cent per pound. Flour rices have not yet been announced but it is expected advisement will be made soon by the Food Controller. Business with the wholesale grocery trade is report-

Belgian Army Now Stronger Than Ever On Western Front

180,000 Men Anxious to Fight—Army Forms a Part of the Combined Allied Forces.

HAVRE, Dec. 3.—Ten divisions strong, the Belgian Army is ready to take its part in the offensive in Flanders whenever the word is given. The Belgian Minister of War told The Associated Press that the Belgian Army was composed of 117,000 men at the beginning of the war, was increased by 20,000 volunteers in August, 1914, and was reduced to 60,000 after the battle of the Yser. Since then by the enrollment of Belgian refugees and the enlistment of volunteers who have braved the live-wire barriers on the Holland frontier, it has been brought up to ten divisions of well-trained troops.

"If our army has not undertaken operations of a wider scope up to this time," said the Minister, "it is because it does not devolve on it to decide the moment when these operations should begin. The army is only a part of the combined allied forces acting in unison and in accordance with carefully developed plans. The army has valiantly filled the roll, more ungrateful than glorious, that has been assigned to it. It has just proved by its brilliant participation in the last offensive in Flanders that it is ready to attack with fervour and awaits impatiently the hour."

Summarising the work of the Belgian Army during the war and referring to its difficulties and lack of equipment, the Minister recalled that in August, 1914, the army had only one machine gun for each 1,000 men, and only three field guns per 400 shots for each piece. It had no light mortars, no heavy artillery, no grenades, no trench equipment, no ambulances, no pontoon crews, not a single motor cycle. It had only 1,000 bicycles, two captive balloons, a few superannuated aeroplanes, and a few posts of wireless telegraphy.

"We had only 32,000 infantry after the battle of the Yser," said the Minister, "and its equipmnet was in a pitable state. Munitions were lacking and all of the different organisms were deranged when the army base was transferred to foreign soil. This remnant of an army not only barred the way to Calais, but while doing so was reorganized and reinforced until now it counts three times the number of men that the battle of the Yser left valid. The front held by the Belgian Army has been gradually lengthened from about twelve and a half miles after the battle of the Yser to seventeen miles in January, 1915, eighteen miles at the beginning of March, and about nineteen miles in June, 1961.

"The Belgian Army organized this front and held it alone until the middle of this year, when as a consequence of the operations of the allied offensive in Flanders it was reduced, enabling the army to dispose of considerable reserves. In August, 1917, the army had twelve times as many machine guns and heavy pieces, with five times as much ammunition as was on hand at the outset of hostilities.

"The impression that has gotten abroad that the Belgian Army was reorganized and re-equipped entirely by our allies is an error," he added. "Belgium, exiled and deprived of all her resources, received generous hospitality and powerful aid from her glorious allies. It was on French and British soil that all was to be done, but Belgians themselves took up the work of reconstruction. The Belgian Army created by its own efforts the greater part of what was indispensable for it to live and fight. It is building its own cannon and making its own powder and its own projectiles."

Must Beat Enemy By Building Ships

LONDON, Nov. 29 — The Daily Chronicle, in an editorial on the shipping problem, says that the Germans are right in supposing that their least hopeless prosperity of victory is that offered by submarine warfare. Pointing out that for the Allies the only one way of safety is to get more ships added than the submarine subtract, the paper says two things are needed, further successes in anti-submarine warfare and a much larger supply of mercantile tonnage for essential needs.

To the latter end the Chronicle urges more controlled and serviceable use of all tonnage which the Allies already possess. Declaring that Great Britain so far is alone in having requisitioned the great bulk of her shipping, the paper outlines the sacrifices she has made in this way, and proceeds:

"We do not mention these facts for recrimination, but solely for the sake of reform. Great Britain is as anxious as ever to do her best for her Allies, carrying wheat and flour for France and Italy and falling in with whatever is found necessary to facilitate transport of the coming American army, but when things have come to such a pass, it is surely time that Italian ships lying up in dock at Genoa or elsewhere should take their part in the hazards of the seas, that the French Admiralty should requisition merchantmen and curtail their private trading in the same proportion as the British Admiralty has.

"France, during the war, developed a most extensive carrying trade in new waters and should recognize the absolute need of concentrating the whole of its resources on the problem of Atlantic ferry.

"Such changes would involve sacrifices for each of the Allies concerned, but what all have to ask themselves is whether the winning or retaining of certain commercial advantages can justify the losing of the war, and the war may be lost unless in this sphere we all use our full resources without reserve."

His santanic majesty never offers to go into partnership with a busy man.

MALVY IMPEACHED

French ex-Minister Will Face Grave Charges.

PARIS, Nov. 29. — Although the Chamber of Deputies ordinarily does not sit on Wednesday, a special session was held yesterday to discuss the report of the committe of thirty-three which has been charged to examine if there was occasion to impeach Louis J. Malvy for crimes committed when he was Minister of the Interior. By a small majority the committee approved the impeachment. It avoided, however, any investigation of the charges, merely attaching to its report copies of a speech made in the Senate on July 23 by Premier Clemenceau, M. Malvy's report on the proceedings in the Chamber on October 4 when Editor Daudet's letter accusing him was read and Professor Painleve's declaration on October 16 exonerated M. Malvy.

The Chamber adopted the committee's report by a vote of 512 to 2.

SUFFERED WITH NERVES

COULD NOT KEEP QUIET

Diseases of the nervous system are very common.

All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and wornout by household duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with their nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the shaking nerves, strengthen the weak heart and build up the entire system

Mrs. F. Bailey, 221 Earl St., Kingston, Ont., writes: "I was suffering very much with my nerves, so much so that I could not keep myself quiet at all. I was recommended to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I bought three boxes, and I must say I have derived much benefit from them, so much so that my friends have all noticed the change in me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

In a Kansas town where two brothers are engaged in the retail coal business a revival was recently held, and the elder of the brothers was converted. For weeks he tried to persuade his brother to join the church. One day he asked: "Why can't you join the church like I did?" "It's a fine thing for you to belong to the church," replied the younger brother. "If I join the church who'll weigh the coal?"

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

"I quite agree with you about going, Mrs. Morton, but not home." He lowered his voice, as though fearing that even at that moment some tool of the woman who was sending the letters might be within earshot. "I suggest that you let me take your daughter to some quiet hotel. You can follow, with her maid, and the necessary luggage, later on. But we must be certain to make the change in such a way that our enemies, who are undoubtedly watching us, will not know of it. We will all leave here in your car, giving out that we are going to your home. No one will suspect anything to the contrary. On our arrival in the city, your daughter and I will leave the car, and drive to the hotel in a taxicab. When, later on, you follow with the baggage, take a taxi, sending your own car to the garage. I know your confidence in your chauffeur, but in this affair you can afford to trust nobody. Your daughter and yourself can remain quietly in the hotel under an assumed name, for a few days, until she recovers her strength. Meanwhile, I have every expectation that the persons at the bottom of this shameful affair will have been caught."

The plan appealed to Mrs. Morton at once, and she told the detective so.

"But where shall we go—to what hotel?" she asked.

Duvall leaned over and whispered in her ear the name of an exclusive and very quiet hotel in the upper part of the city.

"Do not mention the name to anyone," he said, "not even to the taxicab driver, when you leave the house. Tell him to put you down at the corner, a block away, and do not proceed to the hotel until you see that he has driven off. And keep your eye on the maid. I do not suspect her, I admit, but there seems to be a leak somewhere, and we must stop it."

Mrs. Morton nodded, and rose.

"We had better start then," she said. "I understand perfectly. Have Ruth register in the name of Bradley, and I think, Mr. Duvall, if you can do so, you had better arrange to stop there as well."

"I had intended to do so," the detective replied.

"That will be better." Mrs. Morton led the way to the street.

"You did not intend to go to the showing of your new film at the Grand to-night, did you?" Duvall asked Ruth after they had started away from the studio.

"Yes; I had intended to go," she replied. "I always go to my first releases. But to-night I do not feel able to do so."

"I think it is just as well. What you need most now is rest."

The girl looked at herself in a small mirror affixed to the side of the car.

"Oh," she exclaimed. "I look terrible. These people are right, it seems. Three more weeks of this persecution and my looks would be all gone. Mr. Edwards told me only this morning that he had never seen me look so bad." There were tears in her eyes.

Duvall realized that she spoke the truth. The effect of the strain upon her nervous system, the brutal shocks of the past two days, the horror of the experience of the night before, had wrought havoc with the girl's beauty. Her face, gray, lined, haggard, her eyes, heavy and drawn, made her the very opposite of the radiant creature that had created such a furore in motion picture circles. The methods of her persecutors, if unchecked, would beyond doubt, wreck her strength and health in a short time, and in addition there was the danger that at any moment a physical attack, a swiftly thrown acid bomb, an explosive mixture concealed in an innocent looking package, might destroy both her beauty and her reason in one blinding flash. With the fear in her great brown eyes constantly before him, Duvall determined more than ever to free her from this terrible persecution.

They separated in the neighborhood of 30th street, Duvall and Miss Morton taking a taxicab that stood before one of the smaller Fifth Avenue hotels. He made a pretense of entering the hotel, and did not summon the taxi until Mrs. Morton's car was well out of sight up the avenue. Then he instructed the driver to proceed first to his hotel.

There stop here was but momentary. Duvall went to his room, threw a few articles of clothing into his grip, left a note for Grace, telling her that he would be absent for several days, then rejoined his companion and drove uptown to the hotel opposite the park, the name of which he had mentioned to Mrs. Morton. He felt perfectly certain that they had not been followed.

Upon arriving at the hotel he entered their names, including that of Mrs. Morton, upon the register, using the pseudonym which that latter had suggested. Then sending Ruth to her room, he asked to see the manager and had a brief conference with him in private. Immediately thereafter he went up to his own apartment.

As he had arranged, it adjoined the suite selected for the Mortons. He tapped lightly on the communicating door.

"Are you all right, Miss Morton?" he called.

"Yes, came the girl's voice from the opposite side. "All right, thank you."

CHAPTER IX.

Grace Duvall said good-bye to her husband that morning with very little enthusiasm. She was not jealous of him, she was too sensible a woman, and trusted him too fully for that. But his sudden interest in Ruth Morton, the charming motion picture star, seemed rather incomprehensible to her. Of course she suspected he was working on a case which concerned the girl, although Duvall had neither affirmed nor denied it. But she felt lonely and perhaps a trifle out of sorts, and found her solitary breakfasts, luncheons, dinners, a little trying. So often before, she and Richard had worked together. Why, she wondered, did he so pointedly exclude her from this case? She would have liked to talk it over with him.

She sat rather disconsolately in her room most of the forenoon, and about one o'clock made ready for a lonely luncheon. She was just about to leave the apartment when the telephone bell rang. Grace hastened to it at once hoping that the call might be from her husband.

A woman's voice, low, firm, determined sounded in her ears.

"I want to speak with Mr. Duvall," the voice said.

"Mr. Duvall is out. This is Mrs. Duvall."

"Very well, Mrs. Duvall. If you want to keep your husband from very serious harm, you had better tell him to steer clear of Ruth Morton's affairs in future. A word to the wise, you know. Good day." The speaker rang off.

Grace turned from the telephone, her brain in a whirl. What danger threatened her husband? Ought she not to tell him of the message as soon as possible, so that he might be on his guard? And what did this mysterious reference to "Ruth Morton's affairs" mean? Did it imply that Richard was in any way involved—but that was mysterious. She put the thought from her mind, and went down in the elevator to a lonely and not very enjoyable meal.

As she left the dining room, and passed through the lobby, she thought she saw ahead of her a familiar figure. A moment later she realised that it was Richard himself, walking very rapidly toward the main entrance, his satchel in his hand. Was he leaving the hotel? And if so ought she not to make an attempt to give him the message she had just received, before he did so? She walked quickly after him, but his pace was so rapid that she reached the sidewalk only in time to see him swing himself into a waiting taxi, baggage in hand, and drive quickly off. But what Grace saw, in addition to this, filled her with misgivings. Besides her husband in the cab was a woman—very beautiful woman, whom Grace had no difficulty whatever in identifying as Ruth Morton. And she also noticed, in the brief moment that elapsed before the taxi shot toward the Avenue, that the woman seemed to be in tears, and that Richard leaned over her with the utmost solicitude and clasped her hand in his. For the first time in her life, Grace Duvall was actually jealous.

Thoughts of possible danger to her husband, however, were paramount in her mind. Without an instant's hesitation she stepped into a second taxi, whose driver was trying to attract her attention, and told him to follow the car containing the man and woman which had just driven off.

DESPAIRING WOMAN NOW HAPPY MOTHER

Mrs. Stephens Did Not Need The Surgical Operation.

Patoka, Ill.—"I had been married five years and my greatest desire was to become a mother. The doctor said I never would have a child unless I was operated on for female troubles and I had given up all hopes when a friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly for sometime, and I am in better health than ever, and have a healthy baby girl. I praise your Vegetable Compound for my baby and my better health. I want all suffering women to know that it is the sure road to health and happiness."—Mrs. George Stephens, R. F. D. No. 3, Patoka, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming woman's ills because it contains the tonic, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, which act on the female organism. Women from all parts of the country are continually testifying to its strengthening, curative influence.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

WOMEN ARE NEEDED

TO HELP IN WAR

Women can be usefully employed in nursing the wounded, in making up the soldiers' kits, and a thousand other ways. Many Canadian women are weak, pale or anemic from woman's ills. For young girls just entering womanhood; for women at the critical time; nursing mothers and every woman who is "run-down," tired or over-worked—Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a special, safe and certain help. It can now be had in tablet form, procurable at any good drug store, or send Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., 10 cents for trial package. Branch office, Bridgeburg, Ont.

St. Catharines, Ont.—"I have taken Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription during expectancy when I felt especially in need of a tonic and it benefited me greatly. I always take pleasure in recommending 'Prescription' to young mothers, because I know it will never fail to help them."—Mrs. J. H. Fawcett, 8 Beach St.

Stratford, Ont.—"I do think Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription one of the best medicines I have ever known for the ailments of women. I had for quite a long time been all run-down, weak and nervous. I doctored, but nothing seemed to give me relief until I began taking 'Favorite Prescription.' This medicine gave me such wonderful relief that I am glad to recommend it to others."—Mrs. A. Godwin, 60 Brant St.

New York "Tribune": The government should make war to the knife on espionage and sedition. It should intern all enemy aliens suspected of aiding Germany. It should round up all naturalized citizens who put German interests above American interests. It should remember that the right way to make war is to make it thoroughly and single mindedly. The President's war powers are immense. The people will back him up in using them to the limit in stamping out espionage, suppressing sedition and prosecuting treason.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Barking Up the Wrong Tree

By MARTHA V. MONROE

My engagement to Stewart Barnes brought me a great deal of happiness, which was suddenly broken in a very singular way. One day while shopping, in order to examine goods, I laid my bag on the counter. I was hunting for something difficult to find and visited several stores. Finding what I wanted, I opened the bag to take out my purse and at once discovered that I had changed bags with some one else. My portemonnaie was not there, but instead I found $16 in bills. Among other articles was an unsealed letter addressed to Evelyn Tewkesberry, general delivery of the postoffice.

Thinking that the letter would help me to find the person with whom I had made the exchange, I took the letter from the envelope and read it. It was short and to the point:

Will be at the corner of Eighth and Locust streets at 7:30 tonight, made up for seedy individual with green spectacles, wear thick veil and carry violets in left hand. STEWART.

Great heavens! Could I have stumbled on a letter my own Stewart had written to some other woman appointing a clandestine meeting? I trembled. Whether it was through force of imagination I know not, but I recognized my Stewart's handwriting. To further confirm my suspicion, there was a postscript: "Anna is watching me." My name is Anna.

Here were three elements pointing to my lover's identity with this Stewart whose name was signed to the letter, though one of the three, the handwriting, was doubtful. I had not been long familiar with Stewart Barnes' writing and could not be sure that what I saw he had written; nevertheless I had no doubt of it. At any rate I determined to profit by my find. But how should I proceed? I shrank from interrupting the meeting as beneath me. Instead I put the letter in a new envelope, readdressed it, and, inserting a slip of paper stating that I had exchanged bags with its owner, giving my address, I dropped the letter in a mailbox. I also put in a note to Stewart breaking our engagement.

The next day a messenger brought me my bag containing the articles in it when it was exchanged and a request for the one in my possession. I returned it, and, so far as the owner was concerned, I was at quits. There remained to settle with Stewart. I presumed he would come to see me posthaste to learn what was the trouble, for I had given him no inkling as to my discovery of his perfidy.

The day after the one on which I had posted my letter to Stewart passed, and he neither appeared nor wrote. I had assumed that if his conscience was clear he would come to me at once; if I had really caught him in a delinquency he would recognize the fact that I had discovered his deception and would either try to beg off or would accept his dismissal without a word. Then, too, he might really prefer the Tewkesberry woman, in which case I should probably not hear anything from him.

Three days passed without a word. Nothing is so tantalizing as ignorance of some important matter one is very much interested in knowing. Every day the anguished left me in a more agitated condition than the preceding. Why had I not stated to my lover my reason for breaking my engagement?

I had not foreseen this result. One of two courses was open to me, either to call on Stewart for an explanation of my discovery or to write to Evelyn Tewkesberry to learn from her if her correspondent was my Stewart. This latter course would be the easier for me. I followed it.

For several days I waited impatiently for a reply and then broke down completely. I was ready to forgive my lover, innocent or guilty. But my pride held me back from doing what I should have done in the first place—that is, stating the case to Stewart and asking him if he was the writer of the letter I had found.

Since I could not bring myself to do this, I determined to try again to reach the Tewkesberry woman. I wrote her note and hired a boy to watch the general delivery for the claimant. He reported that the letter had been taken from the postoffice by an old woman, who had given her name as Evelyn Tewkesberry. He had followed her from the postoffice and had noted the house where she lived.

This was a surprise to me. But upon ferreting out the matter I went to the house and asked for Mrs. or Miss Tewkesberry. An old woman came into the room where I was and asked me what I wanted. Was she Evelyn Tewkesberry? She was. Did she know a man of the name of Stewart Barnes? She did not. I then told her that I was the person who had taken up her bag by mistake and asked her to explain the letter it had contained. She berated me for reading the letter and declined to explain it. I left her no wiser than I came, except that I was conscious of having made a fool of myself in sending away a lover without a hearing. It would have been even wiser for me to appear at the meeting appointed in the letter.

Resolved to "eat humble pie," I sent for Stewart, and he came to see me. I think he had intended to crush me, but when he saw my altered appearance he took me in his arms, and I cried awhile before telling him of my terrible mistake.

Referendum Would Leave Our Fighters in the Lurch!

Hon. N. W. Rowell said in Toronto--"On Dec. 17th you must choose a real Union Government, or you must choose a Government that will abolish conscription and leave our men in the lurch!"

IT is imperative that the Canadians at the front be reinforced at the earliest possible moment. Union Government asks for your support that it may continue raising the necessary 100,000 reinforcements from CLASS ONE.

Laurier and his adherents propose delaying the sending of those reinforcements about a year to tinker with a referendum. Modern warfare is a matter of hours and minutes. Armies cannot wait!

Therefore

PUBLIC OPINION

WHALE MEAT AS FOOD.

A peculiar advertisement appearing in a Vancouver daily a short time ago was that of a group of grocers of that city who endeavoured to educate the public to the desirability of whale meat. A striking heading stated: "Is more nutritious than beef and just as wholesome." The fact was pointed out that the whale is captured many miles at sea, away from all shore contamination, in perfectly clear blue water, and that the whale advertised fed exclusively on lime shrimps.

Several methods of preparation were published, such as "pot roast of whale," "curried whale," etc. It sold at 10 cents a pound.—The Wall Street Journal.

SHYING AT WORDS.

Strange to say, there are persons who shy at the words "drafted" and "conscript." The suggestion has even been made that "chosen" should be used as a sort of poultice to those whose feelings are made raw by what they regard as the harsher words. Thus we should call the great body of young men, now gathering in defence of democracy, the "chosen army." Somebody has set forth this quotation from the Bible: "I have chosen you and ordained you that ye should go."

But after all, "conscript" is a good word, devoid of sinister meaning; its literal significance is merely "a writing together"—that is, an enrollment. And draft comes from a word that means to draw. There is no ignominy attached to having one's name written and to have it drawn for a particular purpose. "Conscript Fathers" was a name applied to the Roman Senate—because their names were written in the Senate's register.—Southern Lumberman.

LETTERS FROM HOME.

There is one insatiable, constant demand from soldiers in trench and training camps—the demand for letters and more letters from home. It is not soldierly to talk of loneliness—so there is never a word of that in the letters from camp—but the longing is expressed in the plea, over and over: "Write often; letters are best of all." Mothers and sisters and friends of soldiers can perform as great a service for them with the pen as with the knitting needle. Sweaters and socks at best mean but physical comfort, while letters strengthen the heart. If our soldiers are to fight their best we must keep them secure in their faith in our appreciation of their sacrifice, and aware of the beauty and worth of the homes for whose freedom and happiness they go to battle. Letters to soldiers should be pictures of home, and letter writers should spare no effort to make them cheerful and inspiring. The veriest commonplaces of family life are dear to these exiled lads—the news that mother is making pickles, that father was on the soliciting committee for Victory Loan, that sister is secretary of her high school debating club. And don't forget the clippings from the home paper, and the snapshot of mother feeding the chickens.—Washington Herald.

A SPORTING OFFER

C. P. R. Subscribes $10,000,000 if the People of Canada Subscribe $300,000,000 to Victory Loan.

SINCE this war began," said Lord Shaughnessy at a great Victory Loan Campaign meeting in Montreal, "the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has invested up to the present time in loans and guarantees in one form and another to the Allied nations nearly $70,000,000.

"Nevertheless we would be glad to subscribe to the Victory Loan up to $5,000,000. But I will add a rider to that. If the people of Canada will make it $300,000,000 (exclusive of the amount paid for by surrender of bonds of previous issues) as we have no doubt they will, the company will make their subscription $10,000,000."

This was at the close of an inspiring speech giving the reasons why the people of Canada should give their whole-hearted support to the loan. He spoke as follows:

"I know that this large hall is crowded to its capacity with an army of earnest men and women who are filled with the determination that this Victory Loan of 1917 shall be the phenomenal success that it deserves to be, and, above all, they are determined that our great city of Montreal, the premier city of Canada, the financial and commercial metropolis, and the fountain head of broad sentiment and cosmopolitan thought in the Dominion, shall do its full share toward contributing the amount required, not only for the honor and credit of the city itself, but for the example that it will give to other sections of our good old province of Quebec that will always remain a bulwark and principal main-stay of our Canadian confederation, contributing to the strength and prosperity of the Dominion, notwithstanding the irritation and resentment occasionally in evidence when the province is criticized, and, indeed, maligned, by many whose efforts it should be, as common citizens of the country, to understand and conciliate.

"This world's war that has now well entered on the fourth year of its duration, has imposed upon all the nations involved financial obligations of an amount and of a character never experienced in the past, and, indeed, that had never been anticipated, and each day that warfare continues, the obligations become more insistent and burdensome. The strain upon Britain has been particularly great, because, not only was she required to provide the funds necessary for her own purposes, but by reason of her outstanding position in the money world, she was compelled to assist in very large amounts some of the Allied nations less favored.

"The entrance of our great neighbor to the south into the war relieved, in some measure, this financial strain, because it brought to the support of the Allies the financial strength of that great nation, but the people of the United States may, and very naturally, that "while we are willing, and, indeed, anxious, to lend aid toward providing the money necessary for the conduct of the war, we expect and require that, to the greatest possible extent, the money should be expended in our country." It is a natural condition and one to which no reasonable objection can be urged.

A LOAN TO OURSELVES.

"Canada naturally wishes to continue to participate in the business of supplying munitions, goods and produce of the soil to the Allied armies, and with all other money markets closed to her, there is only one process by which this can be accomplished. The country must itself provide the requisite means, and, fortunately, the country is amply able to do so. Heretofore the Minister of Finance has placed in Canada three domestic loans aggregating I think, about $350,000,000. In every instance the amount of the issue proposed was over-subscribed, and, yet, fortunately, the people of the country are to-day in a much better position to participate in these loans than they were in any previous time. After all, in taking up this Victory Loan, we are merely loaning money to ourselves. It is handed over to the Government and it is paid out again to the people of the country for the labor, goods or services covered by Government war contracts, excepting such small amounts as it may be necessary to send abroad for raw materials, so that a very large portion of the funds comes back through one channel or another to the original source, and after a short lapse of time the bankers and the people will have this money to loan to the Government again should occasion arise; but meantime, the investor has safely put away his Government bond or bonds representing the amount of his subscription, a security of the highest possible class, unquestionable and unquestioned, carrying a rate of interest which applies to Government loans only in such exceptional conditions as the present, and which, after peace has come and normal conditions have been restored, should cause the security itself to advance in the market to a substantial increase on its face value.

"It is desirable beyond all things that a very large percentage of this Victory Loan should be subscribed by the people of the country generally, people of small means, because it will be evidence of the spirit of patriotism that prevails throughout the country, and it will be a good thing for them financially. Corporations and wealthy individuals, familiar with financial affairs, will not be slow to reap the benefit of this opportunity. But they should not have too large a share of the loan. Every wage-earner, man or woman, through the land should be encouraged to subscribe, and to this end employers and the banks should, and, no doubt, will, render every assistance towards spreading the payments over such a period as will make it easier for the subscribers than the very easy terms mentioned in the prospectus.

Statistics would seem to indicate that one in six of the entire population of Great Britain subscribed for the last imperial loan. The recent Liberty Loan in the United States was taken by one in twelve of the entire population, while the last Canadian loan showed subscriptions by only one in 187 of the population, or about 40,000 subscribers throughout the country. It would be disappointing if, in the present instance, that figure is not substantially exceeded on the Island of Montreal alone.

"It should be the aim of every person to put by, during the wage-earning period, a small fund to meet requirements of old age, or to be available if and when misfortune comes. It is, I think, the natural tendency of most people to do this, but the difficulty is about making a start. Here is the opportunity to make a start under most favorable conditions. The security is unquestioned, the rate of interest is far above the normal, and the $50 or $100 invested in these bonds will encourage further additions when circumstances permit. The foundation having been established, there will be the incentive to build upon it in a rational and sensible way, and thousands upon thousands of substantial little funds will have been created to meet the demands of the rainy day.

A PERSONAL EXPERIENCE.

"It may not be out of place to mention an experience of my own. In the early days, nearly fifty years ago, when my salary was a modest one, but in excess of that received by most of the young fellows with whom I associated, the portion of the monthly pay which I felt justified in appropriating to my own use disappeared regularly and rapidly with nothing to show for it. I conceived the idea of calling on an acquaintance, the cashier of a private bank, to ask him if he would loan me $100 at the current rate of interest, against my notes in monthly amounts covering a period of six or eight months. In those early days, bank cashiers and managers were more considerate and condding than they are in these times and he agreed. The notes were made and turned in, and $100 in currency was handed to me, which I immediately placed to my credit in the Savings Department. The cashier did not understand the novel transaction and asked the purpose. I told him that these notes would be personal obligations that I would meet each month as they became due, and that at the end of the period I would have a bank account of $100 and so it worked out. The notes were met without causing any special inconvenience, and during the few following years of varying fortune, that amount of $100 never grew less. Indeed, if there be anyone present to whom I owe money, he may be gratified to know that I still have it.

"It is probably regrettable that the campaign for this Victory Loan should be co-incident with the Dominion elections activities, but there is no good reason why one should conflict with the other. We who are encouraging subscriptions to the Loan are absolutely non-political in our motives and our methods. The appeal is made to citizens of Canada who are proud of their country without reference to their political leanings or their views upon any of the subjects that are being discussed on the hustings. The appeal is to the people of the country without regard to politics, creed or nationality, who would in any circumstances wish to show their pride in Canada and their devotion to her interests by meeting any demand that might be made upon them, even at considerable sacrifice. But, in the present instance, there is no sacrifice. Participation in the Victory Loan is a splendid thing from every business standpoint, because it provides the subscriber with a security of unquestioned integrity that will probably command a substantial premium within a short time after the cessation of the war, and that, in the meantime, gives an annual interest return equal to that which can be secured on any other gilt-edged security, particularly when the income tax is taken into account.

ENTIRELY FOR THE WAR.

"Some misapprehension has resulted from published newspaper statements to the effect that only a portion of the proceeds of the Victory Loan would be used for the purposes of the war. This was clearly an error, or oversight, because the prospectus on which the issue is based states in unequivocal terms that the entire proceeds of the Victory Loan will be used for war purposes, and will be expended in Canada. This is the pledge of the Minister of Finance and of the Dominion Government as well. The proceeds of the loan are thus made a sacred trust for the purpose named, and if any government that may be returned at the coming elections, whether it be Union, Liberal or Composite, should permit a penny of the amount to be diverted to purposes other than those named, it would arouse the resentment of those of us who are here, and of our co-workers and contributors throughout the country, with the result that the strong arm of the people of the country would come down on the offending government with such weight and force as to mean annihilation.

CANADA'S CONTRIBUTION.

(Boston News Bureau.)

Canada has no more to lose by a German victory than has the United States. What has Canada done to win the war? From a population half a million smaller than Pennsylvania's, Canada has raised 450,000 troops, of which 333,000 have already crossed the sea. The man loss among those sent "over there" has been 50 per cent. Canada's war debt exceeds a billion dollars. When the United States has 5,000,000 men in uniform, 4,000,000 in Europe and a casualty list

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

(Edited by Dr. David H. Reeder, Chicago, Ill.)

HELPING UNCLE SAM'S DOCTORS: A larger percentage of the medical profession has responded to the call of patriotism than of any other class or profession and in a vast majority of the cases it means the sacrifice of years of hard struggle to win a place in the worlds worth-while work. The reliable up-to-date family physician is hard to spare, and there are many that will suffer in silence and wait for his return rather than go to some one that they do not know or that they think may not understond their case.

This is a serious mistake. Conditions may arise in which just a little careful treatment of the right kind and at the right time may prevent a great deal of needless suffering and expense.

Most all of these doctors will return with a splendid store of knowledge that could be acquired in no other way, some will lay down their lives for you and for me, for your boy or my boy.

Now, right here is one of the big lessons that is going to be learned by all of the people and a tremendous advance is going to be made in natural therapeutic, just as all real advances have been made, through sufferings and privation. Already I can see an improvement in the general health of the people through the forced observance of some of the natural laws of health that I have been teaching through the Home Health Club lectures for the past quarter of a century.

Nature is always exceedingly kind to those who know and respect her laws and so many of these laws are made plain and of easy application through the Home Health Club books that there should be organized many local clubs for study and practice so that such neighbourhood could be well equipped to combat any condition of sickness that may arise without exhausting the doctors that remain at home.

The parent club is always ready to answer all questions pertaining to the health of any reader of this paper or any questions regarding neighbourhood or community health. In response to requests I will gladly give information through these columns regarding changes in diet, meat substitutes, lard substitutes, food combinations and any other information regarding food conservation along practical lines that will make far better health and safety from disease from mal-nutrition.

I have noticed a number of cases in which sufferers from gas in the stomach and bowels could not account for the condition as they had been advised to eat certain foods from the gardens and cut down the meat diet. In one case I found that a delicious meal had been prepared and eaten in which the principal dish was a well cooked pan of baked beans with a side dish of hubbard squash, an abundance of potatoes followed by a salad with sharp French dressing. In the salad was slices of radishes, cucumber, oranges, tart apples, bits of onion and nut meats. The food was all good, but the combination was bad, and every member of the family suffered with abdominal pains, gas in the stomach and bowels followed by very free bowel movements.

Now, baked squash is a good and wholesome food, but it should not have been eaten with the beans. The salad was good and wholesome, but with the nut meats it was unnecessary with the beans and the sharp acid vinegar and tart apples were decidedly antagonistic to the starch food in the potatoes. Fermentation instead of digestion was promptly started and the gas that follows fermentation caused the pains. The onions and beans helped matters by increasing peristaltic action and the bad combination was emptied out without supplying the nutriment that should have been derived from such food. That, however, was the best thing to do, the food was spoiled in the stomach and nature knows what to do with spoiled food.

CLUB NOTES.

I would like to have a personal letter from every one that wants to join in the organization of a local Home Health Club and I will tell you how to get a set of the Club books Free for the use of the Club and will also tell you just how to organize and how to help out the local doctor by keeping well yourself.

Dear Doctor: My 17 year old son was confined to his bed about 3 months ago with a severe cold accompanied by a cough and sore throat. He went back to work before he was fully restored. He works in a shipyard and is our only support. He has not been wholly free from the cough since, but the last 3 weeks it has increased so that the cannot get rest at night, although he works hard during the day. A couple of days ago he went to the shipyard doctor but he did not examine his chest, only looked in his throat and said that he must have an operation on his throat before he could get rid of the sough. Now, he thinks that as long as he has no pain in the throat and no trouble with the same, not even when he coughs, he should not be in a hurry to have such an operation. Cough is dry, sounds almost hollow, but when he drinks something warm at night it seems to loosen and he spits some phlegm. He also wants me to ask you how he is to get rid of some small pimples on his face, also neck and shoulders. I do not think that it is lack of exricse, because he works hard during the day and goes to evening school. Three nights a week he has studies and other three nights gymnasium and swimming. The latter he has stopped because I was afraid that it was too strenuous after working so hard during the day and also on account of the cold showers afterwards. Mrs. J. O.

(Answer).—It may be that the shipyard doctor is right and that his tonsils are diseased and should be removed. I think, however, it would be best for you to have him go to some other doctor first and have another examination made. If, however, when looking into his throat you find crypts in his tonsils and that they are seriously diseased, then they should be removed. If there are large lumps in them and they are merely red without any white spots or holes, then I would suggest that he secure a special preperation of the tissue foods or cell salts for internal use and a special ointment al use. The condition which you describe as pimpels is usually very stubborn and hard to overcome, however, with the proper diet and after overcoming the other trouble, they will also disappear in time.

ECZEMA ON BABY'S EAR.

"Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes: "My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to do her very much good. Hearing of the remarkable cure Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend this

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Colour and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

17,000 BRITONS RECRUITED.

Mission Here Reports Great Success in Getting Soldiers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—More than 17,000 men have joined the British Army through the British and Canadian recruiting mission at 280 Broadway, according to a statement made by the mission officials yesterday. The mission opened on 6th June.

The men have come from all parts of the United States, but an unusually large number have been registered from this city. Most of the recruits are young men, and many were born in this country of British parents.

Many unusual applications have been made to the mission. The Rev. F. B. Eteson, of Honolulu, sought to obtain a chaplaincy. Failing in this, he enlisted as a private. The twin sons of the late Henry Holmes, the London author, and another pair of twins, George B. and John J. Courtney, Canadians, of Paterson, N.J. were among others enlisted.

HAUD UP YER HEID.

Haud up yer heid an' square yer shoulders back,
E'en though the warld has gien ye a whack;
Ye did yer best, yer conscience aye is clear,
Then trust in God an' dinna hae a fear.
The warld is fu' o' struggle and o' strife,
Ye canna gang wi' 'oot for this is life.

The muscles grow in strength by use and work,
An' strivings mak' the man, so dinna shirk
Because some things were sair an' hard to thole.
Yer life has been expanding, an' yer soul
Has learned tae sympathize wi' ithers smart,
For ye were no the first wi' bruised heart.

God's plans were made in heaven, and unfold
Like petals o' a flower, He tries yer gold
Refining heart an' life that you may see
With clearer vision His great love for thee.
He'll hold yer hand an' guide you long the way,
An' soon will draw a fairer, brighter day.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES

ASHAMED TO GO OUT

Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly pimples, blotches, flesh worms and various other blood diseases.

Their presence is a source of embarrassment to those afflicted as well as pain and regret to their friends.

Many a cheek and brow cast in the mould of beauty have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Why, then, consent to rest under this cloud of embarrassment?

There is an effectual remedy for all these defects.

It is Burdock Blood Bitters. This remedy will drive out all the impurities from the blood and leave the complexion healthy and clear.

Mrs. Katherine Henry, Port Sydney, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my face was so covered with pimples I was ashamed to go out at all. I tried several remedies, but they were of no use. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle, and by the time it was used I could see a difference. I then got two more, and when I had used them the pimples were completely gone. I can highly recommend B.B.B."

FIERCE FIGHTING ON CAMBRAI FRONT

GERMANS ATTACK IN MASS FORMATION

FEROCIOUS BATTLE IS STILL RAGING IN THE CAMBRAI SECTOR

Germany's Biggest Push Over Open Country Since the Days of the Marne Shelling Continuing To-day With Terrific Losses--British Lines Are Holding Although the German Artillery Concentration Exceeds Anything the Enemy Has Done in This Line Since Verdun.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, December 3.—Germany's biggest push over open country since the days of the Marne was still continuing in fighting of unabated ferocity around Cambrai to-day. The British lines are holding. Field Marshal Haig's report to-day detailed the repulse of hostile attacks yesterday evening in the neighbourhood of Mouevres in "sharp fighting." Cavalry is apparently in action on bothr sides. The battle has now been waging almost uninterruptedly since Saturday. The German artillery concentration exceeds anything the enemy has done in the war of gun fire since Verdun.

London was prepared to-day for a heavy death toll, but with the realization that the German casualty must be nearly double the British. The Germans are harking—back to the old days of the forward sweep over Belgium and sending their troops colse formed ranks into charge with fearful losses to them. The weight of the German reserves has admittedly forced some readjustment of the British lines. Masnieres—a ruin of pulverized stones and bricks—was voluntarily given over to the enemy. It was untenable in view of fierce German artillery concentration on it, and there were one or two other spots where the Tommies were forced to shift their positions somewhat.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TOKIO, December 3. — Japan hasn't been able to locate the Grand Duchess Tatiana, of Russia. Despatches from the United States reporting a thrilling narrative of the alleged flight of the ex-Czar's daughter from exile in Siberia to Japan and thence to America, resulted in a thorough search here for traces of the Grand Duchess, but without success.

YOKAHAMA, December 3.—However, is flooded with Russian emigrants, and has been for some time, and it might be possible for a royal princess to hide away in the crowd.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Sunday—Heavy firing has occurred on the northern line in the last twenty-four hours in different sectors around Monte Pertica between the Brenta and Piave rivers, and on Meletta range running west of Brenta. Each of the opposing forces holds part of these positions. The general condition along the entire Italian front has improved distinctly in the last week. The defensive positions on the northern line are now considered as secure as those along the Piave. This with the gathering strength of the Italian and Allied forces has relieved the gravity of the situation. Northeastern Italy is now enclosed within a powerful barrier on the north and east which is considered sufficient to hold the enemy.

(Special to The Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, December 3.—Estimates of more than 13/2 billion dollars, the greatest in United States history, for conduct of Government and prosecution of the war during the fiscal year 1918-19, were submitted to Congress to-day by the Treasury Department. In round figures more than 15 billions of the vast sum is for war alone. Only part of it will be realized from taxation. The remainder will come from the issues of Liberty Bonds. The greatest sums of course are estimated for the army and navy. Estimates previously submitted in terms of thousands and occasionally millions, are now stated in terms of millions and billions.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, via Reuter's Ottawa Agency, Dec. 3.—The amount of territory gained by the enemy in Friday's attack at the loss of many thousands of men is so trifling that it scarcely shows appreciably on the military map. Tactically the situation may be said to remain virtually unaffected by the fighting, owing to our troops' magnificent spirit and determination. The difference between our recent splendid victory and the German reply is that we retain up to the depth of nearly six miles, whereas they were nearly everywhere beaten back to the point from which they started. The intention was to turn our line and pinch us out from our new line toward Cambrai. It was a test of respective fighting qualities with numerical odds, probably about three to one in favour of the Germans.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, December 3. — General Von Ludendorff, right-hand man of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, is quoted a by correspondent of the Vienna Neue Freie Presse ,as making the prediction at German Headquarters that the war will not end in a draw, but be decided in favour of the Central Powers.

General Von Ludendorff expressed the belief that the general armistice would interrupt the submarine activity and allow the Entente Allies to improve its positions. On the other hand no supplies would reach the Central Powers, therefore he thought such an armistice should be a brief one, as otherwise the military situation would suffer.

BERLIN, Dec. 3.—A Russian reputation, an official statement says, has arrived at the command of Prince Leopold of Bavaria, with the object of arranging a general armistice.

THE MAJORITY IN RUSSIA WILL NOT ACCEPT THE PACT

Bolsheviki Are Playing Their Grim Joke of a Peace With Germany While Their Regime is Tottering and Swaying to An Approaching Fall

KALEDINE ON THE MOVE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 3. — Russia's Bolsheviki played their grim joke of a peace with Germany to-day, while their regime tottered and swayed to an approaching fall at home. Every indication was that a majority of Russian democracy would never recognize any pact which the Trotsky-Lenine ring would patch up with the enemy.

The comment of the Rabochaya Gazette to-day was regarded here as epitomizing the opinion of best elements—and the majority elements—in Russia. "Bolsheviki is facing destruction," the editorial declared. "It will not come from Kaledine or from the adherents of the Provisional government, but it will come as a result of internal military disorganization, deliberately promoted, disappointment, disillusionment. We are facing the division of Russia into spheres of influence controlled by foreigners. Only the immediate unity of entire democracy and immediate war measures can save us. We must destroy our miserable Bonapartes."

Details were still lacking to-day as to the exact circumstances of the first meeting of the Brest Litovsky yesterday between the Bolsheviki and German peace negotiators. A speech made by Foreign Minister Trotsky Friday evening in announcing Ausria's acceptances of the formula of "no annexations," during the course of which he insisted the Central Powers must accept that phrase in its literal meaning, was taken here as indicating little likelihood of anything more then a temporary truce.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 3. —A report that Gen. Kaledine, with a hundred thousand Cossacks, had captured Rostov and was marching toward Moscow, was received here to-day via Naparanda.

Frank Jenne Says.

In 1895, just 22 years ago, the Semi-Ready Company was founded by Canadians from Toronto, Montreal and Peterborough, and the purpose was to see how well they could make men's clothes. They put actual hand tailoring and custom-made methods into each garment, but bought and sold in a wholesale way. They organized tailor shops and developed skilled specialists. They did this all at a cost of about a dollar more on each suit. "Come to me."

"GERMANY WILL BE BEATEN" SAYS GEN. PERSHING

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 3. — "Tell them there is no ground for the heresy that Germany cannot be beaten. Germany must be beaten, and Germany will be beaten," said a message from General Pershing, read by Bishop Luther B. Wilson at the West Side Y.M.C.A. here.

THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT IS ON SCENE AGAIN

Issues a Manifesto Claiming to Be Only Legal Authority in Russia and Urging People Not to Obey Decrees of the Bolsheviki

LATTER TAKE ACTION

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 3. — The Russian Provisional government, thrown out of power last month by the Bolsheviki, reappeared on the scene Friday, according to special despatches from Petrograd, and issued a manifesto claiming to be the only legal authority in Russia, and urging the people not to obey the decree of the Bolsheviki. All the measures taken by the Provisional Government,.. the. manithe manifesto says, were with the view of assembling the constituent assembly and to tide over the crisis until the constituent assembly would be able to declare the will of the people, but this hope was swept away by the revolt of extremists which dislocated the electoral machinery.

PAPERS SUSPENDED.

PETROGRAD, (Sunday).—All newspapers which printed the manifesto of the Provisional government, have been suspended. Their printing facilities have been placed at the disposal of the Maximalist and Peasant newspapers.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Reserves of several guard regiments and machine gun detachments comprise the forces sent against General Staff headquarters, which has refused to recognize the authority of Bolsheviki according to a Reuter despatch from Petrograd. The Council of Commissaries has instructed the Commissary of the State bank, it is added, to hand over to their nominees sums of money not exceeding a total of 25 million rubles.

Men's best deeds can be attributed to woman's influence—also, not infrequently, their worst.

Sergt. Walter Hodgson, Son of Mrs. Van Every is Reported Wounded While Pte A. E. Matheson of the 93rd Battalion Has Been Gassed

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

PTE. A. E. MATHISON.

Pte. A. E. Mathison, a well-known Havelock boy, who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion, and went overseas with that unit, is officially reported gassed. Pte. Mathison was transferred to the Canadian Engineers at the front.

Mrs. Fred E. Dunsford, Wescott Street, received a message yesterday that her husband, Pte. F. E. Dunsford, had arrived at Halifax.

Mrs. Van Every, 264 Hunter street, received an official telegram from Ottawa this morning, stating that her son, Sergt. Walter Hodgson, is officially reported wounded on Nov. 18. Sergt. Hodgson, who was formerly a well-known member of the local Y. M. C. A., enlisted in Edmonton early in the war with the Canadian Engineers, and has been through much of the hard fighting on the western front. Some time ago he was transferred to a Canadian infantry battalion.

VENICE SAVED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Venice is believed saved and the Austro-German advance at the Adriatic end of the Piave river has been halted, according to Rome cables to-day.

Marsh trenches, constructed by specially trained Italian troops through the marshy terrain, have checked the invaders. Batteries or monitors and other units of the Italian navy, supported by hydroplanes and motor boats, also figured in the rescue of the city from the Doges.

THE INTERLOCKING DIRECTORATE AND UNION GOVERNMENT

Present Administration is Made Up of Fifteen Corporation Lawyers —Mr. W. T. Lee Discusses the Three Graces at Mr. Hall's Saturday Evening Rally.

"A WAR BABY"

The inside workings of an interlocking directorate and its effect upon the Government of the country was referred to by Mr. W. T. Lee, of Toronto, who gave a very convincing and forceful address at the meeting held on Saturday evening in Victoria Hall in the interests of Mr. R. R. Hall. The speaker alluded to three members of the present Government as the trinity, or three graces, and incidentally gave the large number of people present a peep behind the scenes.

Mr. R. R. Hall opened the meeting with a vigorous appeal for greater food production and the utilisation of the vast resources of Canada in the prosecution of the war. Mr. James Kendry was absent from the meeting on the advice of his physician, Dr. Hammond. Mr. Hall read a letter at the meeting from Mr. Kendry himself, also a note from the physician, in which the latter forecasted the possibility of a breakdown in the event of Mr. Kendry being subjected to any undue excitement.

Chairman's Address.

Mr. J. J. Hartley, who presided, opened the meeting with a short address, in which he repudiated the allegation that all the loyalty associated with the present conflict is wrapped up in the so-called Union Government. "We are willing to do our part towards winning the war, and no party is more willing than the Liberal party," said Mr. Hartley.

The Chairman took exception to a system of compulsory service which permits one Province to exempt 94 per cent. of the eligible men and another Province to send every available man.

Win the War.

"To read one section of the local press you would think that one side was ready to continue the war and the other side ready to quit," said Mr. Hall on rising to speak. This is one way of showing to the outside world that one-half of the people of Canada are prepared to continue the fight and the other half to quit. Such a condition of affairs, if they existed, could not fail to give courage to the German people. So far as we are concerned we must and should be guided by the advice we must receive from the British Government If the British Government needs men then by all means let us send them and not wait for months . In April last we were told by Premier Borden that reinforcements were immediately required, and more recently we have been informed that the first draft will not be called until February next.

Are All Anxious.

We are all anxious to win the war, said Mr Hall. That is something that everybody must admit. We must support our armies with men and we must feed them, We cannot afford to be carried away by a lot of claptrap and sentiment. It is a serious business, and we must exercise commonsense and utilise the resources of the country. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in his manifesto, has said that among other things "we must confer with the British Government in respect to the necessity of the Allies for men, food, and other essentials. Labour has been overlooked in the present Government in spite of the fact that there is no class in Canada so vitally interested and concerned as the working men of the country. They should have one of the most important portfolios in Parliament. As it is they are represented in Parliament by the Hon. Mr. Crothers, who hasn't even a portfolio.

BRITISH REGAIN MORE OF THE LOST GROUND TO-DAY

Germans Used Twenty Divisions in the Assault on Friday, the Heaviest Attack on the British Lines Since First Battle of Ypres

FIGHTING IS FIERCE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Dec. 3.—British troops last night reoccupied the section of trench on high ground southwest of Bourlon village on the Cambrai front, which was lost on Friday. The town of Masnieures, which was evacuated by the British, was shelled last night by British artillery. General Byng's troops last night pressed near to the village of Villiers Guislain and along the ridges southwest of that place and their line now is fairly near the town. It is estimated that the Germans had about twenty divisions for the assault Friday, which except ofr the first Ypres battle, is regarded as having been their heaviest attack on the British. The Germans attacked the British positions at LaVacquerie southwest of Cambrai at 8:45 o'clock this morning, and an hour later it was reported that they had been successfully beaten off. To-day's attack followed three futile attempts made by the enemy to take this village yesterday afternoon.

6,000 PRISONERS SAYS BERLIN.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, via London, Dec. 3. — Since Friday the Germans have captured six thousand British prisoners i nthe Cambrai region, the German General Staff announced to-day. Guns taken numbered one hundred.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Hostile attacks delivered yesterday evening against our positions in the neighbourhood of Moeuvres, Cambrai sector, were repulsed after sharp fighting, says to-day's official report. Successful minor encounters during the night in the neighbourhood of Bourlon resulted in the capture by London troops of twelve German machine guns and a number of prisoners. Beyond considerable artillery activity by both sides on the southern battle front, there is nothing further to report.

General Currie Taking Rest

No Foundation For Rumour That He Has Been Relieved of His Command

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Exeminer.)

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—There is no foundation for the story that General Sir Arthur Currie has been relieved of his command. The General has been in poor health as a result of three years of strain, and at his request he is now having a few weeks off. That is al lthere is to it, according to high authorities here.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, DEC. 3, 1917

INCONSISTENCY.

In June, 1916, the Borden Government suppressed the Sault Ste. Marie Express, because its editor expressed the idea that we should need "no more Canadian soldiers for overseas service," and that "what the Empire needs right now is peace." This led to the suppression of the paper for a time.

Of course, the sentiments expressed are not in accord with the mass of Canadian opinion or our national responsibility, though that in regard to peace is not greatly different from what Lord Lansdowne, a former Governor-General of Canada, and a leading British statesman, is saying today. That, however, didn't excuse the sentiments of the Sault Ste. Marie Express, nor fail to largely justify the penalty implied in suspension of publication.

This penalty, however, though it is regarded as rightly imposed in the abstract, is entirely inconsistent with the attitude of the Government in relation to a much greater offender, Mr. Bourassa's paper Le Devoir. While the "Soo" paper was promptly suppressed, Bourassa's paper, that has been for years preaching treason—declaring that Canada should send no soldiers, and especially since the war began—is allowed to appear day after day and circulate broadcast throughout Quebec to the number of 25,000 or 30,000 daily.

More than that, Bourassa's vilely seditious sheet, that reeks of treason, was specially subsidised by Conservative campaign friends in 1911 to help elect, as supporters of Sir Robert Borden, twenty-eight or thirty Quebec Nationalists who held the doctrine that Canada should not send a rifle or soldier to help in Britain's wars.

It is to Bourassa and the Nationalists, with the aid, encouragement and support of the Borden Government, that we owe the fact that we have a solid Quebec against Canada's work in the war. It is to this virtual conspiracy between organised treason and sedition and lust for party gain that Quebec fell down on recruiting. The public opinion of Quebec was debauched by the wholesale injection of the virus of treason by the Nationalist propaganda, carried on while the Borden Government, like Saul at the martyrdom of St. Stephen, held Bourassa's coat, and more than that, officially patronised, protected, and encouraged the emissaries of Nationalism, whose ablest and most virulent representatives for six years have occupied seats as the King's advisers in the Cabinet of a loyal Dominion.

This is the outrage upon the loyal sentiment perpetrated, or at least encouraged and permitted, by a Government that, in a new disguise, claims to stand for all that is loyal and Imperialistic, and calls upon honest Canadians to sink their honest convictions and vote to help retrieve the disaster for which, directly or indirectly, they are mainly responsible.

Sir Robert Borden tries to get out of the responsibility for the misrule of his Government by now claiming that he is the leader of no party. "Too thin."

HOW WOULD THE KAISER VOTE?

The so-called Union government was ostensibly formed to unite the two great parties of the country in an energetic endeavour to help win the war. Yet the same Union government has created, or is responsible for, more party bitterness than any other agency in our history

Those supporting it are viciously and scurrilously abusive, to the last degree of the party supposed to have equal representation in the Union government. Every Canadian who does not bow down and worship the "Union" government and its works, is denounced as traitorous and pro-German.

No sane or right-thinking person will say that the Liberals of Canada are less loyal, less patriotic, and less interested in winning the war because they do not exploit their loyalty with pharasiac publicity, and venture to have opinions of their own.

So far has abuse of their opponents by champions of the Union government gone, that a Baptist minister in Ottawa, from the pulpit condemned the practice. He particularly condemned the odious question: "Who would the Kaiser vote for?" posted on the bill boards of Brockville, in the interests of Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, who is appealing to Liberals and Conservatives alike to support the Victory Loan, as both have splendidly done.

The Union government, and its campaign of slander of its opponents, is not so much uniting, as it is separating and weakening popular interest and cooperation in winning the war.

As to the question, "Who would the Kaiser vote for?" it is capable of different answers. J. Wesley Allison, De Witt Foster and Garland, convicted grafters, Flavelle and the brood of food profiteers, would say that the Kaiser would vote for Laurier—and they are all patriots—for revenue.

It is probable that the Kaiser would vote for the authors of conscription—something in the way of coercing manhood he has made a specialty of for forty years—as a miltiary measure, and as an expedient to win an election, as an escape valve for popular indignation against the misrule and German methods and maladministration of a goverment that dare not face the electors in a fair fight, but must appeal under the semblance of a "Union" government.

The Kaiser would probably vote for the masquerading government that invented and enacted by gag methods the most utterly German franchise act abomination that ever was enacted to throttle free expression of public opinion; an act that in its design and incidence embodies the basest denial of justice, and the grossest injustice to a free people.

Yes; if the Kaiser had any doubts as to how on other grounds he would cast his vote, the disfranchising franchise act of the Borden government—which the Union government in its new form has adopted, would decide him. In its unfair conception, and inquitous spirit, it is something quite "to the Kaiser's taste."

The Victory Loan is the only serious pure piece of patriotism, at the fore at present.

PLAYING FAST AND LOOSE.

The Union Government makes conscription the key note, the king pin of its policy. It is the almost sole ground of appeal to the eletcorate by the leader of the government and his colleagues. It is the sine qua nor; and the plea heretofore has been that it is to be enforced to the letter, without respect of persons. Sir Robert Borden assured parliament that it would be enforced without favour or bias.

But now that there are sgins that this enforcement is likely to alienate farmers' votes in the pendin- election, Sir Robert takes the opportunist stand and conscription must be relaxed in the interest of the farmers.

The conscription act is to be interfered with not only by the Premier and his ministers, but humble local satellite are to have a finger in the pie.

In the Review of Saturday, with front page prominence, an article appears with a three-column heading, in "box car" letters—"Capt. Burnham will visit committees and hear all complaints."

What is the meaning of this or of the statement that "Capt. Burnham will visit his organization committees and hear complaints?

This is the top-notch of absurdity. Neither Capt. Burnham nor Premier Borden nor anybody else can interfere, except unlawfully and tyrannically, with the operation of the Conscription Act, if "complaints" refer to that.

The most absurd, ludicrous, and characteristic part of the function of Capt. Burnham's plenipotentiary "visit to the committees" is this gem of Germanism.

"He (Capt. Burnham) will also draw attention to the necessity of the people who agree to help doing what the candidate, who superintends the organzation, wants, without introducing any ideas of their own."

Here we have the local union candidate, the accredited agent of the Union Government going forth to hear complaints." He seems to have "plenipotentiary commission". He will hear complaints, but the action arising from complaints must be in accord with the ideas of the candidate—they must not think for themselves; they must hear and obey; "without introducing ideas of their own." They must let the little Kaiser of West Peterborough do their thinking for them—tell them what to do, and they must do it. He is running this campaign, not his committees, and his understrappers must obey without venturing to think.

The bona fides of the Union Government, in regard to conscription and its urgent necessity of application is destroyed by the attitude of the Government. In May last Sir Robert declared for Conscripion—it must be enacted and applied at once—it was needed to rush Canadian reinforcements to the front. Instead of legislating at once and passing conscription, as might have been done in a moth, it was delayed, and it was four months before the Military Service Act was passed, and we are well into the seventh month since Sir Robert declared for conscription and not a single soldier is enrolled.

And at the critical moment of its application there is to be still more delay. We are to have wholesale appeals from the findings of exemption tribunals. There are 1,350 of them, and the appeals will be in thousands.

What will be the result of these appeals? Nobody knows. The Government can't control this action of the appeal tribunals. If they generally suport the findings of the tribunals we have the status qquo. If they heed Sir Robert's plea to grant appeals for the exemption of farmers in the interest of affecting the farmers' vote for the union government we shall have to do a good deal of work over again and we shall be short of a large number of men.

We have more delay, brought on by the government, which tells us over and over again, from every platform that the need, the urgent need is for men to be rushed to the front.

Sir Robert said in Peterborough that he is the leader of no party, but he is leading an organization which, in the face of its declaration that the crying need is for the enrolment of reinforcements, is using the conscription act to help the Union Government gather votes at the coming election. Win the election and then we shall consider the matter of enrolling men.

"Shall we do; or shall we delay?"

A THINKER'S ANALYSIS OF THE RELATIONS OF MR. ROWELL TO HIS OLD AND NEW ASSOCIATIONS

In the company of Sir Robert Borden, the former Liberal leader in Ontario has lost his individuality and his prestige.

The voice that once challenged the crimes of misgovernment, of which Sir Robert Borden stood accused, is new but a faint echo from the band wagon of the Borden Party. Even the Tories squirm when Mr. Rowell eulogizes Sir Robert Borden in the Premier's presence.

No one knows better than Borden that the weakest link in the Unionist chain is Rowell. Like the three tailors of Tooley street, he represents no one but himself. He remains in politics to-day by the grace of former Tory opponents. If returned to Parliament he will represent the men who stood behind Hon. "Bob" Rogers, who condoned the graft and corruption of the past three years, and who are responsible for the Iniquitous Franchise Act that constitutes a breach of faith as morally indefensible as the violation of the Belgian neutrality by Germany.

If Union Government is so necessary now, why did Mr. Rowell hesitate to join Borden on the first pressing invitation? Why did he stand aside and make way for the leadership of Hugh Guthrie? For in this matter of Union Government Guthrie, not Rowell, led the way. With Hugh Guthrie in the Borden fold it was necessary to allay the antagonism which Guthrie's name aroused, and to bait the Unionist trap with some more sweet-smelling morsel. Rowell, it was well known, could not lead any Liberal following. The anti-Reciprocity Liberals of 1911 fame, and the remnant of the Knights of the Round Table were all that Rowell could muster. But the crying need of Borden was moral, rather than numerical backing. Without moral ballast the Borden ship was doomed to founder in the election storms that were brewing.

No one had denounced more trenchantly the moral shortcomings of the Borden government than Mr. Rowell. So Mr. Rowell joined the unholy alliance, became chief trumpeter to the Premier at the Massey Hall, Toronto, swallowed his own private utterances regarding Borden, kissed Hugh Guthrie on both cheeks, and seized the unholy weapons of autocracy which Borden had conceived and fashioned for the overthrow of electoral freedom in Canada.

So well has Rowell conned his Unionist lessons that he now gives silent consent to the most immoral act ever perpetrated by a leader hungering for office. He stands silently by while his new friends defend and seek to justify the difranchisement of the naturalized alien citizens. What a spectacle for gods and men!"

At Oshawa Mr William Smith cited the Kitchener incidents "as sufficient answer to Laurier's protest against the disfranchisement of alien enemies in the west."

Where was Mr. Rowell's Liberalism when this discreditable assertion of Prussian political doctrines was voiced on a public platform in his presence? Can the man who condones this unjustifiable wrong to the naturalized citizens of Canada find fault with honest Liberals who see in his weak surrender to the enemies of democratic freedom the abandonment of the Liberal platform?

Can Mr. Rowell wonder if old time Grits who have fought for democratic principles of Government hold up their hands in horror at the spectacle he now presents, of aider and abettor of legislation which is the negation of Liberalism and which was designed to stifle the free voice of a free Canada in the most fateful and momentous days that have confronted the Dominion since Confederation. So far from Hon. Wesley Rowell adding moral strength to the Borden Ministry, he himself has weakened in his moral integrity by joining hands and condoning the political crimes of men whose unsavoury reputation stinks in the nostrils of every decent citizen.

Mr. Rowell must be judged by the company he keeps. He is already so far removed from Liberal traditions that he now talks in the language of Bordenism. Without a Liberal following in Ontario save the deserters of 1911, who opposed Reciprocity, and the Round Table leaders who tried to force Canada into a scheme of Imperial Federation that would have placed the real government of this country once more in the hands of Downing street, Mr. Rowell has the audacity to assert that he and not Laurier represents Liberalism.—The Searchlight.

A professor of Princeton, who has taken much interest in the woman suffrage movement, was persuaded to carry a manner in a parade held in Washington.

His wife observed him marching with a dejected air, and carrying his banner so that it hung limply on its standard, and later she reproved him for not making a better appearance.

"Why didn't you march like somebody, and let the people see your banner?" she asked.

"Dearie," sighed the professor, "did you see what was on that banner? It read, 'Any man can vote. Why can't I?'"

HOW YOU CAN SAVE MONEY
Now and Afterwards

The FORD Car

Still "Going Strong" all over the World

But the sooner you buy your Ford the less it will cost you.

From information received a car shortage is inevitable, and an upward revision of prices may be looked for any day.

It is obvious, therefore, that unless the prospective buyer acts reasonably soon, he will find it a difficult matter to obtain the car he wants at any price.

It is practically certain that the demand for Ford Cars will very soon exceed the output, and that the shortage will compel a radical revision in car prices upwards.

The Ford Touring Car is still the Universal motor car of the world—the car of the multitudes; and, up to date, is still selling at last year's price, viz., $495, F.O.B. Ford. The cheapest car of any similar model of any other make is nearly Double the price.

The sum and substance of the whole matter is: that the prospective car buyer will save money now and afterwards by booking his order NOW. We have put into effect a plan which should prove eminently satisfactory to those who can book their order forthwith for future delivery. Our salesmen will be glad to explain this plan.

RESTAURANT KEEPERS COMPLYING WITH FOOD CONTROLLER'S REGULATIONS

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—The Food Controller has received from Mr. F. W. Mossop an interesting report on his inspection of hotels, restaurants and clubs in the City of Toronto. The inspection had as its purpose to see how the public eating places were complying with the regulations in regard to the use of beef and bacon and the requirement that substitutes be provided at all meals for white bread. Mr. Mossop will visit other cities, systematically following up the work which he has done so successfully in Toronto.

Mr. Mossop personally visited 500 public eating places. On the general question as to whether the hotel and restaurant keepers are carrying out the spirit as well as the letter of the Food Controller's orders, he states: "If I am to base my opinion on the number of places keeping the law in all regards, it is that the scheme is an unquestionable success. The people appear to be ready and willing to co-operate."

Mr. Mossop found among the many smaller restaurant keepers of non-British extraction a surprisingly accurate knowledge of the law. It was among these, however, that there was the largest number of infractions of the regulation calling for the display of notices requesting the people when ordering food, to remember the needs of the Allies.

In some cases where there was keen competition among foreign restaurant keepers, there were allegations that the competitor "over the road" was not observing the regulations, but the actual infringements, Mr. Mossop found on investigation, to be comparatively few. Wherever necessary, warnings were given. The police in Toronto are co-operating with the Food Controller in securing observance of the food regulations and four members of the force have been assigned for that purpose exclusively.

"The percentage of non-observances I think will be small and I am convinced that much good will come of my personal visit." Mr. Mossop says in his statement: "Some have not been paying attention to this law, but I think in future a very small percentage will be evading it."

It should not be forgotten that the obligation to provide cards for display in public eating places rests with the proprietor alone, but the Food Controller's Office will gladly send a supply of suitable cards upon request.

Mr. Mossop also made an inspection of the arrangements on all railway dining cars running out from Toronto, including the American lines, and found a desire everywhere to coperate with the Food Controller in whatever measures are necessary to conserve food.

The Food Controller has already made it plain that the regulations applying to public eating-places must be observed. He has urged the local police authorities and the restaurantmen to come to some understanding which all will be required to observe, as to hours during which beef and bacon may be served. In the case of Ottawa it has been agreed that bacon may be served only between 5.30 a.m. and 10.30 a.m., and beef only from 11 a.m. to 2.30 p.m., except on Tuesdays and Fridays, when no beef or bacon may be served at any meal.

The police authorities everywhere in the ominion are showing a willingness to co-operate fully with the Food Controller in order that the regulations may be enforced.

WHAT GOLF IS.

GOLF—it is a science—the study of a lifetime, in which you may exhaust yourself but never your subject.

It is a contest, a duel or a melee, calling for courage, skill, strategy, and self-control.

It is a test of temper, a trial of honour, a revealer of character.

It affords a chance to play the game and act the gentleman.

It promotes not only physical doors, getting close to nature, fresh air, exercise, a sweeping away of the mental cobwebs, genuine re-creation of the tired tissues.

It is a cure for care—an antidote to worry.

It concludes companionship with friends, social intercourse, opportunity for courtesy, kindness and generosity to an opponent.

A Story of Self-Sacrifice

Occasionally of course, one meets Salvationists who are not members of the Salvation Army; but speaking broadly, what distinguishes General Booth's organization from other parts of Christ's church is the belief that religion, instead of being merely a matter for formal occasions and private meditation, is for every day use and avowal. Thus it comes about that the Salvation Army is the one church without any laity, all its members being ministers, who preach their sermons not only in words, but in the way they live—and die.

TYPICAL INSTANCES.

"The War Cry" brings typical instances of Salvationist happenings, to one of which my attention was recalled when, as a preliminary to crossing the Channel, I was visiting Salvation Army Huts in British army camps of Southern England.

It seems that after H. M. S. "Cressy," "Hogue," and "Aboukir" had been torpedoed, two exhausted sailors, swimming about in the water, at last came upon a spar which while sufficiently buoyant to keep either of them afloat, sank under the combined weight of both, so that they were constrained to take alternate spells of buffeting with the heavy swell and of clinging to the piece of wood—a process which could not be indefinitely prolonged, and that was terminated, when one, who was a Salvationist, said "Good-bye, mate; death means life to me; but you are not converted, so keep hold and save yourself"—saving which he suffered himself to be carried away, inevitably to be drowned; and afterwards the other man, who survived and was rescued, reported at a Salvationist meeting the act of self-sacrifice to which he owed his life.

That beautiful abstract fact, when brought a second time to my notice, prompted a desire to see it in a framework of human nature—in other words to find out something more about the anonymous hero who gave the highest proof of a spirit that was also revealed in the Salvation Army Hut I was visiting. For those huts were administered in a spirit of brotherly love, and brotherly love reaches its golden zenith when one man gives his life for another.

METHODICALLY ARRANGED.

A large wooden hall fitted as a shop and refreshment counter at one end, and having nearly all the rest of the space occupied by chairs and little trestle tables, methodically arranged with intervening gangways—such is the interior of a Salvation Army Hut, which probably also contains a piano, a picture or two, and a placard giving het times of trains or motor busses. Yellow deal being yellow deal, there is little to distinguish it from the thousand and one other huts of the camp—officers' quarters, men's quarters, messes, canteens, stores, and recreation rooms.

Some of these other huts you might find full of men in khaki, just as you are almost sure to find the Salvation Army Hut full of men in khaki. But it is different from them, because the person who serves at the counter, and the person who cooks the eggs and bacon, and the person who clears the tables and does the washing up, is—well, because he or she is moved by the same motive as the man who relinquishes his share of the spar.

Most of us, as is only natural, are wont to strive with a main eye to the worldly advantage of ourselves and of our families, modern existence being accepted as a competitive struggle—a sort of game of grab—for fame, fortune and felicity; it being currently reported, not only that self-preservation is the first law of nature, but if a man does not take his own part no one else will. The faith of the Salvationist contradicts these propositions—and he acts accordingly, with the result that his experience contradicts them also.

IN THE WASH-HOUSE

As for felicity, my visits to those Huts introduced me to some notable examples of that state of being. There were, for instance, Adjutant and Mrs. M., whom I interviewed in the washhouse, that being the only place where a visitor could occupy a little standing room without interrupting business. For as usual, there were about a hundred Tommies in the Hut, so a good deal of cooking and serving was going on. The Salvationist couple were assisted by a Salvationist girl, and a Salvationist lad, which gave the equivalent of a staff of eight under normal commercial conditions, one person who labors for love being equal to two who merely work for wages.

What with selling picture postcards, frying kippers, asking a man about his invalid wife, opening tins of pineapples, and helping a poorer scholar to write to his sweetheart, there was a good deal doing on our side of the counter, and my interview with Adjutant and Mrs. M. was consequently jerky—two minutes with him, half a minute with her, five minutes alone with the copper.

"I tell you," cried the enthusiastic Adjutant, "I'd do anything for the boys—they're so splendid. Just to show you—our regular hours are from half past six in the morning to half past seven at night—and they keep us pretty busy, too, all the time, bless 'em; but often enough some one will come before the proper time, or after we are shut. Parties reach camp at night, you see—and they're very likely hungry after their march, poor chaps. Who could turn 'em away, I'd like to know?

Same as night before last there was a knock just as I'd finished making up my books and was about to turn in. One of our regular customers has brought around a few tired lads out of a lot that had just come in, 'and would I mind,' he said, 'just to cook a few more sausages and give 'em a drop of tea.' Mind! of course not. And they must have passed the word back, for I'd cooked twenty pounds of sausages before I was through—twenty pounds after closing time, mind! That day I had already cooked at least ——"

WERE IN A HURRY.

But here his wife arrived breathlessly to report that eight bacon and eggs were in a hurry as they must get back to parade; and away dashed the Adjutant to see to it.

"Ah! you've no idea what fine boys we get here," the Adjutant's wife lingered to tell me· "and they are so grateful when one tries to help them, if it's only with a word of sympathy or encouragement. Being away from home, often for the first time, they miss their own women folks, and they can see I just love to mother them. Then, of course, there's the uniform. It's a great privilege to wear a uniform that everybody seems to have confidence in and look up to. They do feel the seriousness of what lies before them; and when they speak about the prayers they may for years have forgotten to say, and the bad annexations or idemnities. The allied ways they may have fallen into, why then I can't keep the tears back (my husband says it is so silly of me to be always crying over them—or else laughing!)—but it makes one more an more eager in pointing to the path of peace and begging those dear souls to arm themselves against all dangers by loving the Saviour, who so loves them. The other day—"

But the Salvationist lass popped her head in to report a crowd at the counter; and I found myself with an opportunity to count the milk churns and packing cases crowded about the copper.

SPASMODIC INTERVIEW.

And so the spasmodic interview ran on, the theme alternating strangely between sausages and souls, but the same spirit prevailing throughout.

Those sprightly toilers in The Salvation Army Huts had all, no doubt, been born with the natural tendency to live for themselves. But they had turned right-about-face, and were now living for others—and impersonal mode of existence, by the by, that seemed to cause them an enduring glow of happiness.

I was the more interested in these manifestations of the spirit of unselfishness because they seemed so clearly to bear—though in what way and degree did not yet appear—on these human problems of warfare which I had set out to try and solve.

Thus my desire grew for further information about the shipwrecked sailor who died so eloquent and graphic a death — further information to which, as it happened, my sausage-cooking friend pointed the way. He referred me to a Salvationist officer at Folkestone, at whose suggestion I waited on a Salvationist officer at Canterbury, by whom my steps were directed to a Salvationist officer at Sittingbourne—to wit, Adjutant Pickering, who proved to have valuable information to impart. For the beautiful incident first came to light in a neighbouring town during her command there.

"One Sunday evening in our hall at Sheerness," she explained, "there were seven or eight recent converts—navy men—and sitting among them was a sailor named Peter Ross. I did not know his name at the time, but I remembered seeing him the night before, when he followed from our open-air meeting to the hall. I called for personal testimonies, and one of the men who got up was Peter Ross. He said he had never thought about God in the past, nor had his people, but he wanted to give his heart to God now because of something that had happened to him. He went on to tell us (I cant' remember the words—only the sense) that he had been on H.M.S. "Aboukir" when she was torpedoed, and that after he had been swimming about in the water for some time he came across a shipmate named Brumpton, who was a Salvationist. When feeling rather exhausted, they found a spar which could keep one of them afloat but not both together, as it wasn't large enough.

A GREAT IMPRESSION.

"So after a bit Brumpton wished him good-bye, and said, 'Death means life to me, but it'll be death for you if you go down without being converted; so you hold on and save yourself.'" Ross said that it had made a great impression on him, and he wanted his life to be different. Afterwards he told me how sorry he was that he had not written to his people for five years, and he gave me his sisters' address. I wrote and told them that their brother had announced his conversion in our hall, and they sent me a very nice letter in reply, saying how glad they were."

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES IN MARK STREET CHURCH

Rev. T. H. Mitchell, Formerly of St. Andrew's Church Was the Special Preacher, Occupying the Pulpit at Both Services.

CHURCH UNION DISCUSSED

Mark street Methodist church was crowded yesterday morning and evening for the anniversary services, which were conducted by Rev. Thos. Mitchell, rector of Old St. Andrew's church, Toronto, and formerly rector of St. Andrew's of this city. In the morning Mr. Mitchell chose as his subject, "The problem that has been brought on by war,' and in the evening the problem, of which we have no greater, "The Religious Education of the Young.'

Evening Sermon.

Using as his text Proverbs, xxii-6, "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Mr. Mitchell showed *how church union may be wrought by the religious instruction of the child.

In his youth "the meaning of education was the having the three "R's," later the three "H's"—head, heart and hand, but better than all these is the sane development of body, mind and spirit and training up all three for life's specific tasks.

Four Problems.

There are four problems in the training. First we have the physical—in this boys and girls should have a knowledge of health. Man is a tool user and the tool nearest to him is his own body. In the majority of cases men do not know how to use it aright. The profound ignorance of the right use of the body accounts for the actual fact shown by statistics that in the United States to-day there are 22 million children physically defective who may be cured by judicious teaching and care. During the last 100 years, with all the world's boasted progress the actual length of the average life has only been lengthened 26 weeks.

Of the second question — mental training, Mr. Mitchell thought too much training is devoted to memory and the power of observance, not sufficiently cultivated. To teach this means the expenditure of a great deal of money on teaching and equipment, but the result would justify any such outlay.

The third question, of vocational training. Eighty per cent. of the children of to-day never go on to high school. When the child comes to the time of a vocational choice it is the duty of his elders to aid him in every way. The beginning, and a splendid beginning has been made, but it must go further. Mr. Mitchell would like to see a Model school, in which theoretical training in the morning, practical training in the afternoon and no home work, was the programme. "There is," he said, "too much pushing at present when a better result could be obtained by a gradual and better advised course.

Fourth, comes the moral and spiritual question. What is the use of teaching a child spelling and not teaching him the right way to use it. Spelling may equip a forger, chemistry a dynamiter, without a moral training. We must make religion the flowering of the educational system. The drawback to religious education in the schools is the lack of unity in creeds. Every ethical revival has been preceded by a religious awakening. Why have we not made religion the flowering of our educational system? Because of our sectarianism. We have made religion devisable when we should be united.

Church Union.

To-day the problem of church union faces us as a necessity and the hope is to bring three congregations together. The prospects of unity to-day are higher than the world in general dreams. The Baptists say we must have religious immersion. We are coming to a choice of baptism or immersion, so this difficulty is surmounted. The Anglican church, which first began the movement of church union, has no insurmountable difficulty. The Roman Catholic church is gradually coming to church unity. Hundreds of priests are evolved together for a better theology. There are two difficulties, the Eucharist and Infallibility of the Pope. The last difficulty has been surmounted already by the fact that we live in days of democracy. It is Mr. Mitchell's firm conviction that one hundred years would see the union of Christedom, for which greater movements have been made than we think.

Reverance.

Reverance, Mr. Mitchell said, in conclusion, is the foundation of religion. To cultivate reverance we must read the Great Book. In this hurried time we must not be too hurried to train the child and train him in the diction of the text while his heart is plastic

Music & Drama

THE ONLY GIRL.

"The Only Girl," the musical farce seen at the Grand in afternoon and evening performances on Saturday, entertained two good-sized audiences with its funny lines and bright music. The story is more logical than is usual with musical comedies and there are some very amusing situations, of which full advantage is taken. Musically the score does not come up to Victor Herbert's average, although he has introduced a catchy love theme, "When You're Away," and a topical song, "When Your Ankle Wears the Ball and the Chain," that is a real hit. The latter number scored the biggest success of the night, and was encored half a dozen times. The cast did not contain any particular stars, although Juliene Costa sang very nicely, and Charles Hare worked hard to be funny as a Scotch comedian.

ONE DAY WILL DO IT

People who have been suffering from backache, kidney trouble, rheumatic ailments are somteimes under the impression that they will have to continue to suffer from these ailments and they will be unable to obtain relief. Headache, nervousness, soreness in the bones and limbs are frequently caused by poisonous gases being absorbed into the system, and the kidneys are overtaxed in their effort to expel these gases. Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills will prevent the formation of these poisonous gases, and are a positive cure for kidney troubles, rheumatic ailments or any disease arising from a disorderly condition of the kidneys. The manufacturers are so confident that these pills will do what we claim for them that your dealer is authorized to refund your money if they do not give you satisfaction. Will you try them and be convinced? They are sold by one reliable dealer in each county. Sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store. Price 50c. Mail orders attended to promptly. 4dm

It is a striking coincidence that the things a boy likes to throw at break the easiest.

To listen to people who tell you things for your own good is harmless —and it often affords them a lot of pleasure.

SCENE FROM "LILAC TIME."

On Friday and Saturday next Jane Cowl and Jane Murfin's play "Lilac Time" wil be presented to local theatre-goers direct from its record run at the Park Square Theatre, Boston.

"Lilac Time," though it is billed as a play of love and Springtime, has deeper and more timely interest in that it has to do with life behind the trenches "Somewhere in France." It is in no sense a war drama, however, but a story of woman's love, lovalty and devotion, as exemplified particularly by the brave French women, whose courage and undying fortitude have became a household word. Jeannine, a young French peasant at whose mother's farmhouse a group of English officers is billeted, one of these, Philip Plythe, falls in love with the attractive adaughter of the household and they plan to be married in the village church. Almost immediately he is ordered away upon a secret mission. For months nothing is heard from him and then follows a letter saying he will return that day. On the heels of this comes the word of his death, and Jeannine, in an agony of self-renunciation, rushes to the window as his regiment marches past, shouting: "Viva La France." Nevertheless, there is a happy ending, so that the audience is sent home in the lively houmour after following the thrilling experience of Jeannine.

Many of the original cast will be seen here and the play will be presented the same as during its entire season's run at the Republic Theatre, New York.

AMERICANS IN THE FIGHT

United States Engineers and Doctors Distinguish Themselves in Cambrai Battle

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES, Dec. 3.—Americans did their bit to aid Byng's Tommies in pushing back around Cambrai Germany's most formidable asault since Verdun. They weren't enlisted to fight. They were engineers and doctors. The engineers got caught in the maelstrom of struggling lines and some were cut off by the Germans. Then a good many of them rolled up their sleeves and went into the fight. They borrowed rifles and fought like bear cats, shoulder to shoulder with the British. The American doctors stuck to their jobs of helping the wounded under fire. The whole British army was ringing with praise of their first class fighting ability. Ever since the beginning of Byng's thrust the American army engineers have been building and operating strategic railways close up to the German lines. Most of them got their first baptism of fire n Crown Prince Rupprecht's counter surprise blow. They liked it and went into the fighting with enthusiasm.

Change So Great Her Friend Hardly Recognized Her

Mrs. Hooper Tells of Her Wonderful Improvement By Taking Tanlac

"One day last week I met a friend on the street and she hardly knew me at first. This shows how I have improved since I began taking Tanlac," said Mrs. Nellie Hooper, of 281 Oakwood Avenue, Toronto, in an interview recently.

"I have suffered so much from nervousness and indigestion during the past six months," she continued, "and had become so pale and lifeless that I was very blue and despondent. My appetite left me entirely, and I had no relish for food of any kind. What I did eat seemed to fill me with gas, causing a tight feeling in my chest and almost cut off my breath. I was constantly belching up sour gas, and I could taste my food for hours after eating it. My nerves were so upset that I could hardly rest at all. Some nights it was three or four o'clock before I would dose off to sleep, and then I would get up in the mornings all tired and worn out, like I hadn't lain down at all. My face hardly had the colour of life in it, and I had no energy or strength scarcely.

I had lost over twenty pounds of flesh and was getting thinner and weaker every day, when I read about Tanlac and decided to try it. I have been gaining weight and strength ever since I began taking it, and while I have used only two bottles so far, the results have already been astonishing. My stomach trouble has disappeared entirely, my appetite is wonderful and I can eat big hearty meals now without having a sign of indigestion. My colour is better, I have more life and energy, and, in fact, I have improved until I feel like a new person, and my friends often speak of how much better I look. My nerves are now perfectly calm and, and my sleep is as sound and peaceful as a baby. Tanlac has certainly been a great thing for me, and I take pleasure in recommending it to everyone."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

JAPAN IS WAITING FOR THE VERDICT

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Ralph Turner.)

TOKIO, Dec. 3.— Japan is anxious to hear what the Supreme War Council and the Inter-Allied Conference decided as to Nippon's further part in the war. The Russian Bolsheviki armistice plans to-day brought about a renewal of dicussion as to Japan sending troops to the western fronts. It was believed here that Paris and Versailles conferences formally considered such additions to the Allies' fighting forces.

Japanese officialdom was frankly eager to learn what decisions had been reached by these meetings. Apparently no report had been received from Japan's envoys. That the empire will participate much more largely in the war from now on, was regarded as certain by the public.

MADE ESCAPE BY WILD JUMP FROM TRAIN

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Lieut. Patrick O'Brien of Momence, Illinois, south of Chicago, the first American member of the British flying corps to escape from Germany, has arrived in London. O'Brien escaped his captors by jumping from a swiftly moving train. He then became a fugitive for seventy-two days and, as his goal was within sight, narrowly escaped electrocution from the charged wires along the Holland frontier. Last night O'Brien was dined by a group of fellow fliers, who, like scores of friends along the front, had believed he had been killed when he was reported missing on August 17th last.

O'Brien, who is a sturdy young man of twenty-seven, was flying in an aviation squadron at San Diego, California, when he went to Victoria, B. C., and obtained a commission in the Canadian army. Going to France the next year, he distinguished himself by his great daring over the German lines. On the morning of August 17, enemy gunners forced him to descend, but fortunately he landed behind his own lines.

JUMPED FROM WINDOW.

Late in the afternoon of the same day saw him up again over the German lines fighting the enemy. There were twenty German machines to six British in the encounter, O'Brien's machine alone engaging four enemy craft and accounting for one before O'Brien was shot through the upper lip. He fell with his damaged machine from a height of eight thousand feet. O'Brien says he cannot explain why he was not killed. When he regained consciousness he was in a German hospital.

Later the lieutenant spent three weeks at a prison camp at Courtral before he was started for the interior of Germany. There were three other prisoners under a strong guard in his compatment when O'Brien, as a ruse, had the window opened by complaining of the smoke.

The train was now sixty miles inside Germany and travelling at 30 miles an hour, but O'Brien decided to take a desperate chance. He jumped from the train, skinning the whole side of his face, re-opening the wound in his lip and losing consciousness. It was about 4 o'clock in the morning and the darkness shielded him. When he recovered he was lying in a field.

LIVED ON VEGETABLES.

Then for seventy-two days he was a fugitive, travelling only at night. He trudged through fields and swam rivers and canals in Germany, Luxembourg and Belgium before he reached the Dutch frontier. At the time of his flight he had a piece of sausage on which he subsisted for several days, after which his whole sustenance consisted of turnips and other vegetables found in fields.

O'Brien did not know any German, but he used a little French on a kindly Belgian who was so happy to meet an American in British uniform that she sheltered him for several days. The Belgian then gave him old clothes to cover his uniform and directed him to the nearest route to the frontier. O'Brien swam the River Meuse near Namur and the next day was challenged by German sentries who decided he was a peasant.

SHOCKED BY WIRES.

But his narrowest escape was reserved for his last day as a fugitive when he could see Dutch territory. To circumvent the charged wires O'Brien built a bridge in a nearby wood and threw it across the wires. But it broke under his weight and O'Brien received a shock which he says he can still feel. When he recovered, he dug with his bare hands, a tunnel under the wire and, although it was slow progress, after several hours he had a hole big enough to crawl through, which he did unobserved.

Even then, he was not sure he was in Dutch territory, so he concealed himself in a hay barn until the next morning. When daylight came the first thing he saw was people making wooden shoes. He then walked out into the open and hurried to the nearest British consul, who arranged for his transportation to London.

In reply to the question, "Please tell when and where are, or is, the correct time for a gentleman to remove his hat?" the Wichita Beacon replies: Without consulting authorities of etiquette; in fact, giving it to you offhand, so to speak, we should say at the following times and on the following occasions, respectively, the hat should be lifted or removed as circumstances indicate: When mopping the brow; when taking a bath; when eating; when going to bed; when taking up a collection; when having the hair trimmed; when being shampooed; when standing on the head.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

Shipbuilding.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has pledged the resources of Canada. We have the material, including timber, to construct ships of all sizes, especially on the Pacific Coast, where they could operate in waters that have so far been free from the submarine menace. Did Sir Robert Borden at Friday night's meeting utter one word that would lead you to believe that the present Government would adopt a forward policy looking to the construction of ships Lord Northcliffe has said that the matter of shipping is of vital consequence in the prosecution of the war. Can a warning be given in stronger terms Great Britain has said, we want more transports and food, whereas Sir Robert Borden negatives this request, and says we will not inaugurate a policy to give you food; you must eat less. They blow in with a great hurrah, and say we are not going to desert the boys at the Front. Their policy begins and ends there. Suppose we send one hundred thousand men or even two hundred thousand men. That is not going to win the war. There will have to be more than sending men to the Front to win this war. The troops as well as the civilian populaion of the Allies have to be fed. To the United States Lord Northcliffe has said: "If you cannot get supplies to the Front, it is almost idle of you to add to your already vast army."

Bridging the Atlantic.

Does it not appeal to our commonsense? asked the speaker. By the time the United States has done as well as Canada she will have over five million men under arms. There was laughter and merriment in the audience at Friday night's meeting when the chairman alluded to cereals, meats and fats. If we cannot bridge the Atlantic in order to supply Great Britain with ten million tons of foodstuffs, what is going to happen to Great Britain, France and Italy? If those transports fail and we do not produce enough food to feed the people, there will be no laughter or merriment on the other side of the Atlantic. Then we will hold up to scorn a man who did not fiddle while Rome was burning, but who laughed while the Allies were starving.

Increased Production.

It is possible during the early part of the New Year to make plans for the cultivation of the thousands of acres of idle land in the Western Provinces, and increase the grain production by several million bushels. While the actual battles are being fought out on the battlefields of Europe, the battle of food supply may yet be fought out on the Western plains of Canada. A Premier who laughs at cereals, meats, and fats is not worthy of the confidence of the people. People have said that the Liberal candidate for West Peterborough does not want to win this war. Every nephew I have, six in number, is in the service. One lies at Vimy Ridge and another has been gassed. I have no children of my own. Other boys throughout this district I have urged to go, giving freely of my time to bring the situation home to them. Could I desert them now? They cannot fight unless they have cereals meats and fats, said Mr. Hall in conclusion.

"Sir Samuel."

The next speaker was Mr. W. T. J Lee of Toronto, who held the unwavering interest of the large audience as he gave a clear-cut presentation of the situation. Mr. Lee amused his auditors by referring to Major General Sir Sam Hughes as "Sir Samuel." The speaker opened his address with a reference to the good work accomplished by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his administration during the fifteen years they were in power. Canada was never so prosperous, said Mr. Lee. I see by the papers that the opponent of Mr. Hall had a large meeting in Peterborough on Friday evening, and that Sir Sam Hughes appeared on the same platform as Premier Borden. Sir Samuel told you of some of his experiences with the Borden administration When he left that Government he left a staff of eighty officers in England, and to-day that staff has been increased to fifteen hundred, thanks to the administration of Sir Edward Kemp. Each of these men are receiving from six to fifteen dollars a day. Now we have a Government that is called a Union Government. It is composed of fifteen corporation lawyers. I am not blaming the lawyers, because we usually try to take all we can get. Who is representing the people of Canada to-day? We have fifteen corporation lawyers, and then we have J. H. Ballantyne, a baby in the Government. He is one of the new war babies, and his connection with the Sherwin-Williams Paint Company places him in the class of the big interests. Sir Edward Kemp of the Tinware Trust of Canada, is another man who has been favoured by the new Government. Then we have the Hon. J. D. Reid, who has been known in a professional capacity as a practising physician. The only operation I have heard of him performing lately was a surgical operation on Sir Robert Borden to make him produce ten million dollars for the Canadian Northern Railway.

"Tom White."

Then we have Tom White, Minister of Finance, who is handling the finances of the country. He is making you and I pay up, and sometimes he does not make us pay through our pockets, but through the nose. At the time of his entry into the Government he was manager of the National Trust Company of Toronto. In that same company we have Mr. Z. A. Lash as director and general counsel. The same Mr. Lash is also director and general counsel of the Canadian Northern Railway, and likewise director and general counsel of the Bank of Commerce. This, as you will see, constitutes an interlocking directorate.

The Trinity.

At this juncture, Mr. Lee quoted an editorial taken from the Toronto Telegram in October of 1911, in which that well-known Conservative journal protested against the acceptance of Mr. White as a member of the Cabinet. The editorial in part said: "The creed of Mr. White is hopeless and he cannot be regarded as a friend."

Then again, we have the Hon Frank Cochrane, a most estimable man. It has been asked, who would the Kaiser vote for? I would say he would vote for the Hon. Frank Cochrane and the International Nickel Company, which sent Canadian nickel to Germany on the Deutschland to be used against our boys at the Front.

The speaker again quoted the Toronto Telegram as condemning the acceptance of the Hon. Frank Cochrane into the Borden Cabinet. "But they say that we have a Union Government," said Mr. Lee. "It may be a union of men, but I am afraid it is not a union of hearts. Not long ago the Hon. Newton Wesley Rowell said they cannot read me out of the Liberal party.' God forbid that we should do any such thing to such a nice, tender, pussyfoot as the Hon Mr. Rowell."

Do you think he represented any body but himself? asked the speaker.

No, no, shouted a couple of voices in the hall.

He does not represent any more people than I do, and I don't represent anybody, observed Mr. Lee There you have the connection as represented by the trinity. They might be called the three graces, or some would say disgraces. I would say they represented faith, hope, and charity, said Mr. Lee, much to the amusement of the audience.

The Canadian Northern.

Years ago Sir Wilfrid Laurier said to the Canadian Northern interests. "You will get no more money from the people of this country. Go ahead and build your road." They said, "If we can beat reciprocity we will form a Government," and that is exactly what was done to the farmers of this country. The trinity did not want reciprocity in natural products, they wanted reciprocity in cold dollars and cents. Their next move was to start a conspiracy in Quebec for he purpose of fomenting trouble between the French-speaking provinces and the rest of the country. Mr. Z. A. Lash dictated the terms upon which the Government was to be formed and conducted. Subsequently the Canadian Northern wanted more money, and they simply went back to their old friend Borden and got twenty-five millions of dollars. Later on a commission was appointed to bring in a report concerning the road, and this report revealed liabilities amounting to six hundred and fifty-three millions of dollars, while the common stock of the road was reported by the commission to be absolutely worthless. The common stock was simply the product of the printing press and the signature of Sir William MacKenzie. Another commission was created to determine the value of this stock and investigate the work of the previous commission, which had spent six months on the work and had declared the common stock to be of no value. Sir William Meredith was named for this work, and the Government passed a bill fixing the purchase price of the stock at ten millions of dollars, which was another way of injecting more brine into the stock, as well as the pork.

How Much Longer?

How much longer is this country to be run by such gangsters? asked Mr. Lee. The C.N.R. has loaded the province of British Columbia with ninety-three million dollars worth of guarantees, and the population of the province is only three hundred and fifty thousand, men, women, and children. In the face of this they want another ten million dollars. They are placing around the neck of every man, woman and child in the country a mortgage of eighty dollars per head. If you are willing to pay that, vote for the Borden Government and Mr. J. H. Burnham, who, I understand, voted for the measure

Our friends tell us they are out to win the war. It sounds nice. We all want to win the war. Every man woman and child in this country wants to win the war. (Hear, hear.)

It is a preposterous piece of impudence on the part of the win-the-war people to use that phrase.

Conscription Issue.

Then we have the Conscription issue. When the life of the Government expired Sir Wilfrid Laurier voted for an extension rather than bring on an election in war time. Then on the other hand we have the statement of Sir Samuel, who claims that the Borden Government planned to bring on an election on more than one previous occasion. Things went on, and subsequently the Conscription Bill came into existence. How does this measure affect the mothers of this land? It is a serious thing for a mother to bid good-bye to her boy as he departs. Many a good boy has laid down his life on the battle fronts of Europe, never to return. He died fighting for you and for me. If ever boys were fighting for the good of civilisation and liberty, it is the boys of Canada, because they had no quarrel with the Germans. It is those boys who have a right to be taken care of. I take off my hat to nobody for loyalty, but when I see these people running around the country and shouting win the war, while the profiteer and others of his kind are permitted to ply their trade, I say it is a disgrace.

Have No Objection.

There comes a time, and there may come a time when Conscription will be needed. I have no objection to Conscription, but I do object to the small coterie of men who say to you there is nothing for you to do but shoulder your rifle and away to the Front.

"What kind of a rifle?" shouted a man in the hall.

"I will tell you about that rifle later," replied Mr. Lee. Sir Robert Borden introduced Conscription on his own initiative. There was no dictation or suggestion from Great Britain that Conscription should be introduced in Canada. That has been proved beyond a doubt. Conscription says that every eligible man between twenty and thirty-four must come up to the front. There is a kneeling bench for everyone. The boys say all right, I am willing to go, but I want a square deal. We want all provinces to be placed on an equal footing.

"Was Conscription meant for Quebec?" asked Mr. Lee.

"No! No!" chorused a number of voices in the hall.

We have exemptions in Quebec running as high as ninety-four per cent., yet the Tribunals here and in other places are sending our boys to the Front. Is that a square deal? Some say they have Conscription in the United States. They did, but they took every man and made him register. Conscription in the United States came from a Government that had the mandate of the people by only six months. They have it in Britain, but before adopting it they discussed it on the public platform for fifteen long months.

"Bob Rogers."

"Bob Rogers is a lovely chap," observed the speaker. He is a "hale fellow, well met." He was caught sticking his hands in the Government trough in Manitoba. It suddenly dawned upon Borden that the Government was no place for Rogers, with an election coming on; but Bob will be like the old cat. He will be back in his place, should you see fit to elect the Government.

Then we must not overlook Flavelle, who, with tears in his eyes, went to the manufacturers and told them they must make shells at six dollars apiece instead of eight dollars and fifty cents. This is the man whose firm made a profit of one million one hundred and sixteen thousand dollars in one year. Can you beat that? Why, he hasn't had the decency to give some of the money back to the Red Cross Society like the man in Peel County who had the horses at five dollars apiece.

Then we have Allison, also the young lady stenographer in Sir Samuel's deparment who received one hundred and five thousand dollars. I never heard of a girl in a law office who got a tip of one hundred and five thousand dollars. Where did all this money come from? Wait until after election day, and we will tell you, because we are going to make it our business to find out.

The speaker closed with a reference to the Franchise Act, which he characterised as a measure to win the election and disfranchise people whom the Government urged to come to Canada through th medium of its immigration department.

The meeting closed with three cheers for Mr. Lee and the candidate.

Paul Miliukoff—Russia's former Foreign Minister, and a staunch friend of the British, who is reported to be actively engaged in efforts to form new Government to overthrow the Bolsheviki.

She Went Days Without Food

When Hospital Treatment Failed an Operation Was Advised—But Cure Was Effected Without the Use of the Knife.

Glace Bay, N.S., Dec. 3.—Here is a case which sorely puzzled the hospital doctors. It was evident that the great suffering from pain under the left shoulder-blade was due to torpidity of the liver, but no medical treatment seemed to do any good.

In fact medicines failed, and the doctors said an operation was the only hope. But Mrs. Watkins hesitated before the enormous risk of an operation and decided to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills first.

The result was that she was perfectly cured three years ago, and feels now that she can report the cure as thorough and lasting. This is not an isolated case, but proves that this great medicine cures when ordinary prescriptions fail.

Mrs. Annie Watkins, Glace Bay, New Harbor, N.S., writes: "I think it is time for me to give my experience with your wonderful Kidney-Liver Pills. For seven months I suffered with what the doctor called indigestion; but whatever it was, I suffered terribly. The pain would start under my left shoulder and pass down my side until it reached the pit of my stomach. It just seemed as if the flesh were being torn from the bone. At times I used to go without food from one morning until the next. I had no energy left for work at all. A last our doctor sent me to the hospital for a month. For four days and nights I never broke my fast except for a drink of water. After four weeks' treatment there I returned home, and was back only four days when the pain came back worse than ever. Then I was told I would have to undergo an operation, but I would not consent to that. At last I read about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and started to take them. At first I did not notice much difference, but still I kept on using them, and by the time four boxes were used I was perfectly well again. That was in 1914, so you see I can safely say that I was cured. I shall always be grateful to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, as they did more for me than four doctors."

There Are Knockers.

Quaint old knockers, or those reproduced from old designs, make interesting gifts for those who care for individual things. The small ones are used on the doors of separate rooms in country houses, but a fine massive one should adorn the outer door of a lovely old country house that would welcome it gladly this Christmas.

An inventor is a genius who discovered a lot of things that are already patented.

Recently the sergeants of a certain battery in France sat down to an exceptionally fine dinner, the crowning glory of which was a large plum pudding.

"Seems mighty hard," remarked the Sergeant Major as he vainly tried to stick his fork in it. "Have you boiled us a cannon ball?"

"Or the regimental football?" asked another.

"Where did you get the flour from?" questioned the SeregantMajor again, still struggling vainly.

"Where from?" the cook retorted. "From Store No. 5, of course."

"You did?" roared the Quartermaster Sergeant. "Then, hang you, you've made the pudding with Portland cement!"—Irish World.

TRIBUNAL No. 276

CITY COUNCIL CHAMBERS

W. H. Moore, K.C., J. A. Aylmer, Members

Mayor J. J. Duffus, Military Representative

Over five hundred exemption claims have been heard by the City Hall Tribunal, which has practically completed its work. There remain a few deferred decisions, a number of cases that have been called without the applicants appearing, and the winding up of the general details of the deliberations that have been under consideration since November 8th. Those appeals which have not been pressed by the applicants who filed them, will probably be disallowed by default. Letters have been sent out to these men and their non-appearance will doubtless admit but one interpretation. Only a few straggling cases were presented to the Board this morning.

Exemptions Allowed.

Vincent Francis McDonnell, R. R. No. 9, Peterborough, farmer.

Leo. Galvin, R. R. No. 4, Peterborough.

Exemptions Disallowed.

Peter Goselin, 130 George street.

Temperory Exemption.

John A. Storey, until Feb. 1st, 1918.

Alonzo Coughlin, was rated A2 by the Medical Board and his brother's claim has already been disallowed. Alonzo has requested that only one be taken for domestic reasons, and that he be drafted instead of his brother. No decision has been given yet in this case.

French and British On Italian Line

(By Henry Wood.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN ITALY, Devember 3. — French and British armies have taken over vulnerable points on the entire Piave River front.

Permission is granted me to make this long awaited anonuncement today.

Veteran Poilus and Tommies are aching for a chance at the enemy. Many of the French and British have never been in action against Austrian troops, who compose many of the armies opposite the Italians, and it is against them in particular Allied reinforcements would like to test their arms. Wherever the enemy tries to strike his next blow he will find every vulnerable point on the Piave front held down, but not only by Italians, but by French and British fighters. Just at present there is a lull. The enemy, baffled of further gains, his divisions shattered by repeated fruitless assaults, is apparently reorganizing for a new blow. He is doomed to find the entire Piave front an impassable barrier. The Italians' herioc defense—paralleling in its glory the French defense of Verdun—permitted the French and British armies to arrive in perfect organization and to be distributed at weak points in the front. Here again, Verdun's brilliant history was repeated. At the French fortress defenders held off the flood of Germans until the Allies could reorganize their forces for best utilization. At Monte Grappa the Italians did the same.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 3.—Somewhat violent artillery activity on the Aisne front and in the Verdun region is announced in to-day's War Office report. Otherwise there were only intermittent cannonading and raiding operations.

Chief Grange Issues Warning

For the second time during the week Chief Grange's attention has been called to the danger prevalent by the ignorant or careless management of coal heaters. Only last week a family residing in the south end of the city had a narrow escape from asphyxiation. A young lady woke to find the house full of gas and the rest of the family badly overcome by the fumes.

Yesterday morning a further example was brought to the Chief's notice.

Danger of Gas Escaping.

Mr. Melville Pemmett, who resides in a flat over the grocery shop occupied by H. M. Dobbin on the corner of King and Bethune streets, was unable to sleep on account of the gas fumes from the shop beneath. He, in trying to walk the effect of the gas off met Sergt. Reid, whom he notified of the nuisance of the gas from the store. The sergeant accompanied Pemmett to the store and, to avert an explosion, which was inevitable with the powerful fumes, tried to force the door, without success. He notified Lieut. Ward, who was on watch of the danger. Lieut. Ward immediately applied the door opener, to find the stove left in a most careless manner, all the drafts turned off and the damper flat and windows tightly closed.

The Danger.

For the safety of the occupants of flats above a store, Chief Grange would emphasize the advisability of leaving a window of the store open one inch at the top after closing the store for the night. In this simple manner a serious explosion is rendered absolutely impossible.

The By-law.

Chief Grange would further advise the public to read the City By-law No. 2046, which reads as follows:

"No person or corporation within the municipality of the City of Peterborough shall place or shall have, allow, suffer or permit to remain in any yard or near any building any barrel, boxes, paper, straw, shavings or sawdust, or other inflammable material, nor shall any such barrels, boxes, straw, shavings, sawdust or other inflammable waste or refuse material be allowed, suffered or permitted to remain and be within any buildings, cellar or outhouse within the municipality.

FUNERAL TOOK PLACE TO-DAY

The funeral of the late Joseph Levasseur took place this morning at nine o'clock from the family residence, Edison avenue, to St. Peter's cemetery. The Rev. Father McGuire officiated. The floral tributes, which were numerous, included a beautiful wreath from the De Laval Company, where the deceased was employed until the time of his fatal illness. A brother, Archie Levasseur, of the 39th Heavy Artillery, U.S.A., now stationed at Camp Div, New Jersey, was home for the funeral.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman nd likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions, instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the eitire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. W must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

Sir,—It is refreshing to know that Mr. Burnham does not try to hide anything. Mr. J. D. Flavelle was on his platform on Friday night, and Sir Sam Hughes of Ross Rifle fame. The Flavelles have done more to raise the cost of living for poor people than any other family in Canada, and yet they are representing Mr. Burnham's platform, and Mr. Burnham, so far, has not said one word condemning them; but he is endorsed by the war profiteers of this stamp, and others.—Yours truly,

Dear Sir,—Mr. Hall complains that rural mail is holding up some of the notices of his meetings. I have wired the inspector at Kingston to see Mr. Hall immediately and to investigate. I might say, however, that in 1908 I tried the plan of sending matter through the mail and found that the people paid very little attention to them, and I had to go back to bills.

NURSING SISTER DOUGLAS IS HOME

Well Known Peterboro' Nurse Has Had a Long Spell of Active Service

Mrs. M. K. Douglas, who since the outbreak of the war has been overseas in the capacity of nursing sister, arrived in Peterborough to-day. Nursing Sister Douglas is home on furlough, and it is possible that she may be prevailed upon to address a meeting that is to be held to-morrow evening under the auspices of the Great War Veterans Association. While overseas Nursing Sister Douglas was actively engaged in hospital work on the western front, where her excellent work won official recognition in the form of a decoration conferred by King George.

To the Electors of East Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have the honour to accept the unanimous nomination of the Liberal Party to contest the election as a candidate to represent the people of East Peterborough in the House of Commons.

Now is the time in the history of this country when we should be guided by true Liberal principles and stand by the masses as against the classes; stand by the people who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow and against the classes who exact unjust profits and extortionate tolls out of even the very necessities of life.

The profits made by War Profiteers should be investigated. The profiteer should be made to disgorge his excessive profits to be used to increase the pay of our soldiers, their mothers, wives, sisters and dependents. None of them should ever be subjected to the indignity of cold charity by this grateful Nation on whose behalf they have suffered or died.

I have no confidence whatever in Sir Robert Borden who supplied our troops for many months with the Ross rifle and defective ammunition, which he must have known would jam and become a useless weapon after our Canadian boys had nobly entered the battle. The Ross rifle was used by our troops in six battles. In each battle the rifle jammed, and many a Canadian soldier was needlessly killed of wounded, and some of them languish to-day in German prisons justly cursing the Borden Gobernment without a chance of voting against it.

We must destroy the parasite, the profiteer, the grafter and the camp follower, who are our worst enemies, and fight our common foe with all the resources at our command.

I appeal to the women of this Riding, who are casting their vote for the first time, to act on the pure impulse of their hearts alone, and vote according to the dictates of their own conscience. My heart goes out in sympathy for them in these anxious times.

Let us unite our people in this Great War as the armies of Great Britain and France are united, marching and fighting side by side—the parents and guardians of Freedom and Justice.

With firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, I appeal to you fellow electors to press on to a finish the great war in which we are engaged; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle and his widow and orphan; to do all which we may achieve, and to cherish a just and lasting peace with all nations.

For these reasons I appeal to you my fellow electors for your vote and influence in the pending election on Monday, December 17th next.

Your Obedient Servant,

W. H. Johnston.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

SIX MAN HOCKEY ADOPTED BY Y.M.C.A.

TORONTO, Dec. 3. — The Ontario Hockey Association will work this season under some positive alterations of rules, both in regard to the elegibility of players under the residence qualification and in the matter of the laws of the game. These things were brought about by the deliberations of the convention held on Saturday in the Temple building, the twenty-eighth annual gathering of the biggest hockey association in existence. For the second year the chair had to be occupied by the First Vice-President in the absence overseas of President Captain Jas. T. Sutherland. In spite of the uncertainty as to the effect of the Military Service Act on the material from which the clubs are organized, there was a good attendance of delegates and the important matters were not disposed of until they had been pretty well threshed out.

Of primary importance among the new conditions are the changes that permit towns up to 5,000 in population to draw from the nearest places that have no O. H. A. teams, and the reduction of teams to six men, with the allowance of a substitute.

The convention unanimously adopted Mr. J. Ross Robertson's motion to invest the surplus funds of the association in Victory Loan bonds, and immediately following the meeting a subscription of $5,000 was taken in the name of the O.H.A., which is an incorporated body.

Wartime Relaxations.

The following exceptions, for the period of the war only, were made to the residence requirement for players:

"(a) Players absent from home after August 1st on national service, such as farm work, etc., to be granted certificates to play, upon special application being made to the Executive committee.

"(b) Players residing in a town where there is no O. H. A. team play with the club in the nearest O.H.A. village or town of not more than 5,000 population."

Six Men and a Sub.

The reduction of teams from seven to six men a side was introduced and supported by Mr. G. B. Dawson of Sarnia, and went through with practically no opposition, in conjunction with the new substitute rule. The latter provides for the use of one extra player as a substiute whenever desired. Only the one man can act in match, but he can go on and off as frequently as needed. The rule now reads:

"One extra player only may act as a substitute on each team during a match (making seven players altogether) and a change of players may be made at any time by the substitute reporting to the referee when that official has stopped the play, but must not get on the ice while play is in progress; such substitute must be all ready to play and must take his position without delaying the game. The player for whom the substitution is made must also leave the ice promptly when the substitute appears. Should any player be injured during the game, break a skate or from any accident be compelled to leave the ice, his side shall immediately put on a substitute or a player who has so compelled to leave the ice is ready to return. Should more than one player of one team be compelled to retire because of accident, the opposing side shall drop a man to equalize the teams. No player shall resume play until he has received permission from the referee to go on. In event of any dispute, the matter shall at once be decided by the referee."

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

PETERBOROUGH BOWLERS DEFEAT TORONTO FIVE-PIN CHAMPIONS.

One of the greatest games of five-pins ever witnessed in Peterborough was played on Saturday night at the Water Street Alleys, when the second match of the Inter-City Championship series was played between Toronto and Peterborough. The visiting team were met at the station, and after being driven to the bowling alley, they hastily prepared themselves for the great match. The point of the match that should be looked at more than any other is that in defeating the Toronto team the Peterborough boys beat the best team in Toronto, and have placed themselves on a world map of bowling. A large crowd was on hand and everybody, even to the Toronto team, were more than surprised to find what up-to-date alleys Mr. Solomon now has under his care since all the latest improvements have been made and new alleys installed. The game consisted of a death struggle from start to finish, with the Peterborough boys "going over the top" and gaining a great victory. In the first game the Peterborough team rolled over its thousand mark, which certainly surprised the Toronto team and showed to them what classy bowlers they had to beat. Mr. Weber, of the home team, certainly had his eye on the pins, and turned in a score for three games that will be hard to beat in any match game. Hallman of Toronto was the second highest man, and also showed that he is a past master of the game. Mr. Baker, the midget bowler of the visiting team, surprised everybody present with his style of bowling hits which brought down good scores.

Too much cannot be said of every member in each team. They certainly worked hard, and when the match was over the victory was placed in the hands of the deservers.

The Toronto team remained in Peterborough on Sunday, and were entertained by the home team, and left this morning for Toronto, pleased in every way with their visit to Peterborough.

The scores of the teams are as follow:

Toronto.

Hallman	232	208	199	639
Black	104	216	190	510
Abel	156	151	120	427
Baker	131	138	194	463
Thorne	117	176	149	442
	740	889	852	2481

Peterborough.

Weber	180	283	244	707
Henderson	235	157	137	529
R. Ross	202	150	168	520
Fitzpatrick	162	148	157	467
Solomon	224	157	210	591
	1003	895	916	2814

Comments on the Game.

Pres. Wes. Williams said: "Well, boys, you will have some score to take back to the Queen City and show what you were up against."

Mr. Ross, who came from Toronto with the visitors, told them the local boys had reached the 1,000 mark, and the same thing happened on Saturday night.

Mr. F. C. Weber showed the boys a real game, and something to talk about at the Toronto Bowling Club.

Capt. Fitzpatrick said: "Boys, at the rate we are going, we will soon reach the 3,000 mark."

Capt. Baker, of the Toronto team, says he holds the championship of the world of any man his size. Nuf said!

Capt. Baker claims that the game they put up here against the local boys would win the city championship in Toronto.

A return game will be played in Toronto in the near future.

Messrs. Foster and Laplante acted as official scorers, and claim they had the honour of scoring one of the best games scored here.

Mr. Hallman is one of the best bowlers at Toronto Bowling Club, and he certainly showed his class here.

Pres. Wes. Williams gave three hearty cheers for the Toronto boys, which were returned by Capt. Baker, of the Toronto bowlers.

To-night the opening game of the 10-pin League will be played between the Grocers and the West-Ends.

REEVES ARE SUGGESTED FOR APPEAL BOARD

Capt. J. H. Burnham has received the following wire from the Deputy Minister of Agriculture:

"In connection with the official to look after appeals re farmers' sons and farm help, as authorized in Council, the Department requires immediately the names of several men in each constituency to select from. I might ask you for the recommendation of well qualified and impartial men in your district in order that the Department may take immediate action."

In reply Capt. Burnham has recommended that the Board of Appeal for West Peterborough consist of the Reeves of the different townships with the Warden of the County as chairman.

Mr. Burnham has also received the following from Hon. Mr. Reid:

"It having been brought to the attention of the Government by Hon Mr. Crerar, Minister of Agriculture, that in some counties, tribunals appointed under the Military Service Act have not given sufficient weight to the importance of the production of foodstuffs and have, therefore, refused exemption to men whose work is essential to continue production on the farms on which they are now working, the Government has decided on the recommendation of the Minister of Agriculture to take immediate action in order to prevent any unnecessary interruption of farm work in order that the Militia Department and Department of Agriculture may be empowered to have the necessary power to act, the following order-in-Council has been passed: "His Excellency the Governor-General in Council, upon the recommendation of the acting Minister of Agriculture and under and by virtue of the provisions of the war measures act, 1914, and the Military Service Act, 1917, the Minister of Agriculture is hereby authorized to appoint a representative of the Department of Agriculture in such counties or districts in any Province of Canada as he may determine. First to attend the sittings of the tribunals appointed under the Military Service Act to guard the National interests in connection with the production of foodstuffs, second to appeal from the decisions of the tribunals in any case where in his opinion the tribunal has not given due weight to the urgency of maintaining our food supplies. Third, to investigate and report upon appeals or application for exemption where the ground of appeal or application is that the party seeking exemption should in the national interest be retained in food production rather than be enrolled in the expeditionary forces."

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

William John Chesney, Auburn street, claimed exemption on the grounds of ill health, domestic position, as a conscientious objector, and many other things. Chesney thought another medical examination would be desirable.

"Have you been getting medical attention?" inquired Lieut.-Col. Clegg.

"I have had four doctors attending me," replied the applicant.

"It is no wonder you are sick," observed Judge Huycke.

The applicant said he was a member of St. Andrew's church and more recently had been attending the Free Methodist church.

"The Free Methodists are not conscientious objectors," remarked Judge Huycke.

"If the Germans asked you to surrender your country to them you would do it?" inquired Mr. Dumble.

"Not Canada," replied the applicant.

"I don't think there is much use bothering with this man," said Judge Huycke.

Chesney has been married since the proclamation was issued.

The claim was disallowed.

Three Brothers Enlisted.

A. S. Armstrong, a farmer residing in Otonabee, was exempted for one year. Armstrong has three brothers at the front, all of whom have been wounded. One of the brothers has been missing since August last.

Armstrong produced a post office order for two dollars forwarded by the military authorities at Kingston. It was discovered that Armstrong had inadvertently reported for service.

His claim for exemption was allowed.

Claim Was Refused.

Mrs. Robert Gerard, 559 Patterson street, claimed exemption for her son, Walter Gerard, who for the past two years has resided in the west. Mrs. Gerard has five married daughters, three of whom reside in Peterborough. Mrs. Gerard boards with one of them and the son in question is said to be her sole support.

The claim was disallowed.

"E" Men Exempted.

Robert. A. Girvin, a farmer, Roy Wright, 325 Aylmer street, Michael Condon, T. L. Martin, Peterborough, Cooper H. Smith, 582 Bolivar street, Sidney Charles Gibbs, W. H. Walkey, 47 Benson avenue, J. Lanone, 440 George street, and M. F. Guerin, 650 Rogers street, all "E" men, were exempted until "E" category men were required.

T. H. Tucker, 219 Charlotte street, F. O. Neilson, 501 Bolivar street, and Hugh Flood, 211 Lake street, all "C" men, were exempted until 'C' men are called.

Fred Wheeler, a barber by trade, claimed exemption on the ground of ill health and infirmity. Wheeler said he had not been medically examined. He was instructed to appear before the Medical Board.

P. V. Noble, 346 Aylmer street, a "B" man, was exempted until "B" category men are required.

The exemption claims of W. M. Knox, 481 Gilmour street, Oron Varty, 345 Chamberlen street, D. A. Donoghue, 526 Water street, were all disallowed.

G. R. Powell, an electrician, employed by Alexander and Miller, was exempted as a "B" man.

Allies Will Not State Their Aims

Close Knit Plan of War Business the First Consideration

(By Lowell Mellett.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PARIS, Dec. 3.—The Allies' Councils have decided to postpone temporarily their statement of their war aims. The influences back of the decision, which became known to-day after the first highly successful meeting of the supreme War Council, were not specified. It was believed, however, htat for the immediate present, the delegates to both the Inter-Allied and the Supreme War Council meetings were decided that a close knit plan of "war business" should be decided on, leaving to future meetings the War Council details of other correlated subjects. Ambassador Maklakoff, whom Kerensky appointed envoy to Paris, and who sat with the Inter-Allied Council as Russia's unofficial representative, although disavowed by the Bolsheviki, urged Allied statement to make such a restatement of war aims. Colonel House joined with Maklakoff in this request for such a restatement. British representatives, it was understood, were passively acquiescent. But Council meetings were held to be first of all "war business" gatherings, and the urgent necessity of the day adjudged to be that of closer and immediate actual war direction. Presumably it was for this season that the war aims discussion was postponed.

A Truce On Many Sectors, Says Berlin

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

BERLIN, via London, Dec. 3.— A truce "on many sectors from Pripsi to south of the Lipa" on the Russian front, and progress of negotiations for an armistice with Russa were reported in to-day's official statement. A Russian deputation is arranging a general armistice the statement said.

The Funeral Of Sergt. Watson

The funeral of Sergt. J. H. Watson took place this afternoon from the family residence, 250 McDonnel street. The procession was headed by the 57th Regiment Band, playing the Dead March in Saul, while the hearse was followed by a large number of returned soldiers, including many former comrades of the dead soldier. The pall-bearers were Comrades Coleman, Gahagan, Bud, Bacon, Breadman and Lavery of the G. W. V. A. A public service was held in St. John's church, conducted by Rev. W. H. White of St. Luke's church, who gave an address and the hymn "Nearer My God to Thee," was sung.

Ald. Stratton Is Mentioned In The Mayoralty Race

Although the municipal elections are scarcely of secondary interest these days, there are some indications of possible liveliness before the Christmas turkeys are disposed of. Alderman Stratton was mentioned to-day as a probable candidate. Like most of the men who enter the Council, his eyes have been often on the Mayor's chair, and he would no doubt be willing to accept the honour if it is obtainable.

There are members of the Council of longer experience than the Centre Ward's representative, but he has borne a full measure of the responsibility of the city's affairs as chairman of the Finance Committee.

Ald. George Duncan is as wise in the ways of municipal affairs as any aspirants for the mayoralty honours. He has given the city a long service and his experience has included all the details of the leading committees.

Ald. McIntyre has also an extensive and creditable record, and has been frequently rumoured as a likely candidate for the Mayor's position.

It is not known whether Mayor Duffus will be back in the field or not. He has given two years of faithful and successful service, and there has been some suggestion that the mayoralty elections be obviated this year by returning him for a third term. However, the local situation has yet to warm up before it can be estimated.

Over-Subscribed To Victory Loan

Peterboro' Exceeded Its Increased Objective by Over Half a Million Dollars

Peterborough has over-subscribed its increased objective to the Victory Bonds by over $587,850 approximately, and there are still returns to be made by some teams.

The total of $1,587,850 was brought up last week when the subscriptions by wards were made as follow:

Monday	$105,480.00
Tuesday	86,550.00
Wednesday	117,450.00
Thursday	189,350.00
Friday	131,350.00
Saturday	90,900.00

Total Will Be Given Out To-night

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Dec. 3.—Although the official announcement of the total subscriptions to the Victory Loan is being held back for the big official "Victory Loan meeting" in Massey Hall to-night, it is rumoured on the street to-day that the amount will be between 360 and 400 million. It was stated at noon that Toronto's objective of seveny-five million was absolutely sure.

Indignation Meetings At Kitchener

Canadian Press Despatch:

KITCHENER, Ont., Dec. 3.— Practically all this city's factories are closed to-day, and between four thousand and five thousand employees are holding an indignation meeting to protest against the action of the City Council in refusing to vote an expression of regret at the disturbance, at the meeting on Monday night last, when Sir Robert Borden was not permitted to speak. The employees' mass meetings to-day were addressed by Judge Reade and others. This morning the City Council held a private meeting and it is stated will pass a satisfactory resolution at the regular meeting to-night.

WEDDING BELLS

STAUNTON—McCORMACK.

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, Nov. 28, at Vivian, Ont., when Miss Florence McCormack, daughter of Mr. George McCormack, was united in marriage to Mr. Harvie Staunton of Peterborough. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. John Gray, D.D., the bride and groom standing under an arch of evergreen, Christmas bells and flags. The bride was dressed in ivory taffeta and georgette crepe with pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley, and wore a bridal veil with orange blossoms. The wedding march was played by Mrs. J. P. Archer, of Campbellford, and during the signing of the register a solo was sung by Mrs. Edmund Hardy. A pendant of pearls and peridots was the gift of the groom, who was wounded at Langemarck, and is president of the Great War Veterans' Association of Peterborough. Among other numerous and handsome presents was a cabinet of silver from the sisters and brothers of the bride and a purse of gold from Mr. and Mrs. McCormack. After a charming repast the happy couple left for Cleveland and New York, the bride being attired in a burgundy travelling suit, a grey hat with silver lace and ermine and black wolf furs.

VINE—SHANNON.

On Wednesday, 14th November, a very quiet though pretty wedding took place in Chalmers Presbyterian Church, Toronto, when Ellen Viola, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Shannon, of Peterborough, Ont., was united in marriage to Rev. Frederick Richard Vine, Th.M., of Monroe, Michigan.

Rev. John W. Woodside, M.A. officiated, assisted by Rev. Oswald J. Smith.

The bride, who was unattended was given away by her mother, and was attired in a travelling suit of taupe broadcloth, with hat to match, and ermine furs. Mr. McLaughlin organist of the church, played the wedding music.

After the ceremony the happy couple received many congratulations and left immediately for their new home in Monroe, Michigan.

SPLENDID BANQUET TO MR. G. H. LOGIE

A very representative gathering of manufacturers, business men, and professional men met at luncheon on Saturday evening at the Empress Hotel to give expression to their regret at Mr. G. H. Logie, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, leaving the city for Edmonton in a few days.

Mr. James Kendry was chairman, and in a short speech regretting his going away, spoke of Mr. Logie's ability as a banker, and predicted further success for him in his chosen profession.

Mr. Logie, on replying to the toast thanked those present for their coming together as they had, to say good-bye, and stated that the two years he had spent in Peterborough were two of the most pleasant in his recollections, and he regretted exceedingly leaving the city—where he had made many good friends.

Other speeches were made, all regretting Mr. Logie's departure, but gratified at the fact that he was advancing in the banking world, by His Worship the Mayor, Mr. Crane for the Bankers' Association, Mr. Denham the manufacturers, Mr. Goodwill the Law Society, Dr. Cameron the medical profession, and Mr. B. D. Hall for the Golf Club, the Board of Trade and other local organisations in which Mr. Logie took a prominent and active part.

Mr. Logie was secretary of the Soldiers' Aid, on the Advisory Board of the Peterborough Red Cross Society, and energetic in nearly every patriotic and civic betterment work in this city.

Mr. Pennefather also gave some very special reasons why he would miss Mr. Logie.

In Mr. Goodwill's speech, he also referred to the fact that Mrs. Logie and their family would be greatly missed in the community, and Mr. Dickson Davidson, on behalf of the ladies, presented Mr. Logie, for his wife, with a handsome bouquet of flowers.

Mr. Fraser, who is coming to the bank in Mr. Logie's place, made a neat speech, and from its reception it could be inferred that he would be decidedly welcome in the city. He is now in the bank, and Mr. Logie will be leaving in a few days.

ST. PETER'S PATRIOTIC CLUB

The regular monthly meeting of St. Peter's Patriotic Club was held on Wednesday afternoon in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum. The President, Mrs. J. J. Crowley, presided. The reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and an account of the work done during the month of November, which is as follows: 14 grey flannel shirts, 12 pairs pyjamas, 49 sheets, 268 towels, 7 wash cloths, 5 dressing gowns.

The tea room will be closed until after the holiday season, but the work room will be open as usual each Wednesday afternoon.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH NEWS.

A most interesting and helpful sermon was delivered to the congregation last Sunday night by the Rev. Mr. Jull. This was Mr. Jull's first visit to St. Andrew's but we hope to have him again with us in the near future.

On Wednesday evening the regular mid-week meeting will be held. It is hoped that all members of the congregation who can will be present at this mid-week meeting.

On Thursday afternoon the ladies of the Red Cross Society will meet for sewing, etc., from 2.30 to 5.30.

On Friday afternoon at 3.30 the Ladies' Aid Society will meet in the ladies' parlour.

The pastor will be visiting the members of the congregation living south of Hunter street on Stewart Street, Tuesday afternoon, and those living north of Hunter street on Stewart street Thursday afternoon.

The officers and teachers of the Sunday school are arranging for the Christmas entertainment which takes place on Thursday, Dec. 20th. A most interesting programme is being arranged, which will follow the supper. Mr. Cotton will have charge of the decorations and the Christmas tree.

A cordial invitation is extended to all young ladies and young men to connect with one of our Bible classes. Mr. Kerr is the leader of the Ladies' Bible Class which meets in the church each Sunday at 3 p.m. Mr. Gall is the leader of the Young Men's Class, which also meets in the church at 3 p.m., and Mr. Treneer is the leader of a Young Ladies' Bible class which meets in the Guild Room Sunday afternoon. Come and visit with us next Sunday. We need your presence.

WEDDING RINGS.

Their Descent From the Ancient Signet Rings of Egypt.

It was under the shadow of the pyramids that brides first wore rings as symbols of wedlock.

In the early Egyptian home it was the custom of the wife to keep all of her jars, closets and storerooms sealed. A different seal ordinarily was used for every door or jars containing certain foods. Preserved sweets, for instance, would be sealed with one device and some sharp appetizer with another. So the course of time brought the Egyptian woman a goodly number of seals, the special mark of her wifehood.

Then it became a custom for the bridegroom on his wedding day to present the future homemaker with a little string of seals. In the beginning they usually were suspended from an ornamental chain about her neck, but afterward it became the custom to carry the keys on an ornamental cord around the wrist. And finally the keys were attached to a woman's finger by means of a cord or gold wire. This naturally meant reduction in the number of seals, and some genius of the days of old hit upon the idea of combining the seal and the wire together, from which we get the signet ring. Such a ring was regularly presented to the bride on her wedding day.

Things had reached this state of progress when keys seem to have been first used in Egypt to any great extent. The coming of locks did away with the wifely seals and her peculiar mark of sovereignty in the home. By degrees the signet ring went out of fashion as the special prerogative of the bride and was succeeded by a plain band ring such as every young lady of today expects to wear. Numbers of these plain and signet rings have been found in the old tombs of northern Africa, mute evidence of loves long since dead and gone.

British Shipping Is Recognized As A Real War Weapon

Ninety Per Cent. of Nation's Great Merchant Marine Now Operated By Government—Movement of Munitions and Food the One Idea—Country Proud of Her Heroic Seamen

PROFITS CAST TO THE WIND

(By Robert Donald, Editor of The Daily Chronicle.)

Special Cable to The New York Times.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Before the Lloyd George Government came into office about a year ago, only half the British shipping had been requisitioned for war purposes, and the overseas trade was going on as a diminishing business concern. Cuts had been made in the luxury trades, imports being radically reduced, but the bold policy of universal requisition and State control, which Lloyd George had favoured from the beginning of the war, had not been adopted, with the result that British shipping companies amassed enormous fortunes, after paying the State over 60 per cent. of their war profits.

With the advent of the present Government to power the strong arm of the State took over practically the whole of the British mercantile shipping. This policy receiving its greatest stimulus when the United States of America entered the war. The Lloyd George Cabinet was determined to subordinate all commercial and national interests to the overwhelming demands of the war. Thus, after three years, the policy which Lloyd George with unerring instinct had favoured from the beginning was finally achieved.

When the war is over Great Britain will have to start anew to restore its vast carrying trade throughout the world, which brought the home country an annual revenue estimated at over £150,000,000. Vested interests of the highways of the ocean which have taken over a hundred years to establish have vanished in a few months.

The prime object of the shipping control is to save tonnage for national and war interests, and now only about a 10 per cent. margin in small ships remains uncontrolled. In the struggle between motor cars and wheat, motor cars have to go. That is the principle upon which the ships are operated. Since 90 per cent. of the shipping has been secured, most drastic measures have been applied, far in excess of those which the French have thought fit to apply to their own ships, though nominally they are under Government control.

Profits No. Longer Considered.

Such are the restrictions adopted that commercial interest and personal profit have ceased to play any part in the movement of ships. In cases where companies continue to manage their vessels, no trade considerations enter into the use of service of the ships. It is possible sometimes to allow a small margin for general goods, such as cotton or supplementary articles of food, such as hams and bacon, but the profit arising from such freight goes to the Government as a set-off to the hire. Private management has no longer any commercial interest in cargo.

The most startling transfers have been effected in the name of national emergency. Old-established trading connections have been sacrificed to the superior interests of the nation. Ships have been withdrawn from the China coast to the advantage of Japan, and vessels have been taken from Scandinavian waters to the profit of neutral shipping. In the case of a great company like the Peninsular and Oriental, with a total fleet of fifty vessels, all are under requisition, more than half are managed directly by the Government or by other companies. The remaining ships are carrying goods to the account of the Government. These remarks apply also to the Clan and Holt Lines.

Get the Government Rate.

Dividend-earning ships now get the standard Blue Book or Government minimum rate, and nothing else. This rate, however, provides a reasonable profit, but nothing like the earnings of the free shipping of the world, nor does the rate compare with the profits made by British shipping earlier in the war.

Still, international trade and production must be kept alive in the interests of national finance. While there is no allocation for cotton, ships to India naturally take Manchester goods (the production of which has been reduced 40 per cent. and is largely for domestic and army consumption), and bring back manganese ore or cereals. But when space is given to goods of this sort it is always subject to the claims either of the military or of the civil population of the nation.

Sometimes critics of pro-German tendencies have jumped to conclusions from the most innocent statements in Ministerial speeches. Lloyd-George's remarks, for instance, that America was contributing wooden ships to save the food situation provoked the suggestion that Brian was forcing wooden ships upon America. Why? Because, it was stated, Britain knew they would be no good after the war, and she herself was building steel ships.

Great Britain is building all the ships she can, to devote them to war services and nothing else. Upon Great Britain has fallen the duty of helping the Allies. The amount of shipping placed at the service of France, Italy, and other Allied countries is 3,000,000 tons deadweight. This tonnage represents nearly two months' consumption of wheat by Britain. A great deal of it is devoted to carrying coal as well as wheat. In some cases the ships are not actually handed over, but the tonnage is given to the Allies under British management. The traffic between Britain and France in men, munitions, and food involves the use of a prodigious quantity of tonnage, and the campaigns in the East mean almost as great demands and very much greater risks.

Imports a Fourth of Normal.

Excluding food, Great Britain imported before the war between 35,000,000 and 40,000,000 tons of goods a year. The corresponding imports this year will be less than 10,000,000 be a further diminution tm arf arff tons. The prospects for next year are even less satisfactory, as there must be a further diminution as the war goes on. Thus, at the present showing English imports (apart from war material and food) have been reduced to one-quarter of normal.

It should be borne in mind that the great need of the Allies at the present moment is ships and still more ships. If need be, trade must further suffer, as the biggest armaments will prove of no avail if they cannot be transported.

While the State for war interests has placed a mortgage on the British mercantile marine and withdraw it from its spheres of commercial competition, the British people were never prouder of their merchant service than they are to-day. That is because of the heroism of the men who have faced all of the new dangers and atrocities of the high seas and never shirked their duty. During three and a half years of war no single ship has been delayed by reason of a crew's refusal to face danger. Skippers of old tramp steamers, gunless and unconvoyed, ambling along at eight knots an hour, have gone through the submarine-infested Mediterranean, ready to meet all risks. Others, whose guns have been outranged by enemy submarines, have fought until their ships were shattered, and then died like heroes. The gallantry of the sailors of the British mercantile fleet is one of the greatest unwritten stories of the war.

Poisonous Snakes.

Poisonous snakes have a diamond shaped head, about four times larger at the jawbone than at the neck, and sharp tails. All snakes, however, are poisonous during the "shedding" period of seven days. They go blind two days before shedding. The Gila (pronounce hee-la) monster is so called on account of being found near the Gila river in Arizona and New Mexico. Its bite is deadly, and it is much feared by the Indians, as no remedy is known for the bite. They are peculiar creatures, having the shape of a large lizard, with feet marked like those of a monkey. Some scientists say that the bite of the Gila monster is not poisonous in itself, but that if its breath is blown on a person with a weak heart, the person will faint away for an indefinite time. In captivity the Gila monster is fed on warm milk and chopped meat every six weeks.—Wide World Magazine.

Negotiations Are Still Under Way For Separate Peace

Russian Authorities Claim That the Allies Are Negotiating to Afford Russia the Right to Conclude a Separate Peace—A New Republic Established.

TERMS WILL BE PUBLISHED

PETROGRAD, Dec. 4.— The Petrograd Soviet of workmen and soldiers informed the Railway Union to-day that the Allies were negotiating to afford Russia the right to conclude a separate peace. The announcement of the establishment of the Tartar Republic of Crimea was made here today.

It was also reported that the Cossacks had elected war and justice ministers for a new Caucausus State.

All the Bolsheviki armistict negotiations with Germany are to be published and will be subject to debate by the various Soviet bodies throughout Russia, Foreign Minister Trotsky declared to-day. He made the statement to Lt.-Col. L. V. Judson, American military attache, who called "unofficially."

The Soviet bodies, Trotsky declared, would be able to interpose suggestions "at a later stage" in the negotiations.

Don't wait for these symptoms to become chronic but start in early with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and head off disaster.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts: 101 cars, with 4,026 cattle, 140 calves, 1,810 hogs, and 1,176 sheep and lambs.

There was but a moderate run of cattle offering on the usual Monday market. Christmas beef cattle are evidently held back for later in the week. A few choice offerings were on hand, and these sold good and strong, a couple of loads selling at $11.60. For the bulk of the offerings the market was steady to strong at last week's prices, with nothing special to mark the day's trading in the cattle line.

Lambs were very strong and about 50 cents higher, choice black-faced lambs selling strong at $17.25.

The bottom temporarily fell out of the hog market, packers offering a dollar below last week's prices. The market was unsteady and weak at $16.50 to $17, fed and watered.

SOME ANIMAL ODDITIES.

Male Seals Educate Young in Happy Families.

There isn't a male wasp in existence when winter ends. Late the preceding fall the wasps mate. The coming cold weather kills every worker and male, while Mrs. Wasp hies herself to a convenient place and hibernates, ready to come forth in the spring and lay eggs to replenish the race.

Egg laying and the raising of the young furnish many instances of striking peculiarity in the animal kingdom. For instance, there is the case of some species of toads. After the female has deposited her eggs the male picks them up, winds them about his body and goes hunting flies, the while the heat from his body hatches the little toads.

There is the seal. When the powerful bull seal takes up quarters on a rock ledge he gathers a harem of females, and fights away every male from his preserve. As a consequence there is an envious group of less warlike males constantly skirting the sacred domain. But when the young seals have been born, these bachelor seals assume the burden of educating them. The seal being an air-breathing mammal, does not take to the water like the proverbial duck, but must be taught to swim. This is the task of the bachelor seals, and they exhibit all the lovability of a good nurse as they coax the little seals to the water edge and urge them to take their lessons.

But this rather idealistic family life does not exist everywhere. Some of the crustaceans, to which the lobster and crabs belong, live on terms that would lead to the gallows if practised by men and women. The female is usually larger than the male, and often demonstrates her superior strength by tearing him to pieces and devouring him, if he happens to forget her disposition or isn't nimble enough to get away.

But all peculiarities are not confined to creatures of the deep. Consider the arctiscs, for instance. They say a camel goes eight days without water. The arctiscs, or water bear, goes six months without it some times. But he doesn't do so voluntarily. In fact, to every outward appearance he dies during the drought. This little creature, microscopic in size, is an inhabitant of water troughs and similar places where moss is apt to grow.

When it rains he is as happy as a clam in high water, but where there is no rain his sack-like body and four pairs of stubby legs dry up, and the closest examination under the microscope fails to show any sign of life. But it must be only an exaggerated form of hibernation, for when the rain comes again he wakes up and starts in enjoying himself.

Which suggests the wonderful power of clinging to life shown by some creatures. The four legs and tail of a salamander, one of the small lizards, have been cut off as many as eight times, only to grow out perfectly after each operation.

The Drone Bees.

The drone bees do no work. They are the royal consorts. If more than one queen bee is found in the hive they fight among themselves until only one survives. The survivor becomes the queen of the colony. The only exception to this is when a colony becomes too large for the one queen to rule, when another queen is grown, and a new home is prepared. On the new queen's appearance the old queen leaves the hive, followed by part of her workers.

Had Piles For Ten Years

And Tried Nearly Everything Except a Surgical Operation Without Obtaining Relief — Tells How Complete Cure Was Effected.

Brantford, Ont., December 3.—There is reported here three cures of chronic cases of piles. In all three cases many treatments were tried before it was discovered that Dr. Chase's Ointment is about the only real cure for this distressing ailment.

Mrs. A. Oates, 22 Gilkinson street, Brantford, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment as a household remedy for ever so long, and am particularly indebted to it for a cure from piles. I had suffered from this annoying trouble for ten years and tried nearly everything I heard of. After using Dr. Chase's Ointment a short while I was completely cured."

Mrs. Wm. Shantz, 155 Albert street, Kitchener, Ont., writes: "For several years I was troubled with bleeding piles. I tried different remedies for relief without success. I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac of the benefits other people were receiving from Dr. Chase's Ointment, so I sent to your office for a sample box. I found that it gave me such relief that I went to a drug store and purchased a full sized box. I have used several boxes since, and have derived more benefit from its use than any remedy I have ever used."

Mrs. F. Cussons, Victoria Street, Ingersoll, Ont., writes: "About two years and a half ago I was suffering from Piles. I had tried many different remedies for this distressing trouble but nothing helped me. Finally I got a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and after using it found that I was completely cured and have not been bothered in this way since. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to anyone suffering as I did."

Simple Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

The chauffeur grinned knowingly, nodded, and started his car. His grin drove from Grace's mind her sudden and unaccustomed jealousy. She knew that Richard must be going away with this girl for some reason connected with his professional work. Of course that work did not usually include consoling beautiful damsels in distress, but there must be extenuating circumstances. She put her unpleasant thoughts from her mind, and proceeded on her mission, to give her husband the warning message she had just received, with a reasonably calm mind.

After a drive of some fifteen minutes, she saw the cab ahead of them begin to slow up and observed that her chauffeur did likewise. Presently the first cab stopped before the doors of a big, imposing looking hotel, and Richard and Miss Morton hurriedly entered.

Grace did not at once get out. She knew that her husband might resent her having followed him and did not care to put him at a disadvantage by appearing so unexpectedly upon the scene. She waited therefore for several minutes, until he would have time to go to his room, and then, paying off her cabman, she strolled quietly into the hotel lobby.

There were a few persons sitting about, but Richard was not amongst them. Going to the clerk at the desk she asked to see Mr. Richard Duvall.

The clerk regarded her with a supercilious stare, consulted his records in a bored way, then informed her that no such person was registered there.

Grace was completely taken aback.

"But I saw him come in, only a few moments ago," she protested.

"No such person here, Miss." With a frigid smile the clerk turned away, watching her, however, out of the corner of his eye, as though he considered her a suspicious character.

Grace leaned over and examined the register. There were three entries upon it, in a handwriting clearly that of her husband. "Mrs. Bradley and maid," the first entry said. "Miss Bradley," the second. They had been assigned a suite of rooms. The third and last entry was "John Bradley." His room adjoined the suite. All three were set down as hailing from Boston.

Grace puzzled for a long time over this mysterious series of entries without arriving at any definite conclusion regarding them. Where was the so-called Mrs. Bradley? And why had her husband assumed the same name? Was he posing as Ruth Morton's brother, and if so for what reason? She could not make head or tail of the matter, and wondered whether she had better send up her card, or write Richard a note and leave it for him, telling of the warning. While she was debating the matter in her mind she suddenly saw him emerge from one of the elevators at the opposite side of the lobby, and come toward the desk.

Grace approached him at once glad that the matter had been so simply arranged.

"Richard," she said, in a low voice. "I want to speak to you."

"My name is not Richard, madam," he said pointedly. "I am John Bradley. You must have made a mistake." With a polite bow he passed on.

Grace was completely taken aback. She knew that between them there existed a tacit understanding never to address each other in public during the progress of a case, unless requested to do so by some sign. But she felt that she had important information to give her husband, and then she had been a trifle jealous and annoyed. The thought that she had committed an error filled her with chagrin. Without a word, she left the hotel.

At a nearby corner she stepped into a telephone booth, and calling up the hotel asked to speak to Mr. John Bradley. In a few moments she heard Richard's familiar tones.

"This is Grace," she said quickly. "I'm sorry I spoke to you just now, but I wanted to tell you that some woman telephoned the hotel to-day, and left a warning to the effect that if you did not keep out of Miss Morton's affairs, you would be in serious danger."

"How did you know where I was?" Duvall asked.

"I saw you leave the hotel, and followed you."

"You should not have done so."

"But I wanted to give you the message. I thought you ought to know."

"I understand that, but I wished my presence here to be unknown to anyone. You made a serious mistake. I only hope that no harm will come of it."

"But—how could harm come of it?"

"You drove here in one of the hotel's regular cabs, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"Then the people I am trying to avoid may trace me here, through the driver of that cab."

"Oh—Richard—I'm so sorry. Isn't there anything I can do?"

"Nothing now, except to make no further attempt to communicate with me here. Good-bye."

Grace returned to her hotel, very thoroughly dissatisfied with what she had done. It seemed to her that by trying to warn Richard of possible danger, she might only have brought it upon him. Apparently he had left their hotel to avoid the very persons who had telephoned the warning message to her. She arrived at the door got out of the cab in which she had made the journey, and looked about, hoping that the cabman who had driven her up-town might now be at his usual stand. To her delight she saw that he was.

She went up to the man, a slim, keen looking young Irishman, and engaged him in conversation.

"Do you remember driving me up-town an hour or so ago?" she asked.

"Sure, I do, Miss," answered the man, touching his cap.

"Then please forget completely where you went, will you?" She handed the man a ten dollar bill. "It is barely possible that someone may try to find out through you, where I went. Be sure that you give them no information."

"They'll get nothing out of me, Miss," the man replied, pocketing the bill with a pleased grin.

"And if anybody does try to find out, get their name, if you can, and if not, get a description of them."

"I'll do my best, Miss."

"I am stopping here. My name is Duvall, Mrs. Duvall."

"Very good, ma'am. I'll attend to it, ma'am."

Grace went up to her room, satisfied that she had remedied her mistake, and began to look through an afternoon paper that she had bought. There seemed nothing better to do, during the evening, than to go to the theatre.

Glancing down the list of attractions, she suddenly saw the name of Ruth Morton, in large letters, billed in a new feature play, An American Beauty, opening at the Grand Theatre that night. She at once made up her mind to go. Since yesterday her interest in Miss Morton had perceptibly increased. And in spite of all, Richard had held her hand.

She was just finishing her dinner, when a page came through the room, calling her name. She got up at once, and followed him to the lobby.

"I am Mrs. Duvall," she said.

The boy looked up.

"There's a chauffeur outside wants to see you, ma'am," he said, "Tom Leary."

Grace understood at once, and made her way to the sidewalk. The cab driver of the morning stood near the entrance.

"I beg pardon, ma'am, for calling you out," he said, "but I couldn't come in, and there was something I felt that you ought to know."

"What is it?"

"A lady came here to see me a while ago," he said. "A smallish looking woman, not pretty, with light hair. She had on a dark brown suit. Not very good style, ma'am. She asked me if I knew anybody in the hotel named Duvall. I said I did. I find she'd been asking all the other cabmen, and had been to the desk before that. I guess she must have been inquiring for your husband, ma'am."

"Yes—yes—very likely," Grace hastily replied.

"What then?"

"Well, ma'am, she then asked me if I knew Mrs. Duvall. I said I did. Then she wanted to know if I'd driven either you or your husband to any other hotel to-day, and I said I had not, but that I usually did drive you, when you went anywhere. I took the liberty of saying that, ma'am."

"Yes. I'm glad you did. Go on."

"Then she hands me five dollars, and says that if I did drive you to any other hotel, I was to let her know which one it was."

"Where?" Grace asked, eagerly.

The man fished from his pocket a small bit of cardboard upon which was scrawled with a pencil, "Alice Watson, General Delivery."

Grace stared at the bit of paper in surprise. Had she, by some lucky chance, discovered the very person for whom Richard was seeking? Of course the name was probably a fictitious one, and the address, "General Delivery," meant nothing, and yet, it provided a clew by means of which this woman might be found.

"You have acted very wisely, Mr. Leary," she said. "I am greatly obliged to you."

"Do you want me to send her any word, ma'am?"

"I may. I am anxious to get hold of this woman, or to be more exact, my husband is. I will consult with him first, however. It may be that he will want you to write her a letter, giving her some such information as she desires, and then, by going to the general delivery window at the post office, and watching, identifying her when she comes for it. Do you think you could arrange to get off and do this?"

"Well, ma'am, even if I can't arrange to get off, you could of course, hire my cab, and——"

"Of course," Grace interrupted. "Very well. I will let you know further about the matter a little later. Meanwhile, here is something more for your trouble." She gave the man another bill. "Now drive me to the Grand Theatre."

Children Had Whooping Cough

Whooping cough, although specially a disease of childhood, is by no means confined to that period, but may occur at any time of life. It is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than male children.

Whooping cough starts with sneezing, watering of the eyes, irritation of the throat, feverishness and cough. The coughing attacks occur frequently, but are generally more severe at night.

On the first sign of a "whoop" Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered, as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm.

Mrs. George Cooper, Bloomfield, Ont., writes: "It is with pleasure I can write and tell you that there never was a better cough medicine made than Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Our children had whooping cough last winter, and that is the only thing that seemed to help them. It loosens up the phlegm so that they could raise it easily. I will never be without it."

"Dr. Wood's" is 25c. and 50c. a bottle; put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

EVEN THE AMERICAN FIRE LADDIES ARE KNITTING—Knitting for the soldiers is no longer solely confined to the lassies. The laddies with time to spare or able to make time to spare, are also on the job knitting all sorts of comfortable warm woollen clothing for the soldiers. These fire-laddies of Rome, New York, have found quite a deal of time to spare while waiting in their fire-house for blazes to start. So all day and night the fire-laddies on duty are at their knitting turning out socks for American Fund for French Wounded, which installed three knitting machines in the card room where cards are never played.

The low cost per cup

It is hard to believe that a cup of good, rich tea only costs about a fifth of a cent, but, you see, Red Rose consists chiefly of Assam teas—the richest, strongest teas in the world.

Red Rose easily yields 250 cups to the pound. And it's a tea of rare economy and flavor.

Kept Good by the Sealed Package

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take one tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

Ox Bones.

Ox bones have a considerable value. The four feet of an ordinary ox will make a pint of neat's foot oil. The thigh bone is the most valuable, being useful for cutting into toothbrush handles. The fore leg bones are made into collar buttons and parasol handles. The water in which the bones are boiled is reduced to glue, while the dust which comes from sawing the bones is turned into food for cattle and poultry.

Fine Canal Locks.

Some of the locks in the New York barge canal are the finest in the world, the five at Waterford being the greatest series of high lift locks in existence. They have a combined lift of 169 feet, one foot less than the total lift of every lock in the Panama canal. The upper gates weigh forty tons and the lower about 100 tons.

Dislocation of the Hip Joint.

In demonstrating his now famous method of replacing in its socket a hip that has been dislocated since birth Dr. John Ridlon of the Presbyterian hospital, Chicago, said most of these cases were girls and in most of them it was the left hip. He could not offer any suggestion as to why this should be so.

Duets Popular.

Patience—What kind of singing do you prefer, solos or duets?

Patrice—Oh, duets, by all means.

"Well, come over to the house some time and I'll start the phonograph and the parrot going at the same time."

Natural Tendency.

"Pop, do all trades have their own diseases?"

"So they say, son."

"Then is it only carpenters that have shingles?"

Gossipy.

"Mrs. Gasley is a great gossip."

"Yes. She has a good sense of rumor."

HARD WORK FOR CUPID.

Roumanian Farmers Try to Keep Their Sons From Wedlock.

The Roumanian farmer doesn't think much of matrimony. A bachelor hasn't missed much, in his opinion. And when his son gets the marrying bee buzzing in his bosom the Roumania dad is apt to take a hickory club and beat it out of the young man's system.

That's why the Roumanian youth when he is in love never confides the happy secret to his father. He goes and tells his mother, for women still believe in love and marriage, although they lead from the altar to the washtub. But the father has faced the mule heels and the plow handles so long in his hard struggle to feed the hungry mouths opened to him by marriage that he has forgotten he was once a lover sighing lover's tales. He is about as much in favor of state wide matrimony as a sick boy is in favor of castor oil.

So the son tells his mother. The mother feeds father the best dinner she can cook, and when the old man is in a mellow mood she breaks the sad news about their boy. If she is skillful enough she wins his grouchy consent, and he calls in his two best men friends. These two go with his son to the girl's home. Perhaps she has heard nothing of the love affair, but when she sees them coming she guesses what's up. Her father entertains the visitors, and if he lets the fire go out it means he has taken this method to turn them down cold.

Roumanian wives all have silk dresses or silk shawls. Their husbands do not buy the silk for them; the women raise it themselves.

Teeth Gritting a Symptom.

When children grit their teeth, either asleep or as a habit when awake, it is generally a sign that they have adenoid growths back of their noses and need the attention of a physician. Dr. C. E. Benjamins tells in a journal of Amsterdam of his experience with 1,544 cases of adenoids, in which about 87 per cent of the children were teeth gritters, and in most of the cases the gritting ceased when the adenoids were removed. Among 115 teeth gritters he examined for troubles other than adenoids all but two were found to have adenoids.

Art in America.

The first school of painting to establish itself on American soil was that of Spain, following in the train of viceroys and prelates after the Indian commonwealths had been subjected and Spanish towns had been built. To the present day there exists in the City of Mexico the oldest academy of the fine arts in the western world, the Academy of San Carlos. It is nearly as old as the Royal Academy, London.

Fogs Are Valuable.

It has been discovered that fogs, especially ocean fogs, are valuable. Fogs are the principal fertilizers of the great bean fields of California. The fields are dry farmed. Rain means ruin. Yet moisture is a necessity. This is furnished in just the right degree by fogs.

He Told Her.

It was the first ball game she had ever attended.

"Why do they call that thing the plate?" was her forty-seventh question.

"Why—er—because that's where the drops from the pitcher are caught," he replied, his reason cracking under the strain.

This Life.

There is only one way to get ready for immortality, and that is to love this life and live it as bravely and cheerfully and faithfully as we can.—Van Dyke.

NEW WINNIPEG TRAIN

Travel between Eastern and Western Canada is always heavy in the winter months, particularly during December, with its holiday season. To meet the requirements of the public, therefore, a Special Daily Service between Toronto and Winnipeg is announced by the Canadian Northern Railway; Westbound, December 3rd to January 2nd, 1918, only; Eastbound, December 1st to January 5th, 1918, only. Thereafter regular tri-weekly service will be resumed. A Through Tourist Sleeping Car will also be operated daily between Toronto and Calgary as part of the above special service, and connection will be made with regular daily trains between Winnipeg and Edmonton. Service between Toronto and Vancouver remains tri-weekly, leaving Toronto on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, as at present. For further particulars apply to Thomas Mark Town Agent, or write General Passenger Department, Canadian Northern Railway, Toronto.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Ignoble Secret

But It Proved a Valuable One

By CHARLES LEWIS PHELPS

"My son," said my father when I went to sea, "you're going into the world, and a rough one you'll find it. I've been a sailor myself, as you know, for fifty years and am glad to find a snug harbor here at home. You'll have to go through some pretty narrow holes, and your getting through at all will depend on your courage, your coolness and your wits. I can give you a way by which I once saved myself from being put under the table at a drinking bout. We'd gone ashore, a liberty party. I was a beardless boy at the time, and my mates, who were all older than I, thought it would be a fine thing to get me drunk. We went into an inn and called for drinks. The landlord, seeing their game and disposed to favor me on account of my youth, I suppose, beckoned to me to come into a side room and, pointing to a tumbler on the table, told me to drink it. The stuff was olive oil. That olive oil kept me sober when all the rest of the gang one by one slid down under the table. That's all the experience I can give you, my boy. The day may come when it will help you out if some one is trying to lay you out."

It would seem that this was but a poor quantum of experience for a father to give his boy, but the time did come when it served me well, and that time wasn't long coming, either. Anyway, it was while I was still before the mast. We sailed for the West Indies, taking out a cargo of cotton goods to make clothes for the negroes, and were to bring back dried fruits and whatever could be bought cheap and sold dear when we got back to England. We first struck the Bahamas, then Haiti and lastly Jamaica. Those were the days of the buccaneers, and Kingston, Jamaica, was a rendezvous for them.

One day when we were at anchor off Kingston a piratical looking chap came aboard and had a long talk with our captain. The next day he came back with a box in the bottom of his boat. It wasn't more than three feet square, but it was hoisted on deck by block and tackle, and it took four men to carry it below. Considering the looks of the man who brought it and its weight, I suspected that it was full of gold that had been looted from some Spanish ship, to be transferred to England.

The next day we sailed back through the Windward passage, striking the Atlantic to the southward of Turks Islands and after that pointing due north. When we were about 26 degrees north of the equator one morning we noticed a ship that carried a good deal of sail for her tonnage coming out from among the Bahamas in the neighborhood of San Salvador. I saw that our captain had his eye on her, suspicious like, and every few minutes he would bring his glass to bear on her. After rounding San Salvador she pointed due north on the course we were sailing, but after a few hours she seemed to be a little nearer us.

About noon the captain called the crew aft and told us that the ship to the westward looked mighty suspicious. True, she showed British colors, but there were plenty of British ships in those days that had been privateers when the war between England and Spain was on that didn't have to change much to become pirates. The vessel was apparently sailing the same course as we, but really a point or two toward us. She was between us and the islands, and all she had to do was to keep getting nearer all the while till she joined us. If we sheered off she would, if she was after us, sheer off too.

True enough, the ship kept edging nearer to us all that afternoon. Toward evening the captain ordered out every bit of canvas we had and turned the ship's nose due eastward. The other vessel turned at once to follow us, showing distinctly that she would overhaul us if she could. She ran up more canvas, and it was soon evident that her sailing qualities were far better than ours.

I'm not going to describe a chase that soon brought the ship up with us or the fight that was sure to be a losing one for us, because these chases and fights are all the same. And I'm not going to tell how the captain and most of the crew walked the plank, I watching them struggling in the water. When it came my turn an idea popped into my head. The pirate captain, a man with a long black curly beard, was superintending the job, and as I was ordered on to the plank I said:

"Captain, there's a treasure aboard the ship, but I don't believe you can find it."

A covetous look came into his face, and he ordered me to step aside.

"I'll help you to hunt for it if you'll let the rest of us off," I continued.

He agreed to the proposition at once. If there was a treasure aboard he didn't care to drown any man who might be able to give him any information about it. He could continue the plank walking after finding it. So he ordered me and four men who had not yet been put into the sea to be left where we were and the plank hauled in.

"Now, young man," he said to me, "tell me about the treasure."

I told him about the box that had been brought aboard, but since I had not seen it stored I couldn't tell him where it was. But I would know it if I saw it again. All I could do was to hunt for it among the cargo, and that was like looking for a needle in a haystack. It was rather late in the day to begin then, for it was growing dark. I told him there was some choice wine in the ship which I could point out to him that had been taken aboard when we had touched at a Spanish port on our way southward, and the ship was well stocked with provisions for the homeward voyage.

He decided to remain aboard himself with a prize crew of eight men till the treasure had been found. He ordered one of his captives to prepare a supper, and I filled a demijohn of wine and brought it to him.

He seemed to wish to appear friendly to me. His reason was plain. I might help him in the matter of the treasure and I might stand in his way. From what I had told him he believed that a box of gold coins—probably pieces of eight—had been brought aboard to be taken to England, for pirate ships were fitted out there, and investors must get their share of the plunder. When supper was ready my captor invited me to join him, and I accepted his invitation.

A scheme was forming in my mind. There was but little chance it would win, but it was not hopeless. We were five unarmed prisoners, guarded by eight pirates. With death staring us in the face we were all ready for any desperate enterprise. I hoped a possibility for such might arise during the night and would have liked to speak to my mates about it, but dared not be seen talking with any of them. I therefore went in to supper with the captain without having been able to tell them to be on the lookout.

There was hard drinking in those days, and many a villain who would have been invincible while sober got his deserts from his thirst for liquor. It was soon plain to me that the captain was bound to drink hard, but he was smart enough not to get drunk, leaving me sober. He would not begin a fresh bottle himself without forcing me to finish the one before me.

Suddenly I remembered the experience with olive oil that my father had given me. There was none on the table, but a-plenty in the ship, that had been taken aboard when we took on the wine. I told the captain that with his permission I would make him a salad such as he had never before tasted, but to do so I must go for some oil. He consented, and, taking a small pitcher, I filled it and drank half of it. Then, replacing what I had taken, I carried it, with a head of lettuce taken on with supplies at Kingston, and went back to my host. I then prepared a salad of the lettuce and fruits, which the captain pronounced excellent.

After this I kept up with the captain in finishing my bottle, then began to get ahead of him. It piqued him to be beaten by a beardless boy, and he poured down bottle after bottle, I doing the same, but feeling comparatively little effect from the fumes of the wine.

Suddenly I heard a loud laugh forward. It was followed by a shout, then a yelp. My heart bounded with delight. The crew had doubtless seen me drawing the wine from the cask and had appropriated more of it to their own use. The captain heard the noise, and it tended to sober him since he knew what it meant. He started to rise from the table, but was unable to do so. I passed him his bottle and filled his glass. He forgot what he had intended to do and drained it.

I now waited for the captain to fall into a stupor and the men outside to follow his example. Their shouts grew louder for awhile, then fainter as one after another they dropped off into unconsciousness. Meanwhile the captain was snoring under the table.

Seizing a pair of pistols, I went out, battered in the door of the cubbyhole in which my mates were confined and released them. As soon as they were armed we held a consultation as to what to do next. We decided to bind the captain and his men with a view—if we could get away—to take them to England for trial. Rope is easily found on a ship, and without awakening the pirates we bound them and put each one in a separate compartment.

Our next problem was to get away from the pirate vessel, which was standing near us. We must not hoist a sail for fear of being heard. Besides, there was a scant breeze. The night was cloudy, with no moon. We lowered a boat, muffled the oars, attached a hawser to the capstan, took the other end to the boat and pulled away. We could see the pirate, but not plainly, and hoped that our movement would not be noticed.

It was not long before we lost sight of her. Then we redoubled our efforts and after an hour's pull returned to our ship, hoisted a jib and with this blender motive power sailed till we dared hoist more canvas. When day came the pirate was hull down on the southern horizon.

Our crew was small, but we managed to get the vessel safely to England. I made a search for the treasure box and found it under the flooring in the captain's cabin. We concluded that since we could not return it to its owners we were justified in keeping it ourselves. So we divided it among us, and every man jack of us was made rich.

The only person I told how I had made my money was my father, who had furnished me with the information that had enabled me not only to make it, but to save my life. I gave the old man every comfort for the rest of his life.

Was ever man saved from death and made rich by being told how to put another under the table?

Isn't This True?

When you "feel mean"—dull, tired, nervous, bad digestion, no appetite—

Don't you find out, afterwards, that your bowels were not acting freely and naturally?

Due, of course, to a liver gone on a strike.

Try Magnesia For Stomach Trouble

It Neutralizes Acidity. Prevents Food Fermentation.

Doubtless, if you are a sufferer from indigestion, you have already tried pepsin, bismuth, soda charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and you know these things will not cure your trouble in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up hope and deciding you are a chronic dyspeptic just try the effect of a little magnesia—not the ordinary carbonate, citrate, oxide or milk, but the pure bisurated magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powdered or tablet form. Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in your stomach which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn, and the blocked or heavy lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

You will find that, provided you take a little bisurated magnesia immediately after a meal, you can enjoy almost anything and enjoy it without any danger of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover the continued use of the bisurated magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion.

Bad Health and the Mouth.

Dental educators and high grade practitioners have for years urged medical men and the public to recognize the importance of mouth conditions. But only recently has the menace of pyorrhea, "blind" abscesses and other diseases of the mouth been widely accepted as important factors in general health. By the romance of the microscope and X rays we are learning many things before unknown, and through these agencies the dentist is enabled to put his finger on diseased centers that would otherwise not be seen or positively determined.

We are told that a large percentage of our ills, other than contagious diseases, have their origin in the mouth. As bad health is one of the most dreaded and one of the most expensive things in life, mouth conditions must, therefore, be among the most important things in life. If a healthy mouth is so large a factor in general health, mouth hygiene should be an important part of our children's education. It is essential that every child should be carefully taught how to take the best care of the teeth. We owe it to the coming generations.—Saturday Evening Post.

ALMOST ROASTED ALIVE.

Frenchman Tells of Tortures in Ten ton Prisons.

Georges Andres, the celebrated French athlete, who was taken prisoner shortly after the outbreak of war, has escaped from Germany. He contributes to the Paris Journal an account of his captivity.

"During nearly three years," he said, "I was taken from one prisoners' camp to another. All the camps are alike, consisting of hutments, with tarred roofs, erected on sandy soil. Each camp is divided into sections by barbed wire. They are so depressing that long detention produces a peculiar mental disorder termed 'barbed wire psychosis.'

"These vast camps can accommodate 10,000 men, but not infrequently 60,000 are crowded into them. Work is compulsory, except for noncoms., who are, however, harried till they prefer work to camp routine.

"Food is very scarce, and the prisoners would perish of hunger if they did not receive biscuits from the French Government and parcels from their families or from prisoners' relief committees. From the Huns the prisoners receive only boiled herbs, with a scrap of margarine and occasionally a little barley, with a small ration of uneatable black pudding.

"I was astonished," continued Andre, "to hear everybody complain of the present bread when I reached France. It is cake compared with KK bread.

"When a prisoner arrives in a camp, he is immediately assigned to any work required, irrespective of personal attainments, and may be employed in mines, farms or factories. The kommandos, or workmen's quarters, are worse than the camps.

"The harshest methods are employed to make the men work, the least harsh being deprivation of food in some factories prisoners unwilling to work for the Huns are placed in hot rooms until they submit. Blows with the flat side of sabres or bayonets are too frequent to merit attention.

"I have seen the burns of a man compelled to remain at attention between two glowing masses of metal. The least movement brought him into contact with the burning iron. He heroically refused to work against France, and finally fell inanimate.

"Naturally the prisoners' health suffers. Tuberculosis is making ravages. There is little or no medicine. High temperature alone is regarded as proof of illness. The Huns require workers; not invalids. Nevertheless, the spirit of the prisoners remains excellent, though none of them expect the war to end within another eighteen months, and even then only on condition that France remains united and accepts restrictions as the enemy does.

"The prisoner's worst fate is to be sent to reprisal camps in Poland or on the fighting line. There he is exposed to death from starvation or shells. I know something about this from personal experience."—London Chronicle.

A Tommy's Sensations.

It has been said that every situation can be reduced to a point of view. And if you take the case of the trenches in Flanders, at the present moment, you ought to have no difficulty in making out your case. A British "Tommy" was asked by an officer recently, after a day of hideous bombardment, what his sensations were. "When I woke up at 6 o'clock," he replied, "I thought something unusual was happening. By 8 I was beginning to be disturbed. By 10, I was fair fed up with it. By 11, I was just disgusted. At 12, I pulled me helmet over me head and went to sleep again."

Her Secret of Success.

"How is it that you are able to do so much more than other people?" asked a tired, nervous woman who stopped Mrs. Palmer for a word at the close of one of her lectures.

"Because," she answered with the sudden gleam of a smile, "I haven't any nerves or any conscience, and my husband says I haven't any backbone."

It was true that she never worried. She had early learned to live one day at a time, without "looking before and after." And nobody knew better than Alice Freeman Palmer the renewing power of joy. She could romp with some of her very small friends in the half hour before an important meeting, go for a long walk or ride along country lanes when a vexing problem confronted her, or spend a quiet evening by the fire reading aloud from one of her favorite poets at the end of a busy day.—Mary R. Parkman in St. Nicholas.

THERE IS NOTHING FOR THE LIVER
SO GOOD AS MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

They will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels and will tone, renovate, and purify the liver, removing every result of liver trouble from the temporary, but disagreeable bilious and sick headaches, to the severest forms of liver complaint.

They are small and easy-acting, do not gripe, sicken or weaken like the old-fashioned, nauseating, griping purgatives.

Mrs. A. Kirk, 53 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have tried and tested Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and have received good results, for which I am very thankful. I took them for liver trouble. I came out of the hospital on May 3rd, last, after having had a serious operation which might have been saved had I taken your remedy sooner. I have given some to my sister for biliousness and sick headache, and she has found great relief. A lady who lives in my house has started to take them. I will do my best to recommend them to all my friends."

Life Saving Aeroplanes.

Aeroplanes may in time be a part of the regular equipment used by the United States life saving service. There are numerous cases in which it is impossible for small boats to reach a stranded steamer in heavy weather. Upon some occasions even the line throwing guns cannot get a hawser aboard. It is argued that aeroplanes in any but exceptional circumstances would be able to carry a line to vessels in distress, making it possible to use a breeches buoy and get passengers and crew to shore.

Should congress approve this plan it would open a new field to aviators more hazardous than any other branch of flying, not excepting war work. They would be compelled to make ascents in the worst possible weather, requiring skill and courage of the highest order

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. said a well educated man the other day when he was asked this question:—"Why, when you have a cold, a cough or bronchitis (troubles, you will note, of throat and chest) do you persist in pouring cough syrups, lung tonics and the like into your stomach, which is perfectly sound?"

Ever think of it? The stomach and the lungs are not connected, otherwise food swallowed would choke you. Lung and throat troubles were never yet cured by dosing the stomach. To cure coughs, colds and bronchitis, you must breathe the cure. Peps provide the rational treatment for these ailments. Peps are tablets made up of pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing. Try a 50c. box of Peps for your cold, your cough, bronchitis or asthma. Newspaper "Scoops"

Newspaper readers must have noticed that frequently one or other of our great "dailies" has some specially interesting feature or an item of news which no other newspaper contains. In Fleet Street these features are known as "scoops" or "exclusives".

Perhaps the best "scoop" since the outbreak of war has been that of the Daily Telegraph in securing the publication rights for this country of the sensational Gerard disclosures. Rumour has it that Lord Burnham, the owner of that enterprising paper, is paying £200 a day for these articles. The 'News of the World' gives some interesting information about this "scoop." A well-known journalist connected with one of the great London newspapers is biting his fingers He gravelled for hours in the same railway carriage with Mr. Gerard, who had his reminiscences in his bag, and had then made no arrangements for serial production in England. The journalist little dreamed what a "scoop" was within reach!

PIGOTT FORGERIES.

Some time ago the 'Daily Sketch' paper came out with a full story of the attempted murder by poison of Mr. Lloyd George by the Wheeldon family a day before any other paper had the news. Some idea of the value of this "exclusive" may be gathered from the fact that before ten o'clock in the morning there was not a 'Sketch' on the bookstalls to be had for love or money.

The 'Daily Mirror' was fortunate in securing photos of the terrible Serbian retreat across the snow-covered mountains of Albania in 1915, for they were the only photographic records of that "death march" made. The young Serbian staff officer who took the photographs dispatched his films by aeroplane to Brindisi, and thence by special messenger to the 'Daily Mirror' offices in London.

The 'Times' was once badly taken in over a sensation. One night a man called at Printing House Square with a batch of letters, for which he asked £1,780. They were the Pigott forgeries, and the story of how the 'Times' was deceived is still fresh in the public mind. The money was paid, and not long after another similar amount was paid for a further batch of letters. These famous letters cost the 'Times' between £3,000 and £4,000

These so-called Parnell letters created the greatest political sensation of modern times, and led up to the longest Parliamentary inquiry every known. The bill for the Parnell Commission is carefully preserved in the archives of Printing House Square. It is an open secret that before these letters were done with, they cost the 'Times' £100,000.

£1,000 FOR AN ITEM.

For an unofficial announcement that Mr. Gladstone was about to resign, the editor of the "Pall Mall Gazette," it is said, paid £1,000. For weeks every paper in the United Kingdom was constantly referring to the news which the 'Pall Mall' had been the first to give to the world, and the 'P.G.M.' thus received a valuable advertisement.

No expense is shirred by the journalist intent on obtaining the "scoop" on which he has set his heart. Perhaps the most amazing illustration of this was when Gordon Bennett, owner of the 'New York Herald,' monopolized all the wires between Niagara and New York City in order to obtain exclusive news of King Edward's visit to Niagara to see Blondin cross the Falls on a tightrope. A heavy sum was paid in wiring unnecessary matter, so as to keep the line engaged. At the end of two hours the King had not arrived. The 'Herald' was wasting dollars by the hundred, and the reporters telegraphed to New York asking what they should do to keep the wires.

"Telegraph the Book of Genesis," came back the reply, and this was done at a cost of £150. Still the King did not come. The reporters, afraid to spend so much money, again telegraphed to Mr. Gordon Bennett, and instructions came back with lightning speed, "Go on to Revelations." Fortunately it was not necessary to telegraph the whole Bible, as the King arrived, and the 'Herald' obtained its "special." The exploit cost over £1,000.—Tit-Bits.

THE THRONE IN THE HOME.

Where Two Should Rule as One to Insure Real Happiness.

"A man may build a throne for the woman he loves," says the Mother's Magazine, "but he will find that to make her a queen he must mount it beside her, for only where two rule as one can either hold true sway. Whether married or single, we do not live unto ourselves alone. All the world somehow is affected by what we are, and in the married state we have a greater obligation than merely to keep the peace or to observe the conventions or to demonstrate how we can improve upon God's law of life and love.

"It is well that we should use every God given power of mind and spirit, every quality and grace and virtue at our command, before and after, in order to live up to the privileges and responsibilities of marriage. But marriage fortunately is a thing of the heart rather than of the intellect, and it is our wrong attitude of mind toward matrimony, that would drag it down to our own level and limit of comprehension and make it a merely human mistake instead of a divine gift.

"If we would make it a blessing instead of a curse, if we would have it encompass all of our needs in joy and sorrow, if we would have it endure with us through life and eternity as the sublime fact of our existence, we must live up to it hour by hour in a spirit of faith and hope and charity."

BOMBS FROM AIRPLANES.

Simple Device That Aids In Dropping the Missiles Accurately.

At the numerous aerial bombing schools pilots and observers are taught how to drop bombs accurately on stationary and moving objects on the ground and on captive balloons. Bombs of all classes are used, from the eight pound high explosive bomb to the 200 pound bomb as well as the phosphorus and rochambite bombs.

The instrument that is used in directing the placing of a bomb on the object aimed at is a simple device and is provided with several adjustments that can be made almost instantly. One of these gives the speed at which the machine is traveling, another is an ordinary water level, and both in conjunction with two mirrors which show the pilot the ground below serve to aim the bomb. The wind has to be seriously considered when dropping bombs, and most bombs are dropped up wind.

Bomb dropping is a most important branch of the air service, and pilots have been known to drop bombs on enemy trains and transports from fairly good heights and also on the vital parts of bridges and on depots and railway junctions, munition plants, aerodromes and submarine bases.

Porpoise and Whale.

Whales and porpoises are mammals, like cattle and sheep, and their flesh is "meat," not "fish." In texture and appearance it resembles beef, though the color is darker red, and the flavor is closer to that meat than to any other. It is devoid of all fishy taste.

In the Court.

"But you can't take it up, your honor."

"Why can't I, madam?"

"It's the parlor carpet, sir."

Death.

Death opens the gate of fame and shuts the gate of envy after it; it unloosens the chain of the captive and puts the bondsman's task into another man's hand.

A Single Application Will Banish Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

Here is a home treatment for removing hairs that is quick, painless and inexpensive: With some powdered delatone and water make enough paste to thickly cover the objectionable hairs, apply and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be left soft, clear and hairless. This treatment will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be careful to get real delatone.

Hunger Drives Slavs to Drink

A RUSSIAN writer in The Wratsch asks if there is any relation between the drinking of methylated spirits, or wood alcohol, and the disorder of the Russian armies? He publishes statistics of cases of this form of intoxication from the records of Petrograd hospitals. His conclusion, as he points to the increasing number, is that industrial fatigue and hunger are main causes of this drinking of poisonous spirits. The consequences are exceedingly harmful to the race, and he is inclined to welcome vodka as the lesser of the two evils. Vodka, however, is scarce and the price continues to rise. But, as compared with wood alcohol, it is almost innocent; it might be called a temperance whiskey. He concedes that vodka also is injurious, but the practical point is how to prevent the increase of alcoholism where so much industrial fatigue and so much industrial unrest exist. The prohibition of vodka was doubtless well meant, but the first enthusiasm has damped down, and there is now no real temperance. It must not be assumed because a man does not take alcoholic drinks that therefore he takes no stimulant. Some patients in the Petrograd hospitals took methylated spirits under the mistaken notion that it was not spirits. It is certainly much cheaper than vodka or than potato spirit, such as the Germans brought to the trenches.

The price of whiskey of good quality is prohibitive, owing to the scarcity of grain. This is particularly so in Lithuania and the country near Riga, which the Germans now occupy. The "Courier," at Cracow, reports that a sack of flour in Lithuania costs 1,000 rubles; a sack of potatoes 400 rubles. In this sense a sack may be the equivalent of a barrel, so that hunger and its natural consequence, fatigue, are extreme. The Russian doctor draws the inference that the root cause of drinking is fatigue. He quotes an English writer, Sullivan, to the effect that stimulants give a feeling of warmth and ward off chills; they produce a sense of enjoyment, gratification and comfort; they give greater zest to social intercourse; they lessen pain, relax nerves wearied by physical or mental labor; relieve the pressure of daily cares, deaden trouble, and anxiety, improve the outlook on life, impart fresh vigor to the healthy man, and enable him to surmount difficulties and perform deeds which otherwise he would have regarded as beyond his powers.

All this is probably true, and if true of countries like England and Wales, is certainly the case in still greater intensity with Russia. The explanation of the military collapse may be this fact that alcoholism and industrial unrest have thrown such an increased strain upon organization that it has given way. Such is the view of the writer in Wratsch, and he gives details that have not been published in the daily press. He states, on the authority of the Minister of Commerce, that the social purposes of the revolution have been allowed to override military requirements to such an extent that the output of munitions has been reduced 60 per cent.

According to this medical view, the problem before the Russians is how to lessen the consumption of spirits by alleviating industrial fatigue and industrial unrest. Observations under the best conditions, he says, show that alcohol abolishes the unpleasant symptoms caused by labor. Under war conditions the temptation is obviously very great and industrial drinking—that is, the taking of drinks at intervals throughout the day—goes with disease, with emotional depression and worry, with bad and insufficient food—all war conditions in a certain degree. The cure, as The Medical Journal of Petrograd sees it, is not total prohibition. The proposition being accepted that industrial fatigue and industrial unrest are related as cause and effect, the obvious thing to do, if possible, is to lessen industrial fatigue. No one, it says, who has not felt it, can realize the feeling of utter helplessness which industrial fatigue in its severe forms really means."

Industrial unrest and its evils exist in England and France, but the Governments of the two countries have taken measures to combat them. George Barnes, chairman of the Commission on Industrial Unrest, believes high prices and profiteering are potent causes. With regard to drink as a cause, Professor Stanley Kent, whose lecture in London on "Fatigue and Alcohol," has just been published in The Lancet, says: "The true cure for alcoholism is the provision of decent surroundings in the factory and the home, adequate wages, leisure and relaxation, clubs, recreation rooms, indoor and outdoor games—in short, the elements of a healthy, full and interesting life, in place of a mere existence without interest, without pleasure, and without hope."

These ideals no doubt will prevail in England, but in Russia, according to the financial paper the "Vestnik Bankouwi," the vast Russian peasantry and poor are virtually governed by the soldiers and seditious elements. The revolution is now in its social stage, and in the present laxity of public opinion the prospects of anything like prohibition or drink control are not cheering. In fact, the desire for social freedom is one of the things that swept away the reigning family and its restrictions upon vodka. It points out, further, that in such a situation of social chaos drink and the propaganda of German secret service can be relied on to paralyze the Russian offensive.

The Track of the Earth.

If the sun and earth and the earth's orbit could be seen, then the track of the earth would be a spiral around that of the sun. Go take a broomstick, wind wire around it like thread on a spool, take out the stick and stretch the coil until the space between each turn is, say, one-third of an inch and make a hundred turns of the wire. Then this spiral or coil would represent the track of the earth through space during a hundred years. The sun moves toward the star Vega at a speed of twelve miles per second and carries the earth, all the planets and their moons along. But they all move around the sun at the same time and therefore traverse spirals, represented fairly by extended coils of wire.

A Comparison.

A German military critic said that Robert E. Lee was America's ablest soldier. But when Lee's army of invasion came up into Pennsylvania it didn't cut down a tree, trample a garden or steal a pig. Indeed, Lee was so good a soldier that he said the burning of Chambersburg was a military blunder for which he was not responsible.

The officer in all America's wars who did the most burning, hacking and robbing was Benedict Arnold after he had turned traitor to his country. But the chief effect of it was to solidify the colonists into an effort to win the Revolution.—Girard in Philadelphia Ledger.

A Real Providence.

Mr. Younghusband reached home late for dinner.

"I got pinched for speeding on the way home," he explained rather sheepishly. "Have to appear tomorrow morning and get $10 or fifteen days."

Mrs. Younghusband fervently clapped two blistered little hands. "What a providence!" she cried devoutly. "You must take the fifteen days, John! The cook has just left!"

Home Ground Cornmeal.

Clean up the old coffee grinder or buy a new one and grind your own cornmeal for griddlecakes, muffins and bread. If you do not like bread made of cornmeal alone use some wheat flour with it. Since home ground cornmeal does not keep long it is better to buy whole corn by the bushel and grind for meal as needed.

Not an Economist.

"Are you practicing food economy?"

"I tried it out, but it didn't work."

"What was the trouble?"

"My husband simply refused to eat the cold fried egg that was left over from the day before."

Its Uses.

"Pop, tell me one thing."

"What is it, son?"

"Is the line that ships have to cross on the sea where they hang the ocean's wash?"

SINKING A SUBBMARINE.

How the U-29 and Its Daring Crew Were Sent to the Bottom.

Von Weddigen, the hero of the German submarine service, after sinking the British cruisers Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy was promoted to a better ship and took command of the U-29, in comparison with the U-9 a biggish brute, a regular "peach," almost an undersea liner.

After a hard day on the job, looking for game in the upper North sea, the U-29 went "to sleep," resting with a slight negative buoyancy on a shelving sand bank. Outside of the watch officer and the regular standing watch, all hands must have turned in, sleeping in their leather suits. It is supposed that, as the watch at the telephones heard the nearing propeller beats of a British destroyer screen, the alarm was sounded—"Tauch station!"—with every man flying to his post.

One might imagine that Von Weddigen waited; that the microphones vibrated the slow chugs of big ship propellers, which told him that the British fleet was approaching. Blowing his adjusting tank to a submerged trim, he came to fighting position. His periscope tipped the surface.

He was lucky enough to come between the two columns of the British grand fleet, steaming in line of squadrons, with the Iron Duke leading the right column, flying Jellicoe's flag. The periscope of the U-29 showed up halfway between the squadrons, six cables apart. She got off her torpedo, which passed under the Iron Duke. Immediately she fired No. 2, which also missed, going astern. Because of danger of smashing their own ships none of the British gun crews dared to fire at the German submarine.

But after the second torpedo something went wrong with the U-29. Either the valves failed to work, which, by taking water into compensating tanks, were to equalize the weight of the discharged torpedoes, or at the instant the diving rudder man failed in giving enough "down rudder." At any rate, the nose of the submarine shot up above the water.

She started immediately to begin to dive, but the dreadnaught, third in the left column, swung out of line and went full speed for the U boat. The big ship caught her on the ram, spearing her like a whale, and raised her along the cutwater until the submarine was half out of water—a flash, a grinding smash, the U-29 balancing first one way, then the other, and finally dropping, the lettered bow foremost! The dreadnaught swung back into column. Without a signal being made, without a shot fired, the grand fleet proceeded.

This is the true story of how Von Weddigen perished. It came from a man who saw it with his own eyes.—Henry Reuterdahl in Saturday Evening Post.

Automobile Radiators.

To assure the efficient operation and long life of your automobile it is essential that the radiator be kept clean. Every radiator has been designed for the purpose of dissipating some of the heat from the engine to prevent it from overheating. The radiator can only accomplish this, advises the Popular Science Monthly, when the radiator cells are cleared of mud, so that the comparatively cool air can circulate through it. Yet many are the cars which are allowed to clog up with mud and dirt until it almost takes a hammer to knock them out. A good antidote is a powerful stream of water from a hose, or where this may not be convenient a stiff brush or a broom will assist in solving the cleaning problem.

The Night Table.

The night table is not as well known in bedroom lore as it might be, I think. It is such a comfort to be able after going to bed to read by the light on the night table and to be able to stretch out a hand at midnight and switch this same light on. On the night table may be kept any of the little things which might in any possibility be needed during the night—a light, a clock, a carafe of drinking water, a book for a chance wakeful hour.

Peace on Earth.

Peace on earth would mean the liberation of human faculties for the highest and noblest achievements of which human nature is capable. It would mean a splendid efflorescence of art, literature, science, philosophy and religion—in short, culture in its best sense as the spontaneous unfolding of the powers of personality.—David Jayne Hill in Century.

U.S. To Declare War On Austria

Germans Heavily Reinforced On West

Wilson Recommends A Declaration Of War Against Austria

"Nothing Shall Turn the United States Aside Until the War is Won and Germany is Beaten" American President Declares---Field Marshal Haig Reports a Lull To-day on the Cambrai Front With No Infantry Actions, Although Enemy Artillery Fire is Heavy.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, December 4.—Immediate declaration of war against Austria-Hungary was recommended to Congress to-day by President Wilson. The President did not, however, recommend a declaration of war against Turkey and Bulgaria at this time.

In ringing definite terms the President declared that nothing shall turn the United States aside until the war is won and Germany is beaten. All talk of peace he pronounced out of the question. "Peace," the President declared, "could come only when the German people make it through rulers the world can trust, when they make reparation for the destruction their present rulers have wrought, and when Germany receded from all territory acquired by armed conquest."

President Wilson's address was considered so important in its relation to international affairs that it has been transmitted in advance to practically every capital in the world.

The President said: "Let there be no misunderstanding. Our present and immediate task is to win the war, and nothing shall turn us aside from it until it is accomplished. Every power and resource we possess, whether of men, of money, of of materials, is being devoted and will continue to be devoted to that purpose until it is achieved. Those who desire to bring peace about before that purpose is achieved I counsel to carry their advice elsewhere. We will not entertain it. We shall regard war only as won when the German people say to us through properly accredited representatives that they are ready to agree to a settlement based upon justice and the reparation of the wrong their rulers have done. They have done wrong to Belgium which must be repaired. They have established a power over other lands and people than their own, over the great Empire of Austria-Hungary, over the hitherto free Balkan state, over Turkey, and within Asia, which must be relinquished."

WASHINGTON, December 4.—The British hand is being gradually forced in the matter of a more aggressive naval offensive policy.

While Admiral Benson believes a naval offensive is doomed to failure, younger officers insist unless the naval power is tested, the bloody sea-saw on land will go on almost indefinitely, whereas a single bold stroke by the British, French and American navies might be the knockout punch for Germany. Meantime the navy is swamped with submarine curbing inventions. Officials declared to-day that gradually a method of checking the U-boats is being evolved and that, with this expected cure, the naval offensive can be more safely tried.

PETROGRAD, December 4.—A battle between detachments from the Petrograd garrison commanded by Ensign Krylenko and the Cossacks is reported to be impending at Vitebsk. According to a telegram from Krylenko's adjutant, Cossacks have gathered on the flanks and in the rear of Krylenko's forces.

A circumstantial report is being circulated that General Kornilos, the former Russian commander-in-chief, who led an unsuccessful revolt against the Kerensky government, escaped from custody last night.

Armistice For 48 Hours Is Signed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 4.—An armistice between Russia and Germany has been signed at the headquarters of Prince Leopold of Bavaria, says an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam to-day. The armistice is valid for a period of forty-eight hours.

Advices received Monday night from various German sources indicated that an armistice was in effect on the Russo-German front, but were not specific as to the actual signing of the formal agreement, or as to the period during which hostilities should be suspended.

PETROGRAD, December 4. — Ensign Krylenko, Bolsheviki commander-in-chief, telegraphed to-day that the general staff which had refused to recognize the authority of Bolsheviki, has surrendered.

VETERANS MAKE GRANT OF $100 FOR CHILDREN'S TREAT

G. W. V. A. Ask the Public to Assist Them in Making the Coming Christmas a Red-Letter One For the Kiddies of Peterboro' Soldiers

A COMMENDABLE SPIRIT

As announced last week the Great War Veterans' Association are planning a Christmas treat for the children of Peterborough's soldiers. Mr. G. N. Gordon started the ball rolling with a cheque for $50, and since then another donation of $10.25 was received from Messrs. Yeates Brothers. However, there was no further response from the public in regard to the matter, and the question before the regular general meeting of the Veterans last night was whether to proceed with the Christmas cheer for the youngsters or drop the proposition.

The matter was discussed at some length and although some of the members were of the opinion that it would be impossible to handle the affair, Comrade Jack Smith and other comrades thought it was up to the Association to provide as happy a Christmas as possible for the soldiers' kiddies. Comrade Smith advocated that the Veterans make a donation from their own funds to help finance the proposed entertainment, and after some further discussion it was moved by Comrade R. H. Muir and seconded by Comrade W. Dyer, that the G.W.V.A. make a grant of $100 from their relief funds for this purpose. The motion was unanimously carried and the details of the affair were left to the Entertainment committee to work out.

It is altogether probable that the event will take place in the armouries, if permission can be secured, and it is planned to use the main floor for games and entertainment, with the recreation room as a banquet room. A Christmas tree with appropriate gifts is another likely item on the programme.

The co-operation of the citizens is asked to make the event a success. It is the desire of the Veterans to make Christmas, 1917, stand out as a red letter one with the soldiers' kiddies. The G.W.V.A. have shown a most commendable spirit in undertaking this event, in addition to their many other activities, and a still more praiseworthy spirit in voting $100 of their own funds to be spent in this manner. It is hoped that other citizens will follow the lead and make a donation to this most praiseworthy object. Subscriptions may be left at the newspaper offices and will be gratefully acknowledged.

In the midst of the war gloom Peterborough can make this Christmas a happy one for many youngsters. The War Veterans and Mr. Gordon have shown the way, who will follow?

DUKHONIN IS KILLED

Canadian Press:

PETROGRAD, Dec. 4. —Gen. Dukhonin, who took over the post of commander-in-chief of the Russian armies after the overthrow of Premier Kerensky, was thrown from a train and killed as a result of lynch law after Ensign Krylenko. The Bolsheviki commander-in-chief had captured Mohilov, it was officially announced to-day.

Frank Jenne says:

FOE'S ATTACKING LINES ARE FIFTEEN WAVES DEEP

Battleground is Piled With Dead Germans, the British Artillery, Machine Guns and Rifles Doing Fearful Execution in Solid Columns of the Enemy.

ENEMY REINFORCED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN THE FIELD, Dec. 4—The battle out of Cambrai continued with unabating ferocity to-day. Fighting like wild cats the British have been stemming the enemy, and where they have been forced to give way, they have only done so in their own good time, after repulsing all attacks. This plan held at Masnieres. It has been followed elsewhere.

The fields near Queant, around Byng's new salient, down to Vendhuile, are piled with dead Germans to-day. Fifteen waves deep, the enemy came to the attack. In these solid phalanx-like columns, the British artillery, machine guns and rifles did fearful execution. West of Dominion one British machine gunner fired 70,000 rounds on one gun in a single day, and all at a range of not more than 1,200 yards. It was usually less than that. This was only one rapid fire gun out of many directed at the solid masses of the enemy. But they never seemed to make an impression on the fifteen waved lines. The dead dropped in piles, but the grey fighters filled the gaps.

A TANK EXPLOIT.

The exploit of a certain tank lieutenant is an example of the British spirit of battle. The lieutenant's captain, in charge of the tank, was killed early yesterday morning. The subaltern took command. A few hours later, at 10.30 in the morning, his tank was hit squarely by a German shell. The lieutenant got his men out of their steel waggon and had them entrench nearby. Then, alone, he clambered back into the tank and personally worked the Lewis guns that stuck out of its barrettes in front. He worked them so rapidly that they got red hot and he ran out of ammunition. He had to leave the tank, but the lieutenant was still anxious to fight. He and his men found a German machine gun nearby and with it attacked two hundred Germans. They held the enemy until the British infantry panted up and grabbed the enemy position.

HEAVIEST FIGHTING YET.

British officers who have been through the war mill declared to-day there has never been any heavier fighting than that which the Cambrai sector has seen for the last few days. Attacks and counter attacks succeeded each other endlessly, bringing the action into one vast battle. To-day the most violent spot in the line was apparently around La Vacquerie.

Field Marshal Hindenburg is giving Crown Prince Rupprecht fresh divisions. They have been pouring in from all directions. Probably some of them are from Russia. The Bavarian Prince is flinging them into the struggle in the old German fighting style, masses upon masses.

From prisoners it seemed apparent that Germany is exerting her utmost, desperately anxious to force a decision before the Americans arrive. Germans, Bavarians, Prussians and the Grenadier Guards, the very pick of the Teutonic forces, are in the German assault.

PUBLIC MEETING IS POSTPONED UNTIL FRIDAY

The public meeting which was to have been held to-night in Victoria Hall to hear the report of the committee in regard to club rooms for the War Veterans, and also to organize a Ladies' Auxiliary for the G.W.V.A., has been postponed until Friday evening on account of the commencement exercises of the Collegiate Institute to-night, and also because of the fact that Dominion Secretary Norman Knight will be unable to be present. The meeting will be held on Friday night, and it is hoped that Secretary Knight will be on hand then. All citizens who are interested in the welfare of the Veterans are asked to note the change in the date of the meeting and to be present on Friday night.

SPLENDID MEETING HELD AT BUCKHORN

Sir Robert Borden Has Failed to Inaugurate Forward Policy to Supply the Ships and Food That Great Britain is So Urgently in Need of, Says Mr. Hall in Rousing Address

Mr. R. R. Hall addressed a large meeting at Buckhorn last night. The roads were good and the attendance was unusually large and enthusiastic.

Mr. A. Wilson, of Harvey, occupied the chair.

Mr. Wilson stated that in the conduct of this great war there were three vital necessities — men, ships and food. The British Government ought to be the best judge of her greatest necessities. Great Britain and her Allies have never appealed to Canada for men. The men have voluntarily enlisted as fast as Great Britain could use them, and there are now over 100,000 men in England who are waiting to go over to France.

No Forward Policy.

Great Britain has appealed to Canada to furnish ships, but Sir Robert Borden and his Governments have inaugurated no forward policy with proper Government assistance to supply these ships, which are one of Great Britain's necessities of the war.

The British Government have appealed to Canada and the United States to supply them with food at the rate of four millions a day, but Sir Robert Borden during these last three years has given no assistance to farmers to produce this food.

Our commonsense teaches us that if the people of Britain, France, and Italy are not constantly and continuously supplied with this food, thousands, nay millions, may go hungry and starve.

If food stuffs are not produced in sufficient quantities in this country then prices of food stuffs are bound to go higher, and the sooner the people living in our cities and towns understand that, the better it will be for themselves. The people living in our cities and towns should be given to understand very plainly that if farmers are taken from the land in large numbers, then there will not be labour on the farm to produce the food stuffs they require, and even people living in our own cities may find themselves going hungry.

It seems to me that the policy pursued by Sir Robert Borden so far as production of food stuffs is concerned is one of national suicide.

Mr. Hall stated that he agreed with every word that had been uttered by the chairman. He had very briefly outlined the necessities of Great Britain and her Allies.

Time for a Change.

When we find Sir Robert Borden, the Prime Minister of this country, laughing in the Peterborough Armouries at the idea of Great Britain wanting food stuffs, it certainly is time for a change.

The British Food Controller has made known to Sir Robert Borden for many months that a constant and continuous supply of food is one of the greatest necessities of the war, and yet Sir Robert Borden is so busily engaged in playing politics that he will not listen to Great Britain's appeal.

"Indeed, good grounds for belief are growing daily that he is even playing politics with our soldiers in the front line trenches," said Mr. Hall, "and that he is a party to keeping our troops in the front lines trenches longer than the necessities demand."

A "Political" General.

It is also well known that Sir Arthur Currie, the Commander-in-Chief of the Canadian Forces, was a real estate dealer in Vancouver and Victoria, and that he had no military experience, and was only a ward heeler in these cities, said Mr. Hall.

He never had the experience or the ability to command our Canadian forces, and owed his position as Commander-in-Chief to his political pull, continued the speaker.

It will be a relief to the Canadian people to know that General Currie has been relieved of his command, but I am sorry to say that it was only after unusually large casualties in killed and wounded among our Canadian soldiers had taken place.

General Currie has for many months been sending telegrams from France to Canada of a highly inflammable political character, while all this time the casualties among our Canadian soldiers have been far higher per head than among the French and British soldiers.

What has the soldier's wife, mother, sister, or daughter to say as to the conduct of Sir Robert Borden in being a party to the placing of this real estate dealer and ward heeler at the head of our Canadian forces?

What has the soldier's wife, mother, sister, or daughter to say as to the conduct of Sir Robert Borden in allowing his incompetent General Currie to be placed in a position to needlessly and recklessly sacrifice the lives of those who are dearest to them?

SIR ROBERT CLAIMS EXEMPTION.

In his address at the Armouries on Friday night, Sir Robert Borden is reported as saying:

"I do not come as the leader of any political party, but as the leader of men united in the best interests of Canada in a national crisis."

A declaration like this is well enough for a platform platitude; but it is fair to inquire who, and on what authority, made Sir Robert Borden leader of the Union government; or who unmade him as leader of the Conservative party and leader of the Borden government? He did not resign as leader of his government and, consequently, is still de facto head of that government, which has not ceased to exist. The Borden government still remains; it was not dismissed, nor was Sir Robert set aside as its leader, no matter how strong the latent desire of many of his colleagues and supporters for such a consummation. Nobody, no authority, gubernatorial nor executive, made him "leader of no political party."

In vain will such a plea release or relieve him from responsibility for the three years of war maladministration under his leadership.

It is not surprising that Sir Robert desires to slip out of responsibility. He did not propose a "union" government when the graft, waste and delay elements of his war administration was in the hey-day of its noxious activity. It was only as the day of accounting drew near; when the Borden government would have to meet its judges, that he skidded. He felt and knew that if the Borden government appealed upon its record it was doomed. Then Hon. Robert Rogers whispered conscription, and Sir Robert saw in a union government a hope of salvation. He constituted himself leader of the new government in the hope that the sins of the Borden government would be hidden under the pallium of patriotic pretension.

We need not confine our estimate of the sins of the Borden government in the matter of war administration to the meagre and partial records furnished by the ventilation of scandalous graft charges. We have the evidence of one of Sir Robert Borden's colleagues—bearing official testimony to the wicked weakness, ineffectiveness and carelessness of Sir Robert Borden's supervision of war administration.

In the correspondence that took place between Sir Sam Hughes and Sir Robert leading up to Sir Sam being kicked out of Sir Robert's cabinet—not for inefficiency or unfaithfulness, but because he told the truth—was the following letter. Though naturally guarded and toned down as diplomatically as possible, it is a damming revelation of criminal incompetency and official indifference to the interests of the country in the war crisis. Under date of May 15th, 1915, Sir Sam, as Minister of Militia addressed the following letter to Sir Robert Borden:

Dear Sir Robert:

Since my return from England last November, I have repeatedly notified you that owing to the interference and plans of the "so-called" sub-committee and to the repeated hold-ups and needless obstructions of some of my colleagues in the affairs of this department the contract branch has been very much hampered and practically blockaded; delays have been very prolonged; the cost has been greatly enhanced, and the goods supplied have been, in many cases, inferior. Indeed, the most ardent agents of the German government could scarcely have been more successful in holding up the proper equipment of our forces, had they been in control.

As one of many specific examples: Take the trucks for the second division. They should have been ready last December. They are not ready yet. Some of my colleagues constituted themselves champions of this or that truck and brought about delays, whereby untried trucks would be purchased; high prices would be paid in commissions to agents, and the government and the country would be treated practically as a retailer. My policy, as you may remember, in this and in all other matters, was to force dealers to give the government wholesale, or manufacturers' rates.

At the present time there are upwards of one hundred requisitions that have long been in. The Quartermaster-General has over and over and over again, until his heart has grown sick, brought them before me. They have been promptly passed on to the Director of Contracts, and the great majority of them, when passed on to the Privy Council, have been held up in Council, or by the Treasury Board, laid aside or sent back—but always delayed, and given endless and unnecessary work by the sub-committee.

I saw by an article in the "Free Press" that it is current everywhere among the soldiers and officers that they are short of nearly every class of equipment and supplies. In fact, three times recently I have been severely reproached about shortages in supplies and equipment, by outsiders who have learned of these shortages from soldiers and officers of the force.

Further, to my surprise, I was spoken to in Montreal this week, and informed that our medical units going over were only half equipped, while many of our combatant units are not properly outfitted.

In addition to the serious aspect of the case, and from the viewpoint of the efficiency of our soldiers, there is the disheartening side. It is not only unfair to the gallant boys, who are giving and willingly risking their lives for the cause, and making domestic sacrifices.

Therefore, as Minister of Militia, I must respectfully enter my protest, as I have frequently before entered it, at the interference and delays lays caused in all these things. It tends not only to the injury and inefficiency of our soldiers, thus jeopardizing the success of British arms, but it must politically reflect seriously upon the government.

It is charged that the sub-committee have given contracts for soldiers' clothing to be made by jobbers, who sublet them, and never entered a stitch themselves. Women's linen underwear, women's blouse makers, women's corset makers, have been among these contractors.

I regret to have to submit these facts once more, but in justice both to myself, as well as to the splendid gallant soldiers we are endeavouring to equip for the front, I must ask your serious consideration of these matters.

I have but one desire, the upbuilding of Canada, the Empire and humanity.

Let me hope that you will regard this letter as written with due respect to myself, to my country, to you as my leader, and in justice to our soldiers.

Faithfully,
SAM HUGHES.

This letter, one of many, as Sir Sam says, though from a friendly critic, is a scathing denunciation of only a part of the inefficiency and impotence of Sir Robert Borden's administration. It is, therefore, no wonder, that he tries to disclaim all responsibility in respect of his war leadership by posing as the "leader of no party."

He is still the leader of the Borden government, which is no less the Borden government because it masquerades under a new title.

Nor is Sir Sam Hughes' return to the fold without its significance. His coming back may inspire hopes of another come back, when, and if the Union government, by grace of the disfranchise act, is successful; when Sir Robert can say to the interloping Grits in his cabinet, "Gentlemen: the Union government has served its purpose—the country and the Borden government are saved—please say good bye; we shall return to the status quo ante." Is such a conclusion, under the circumstances, impossible, or even improbable?

The Globe was eloquent in condemnation of the new Dominion Franchise Act. It is not new; it's as old as sin, Satan and deception. It is crooked as hamstringing a horse to win a race.

THE VICTORY LOAN VICTORIOUS

Canada is a country well worth fighting for, even on the basis of dollars and cents, and her people think so, judging from the magnificent response to the appeal of the Victory Loan.

Though the exact figures are not at this moment available, there is no doubt that the Loan has been oversubscribed by more than two and a half times. The call was for 150 million dollarsh; the total subscribed amounts to the astonishing figures of 401 millions—equal to $54 for every man, woman and child in the Dominion.

The contribution of Peterborough is a splendid one—over a million and a half, $1,588,000, equal to $72 per head of our population. We have reason to be proud of Peterborough. If the whole of the Dominion had averaged as highly per head as Peterborough the Dominion total of the Victory Loan would have been 504 millions. Peterborough will be doing her duty to the cause and helping herself. Her investment in the Loan will bring interest returns — increase of the ready money circulation of the city—of $88,000 per year, and money will help beat Germany.

The outcome of the Loan shows that the people of the country have their hearts on winning this war—they are willing to bleed in the tenderest part, the pocket.

If we could get the same spirit in all our citizens — those eligible to fight—we should get on.

We have equipped the Government of the country with means to do one of the most important duties of the time. If the money is used wisely to inspire, to force, to compel greater production and systematic exploitation of our boundless productive resources, we shall be helping the war in a vital way.

However, the Government cry is all for men—subject to modification in providing votes for the Union Government—while the great need is for increased production, which the Government is entirely neglecting. The people are being stampeded with the cry for men—an urgent need, but not the only need.

We want all-round contributions to the war—men, food, and munitions. We must not be carried away with the idea that men are the only need. We need, men, we need food, we need munitions.

But above all we need honest Government administration. We have entrusted the Government with 400 million dollars to be used for war purposes. What guarantee have we that it will be well spent? Certainly not the Borden Government, which has made such a wasteful muddle of war administration. We have the Borden Government still with us—the same "outfit" with a new label.

We judge a man by the company he keeps. We judge a Government by its past record and the following it attracts—the "big interests," the food profiteers, and the plutocrats.

PURE PATRIOTISM.

We Canadians of British descent, and, especially, a class of loyalists that "methinks doth protest too much," are apt to arrogate exclusive credit for loyalty and self-sacrifice. It is,, however, not always of the unselfish kind. There is behind it some hope of material or party advantage.

But we have amongst us foreigners, as to origin, but all-British, and all true-blue as to their loyalty to their adopted country, and its cause.

At Saskatoon, the despatches tell us "the brethren of the Mennonite Church of the Warman district, made a gift of $150,000 to the government, instead of subscription of that amount to the Victory Loan. And what is more, the money was raised by a levy upon the members of the church. There does not seem to be any ulterior view of personal or party advantage—it was real conscription of wealth.

In Guelph, the Armenian residents had the Victory Loan explained to them—through an interpreter—and the interest-earning feature particularly emphasized. At this point the astonishing announcement was made that they wanted to lend their money to the government, but didn't want any interest! Commenting upon this, the Guelph Herald says:

> The William Davies Company heard the call of their country—it seems to have been very loud and very insistent in the year 1916. The call was for their plant and their ability to feed the army and to supply Britain with bacon. They listened, as did the Armenians, and they acted, and their response was that they would take 80 per cent. interest on their money.

There is a vast difference between patriotism that pays—to the country and the cause—and the patriotism that pays—the "patriot." We seem to have a surplus of spurious patriotism in this country; some play patriotism for personal profit; some — and the number is legion—play patriotism for party profit.

What guarantee have we that the Bodden government—elected under a new label, will not continue the delay, waste and jobbery of its previous existence so scathingly exposed by Sir Sam Hughes?

Editor of the Examiner

Sir,—I have been creditably informed that a report has been circulated to the effect that my son, Major Garnet Greer, has written to me from France advising me to vote and work against the Union Government in this election. I desire to state that there is absolutely no foundation for this rumour. I have received no such letter. On the contrary my son has written that reinforcements are urgently needed at the Front, and strongly favours Conscription as the best and fairest means of securing the necessary men.—Yours,

T. Newton Greer.

Editor of the Examiner,

Sir,—The address of Sir Robert Borden at the Armouries on Friday night was as eloquent in what he left unsaid as in what he said. The following are some of the statements he could have made truthfully and with great effect:

1. It was, of course, a regrettable circumstance that the Hon. Robert Rogers, whom I retained in my Cabinet for nearly six years in the face of the strongest public feeling, should have resigned in August of this year because of my "indecision and inaction."

2. You will pardon my neglecting to explain why the Hon. Mr. Rogers though discredited in Canada, was allowed to accompany me to England and represent Canada in the Imperial War Council.

3. Whether I like it or not, I am forced to submit to the measures introduced by the Hon. Sir Thomas White, because he represents the big interests of the Dominion which have kept me in power.

4. The Quebec and Saguenay and C.N.R. deals were hand-outs which I was forced to make to the hungry capitalists who have subscribed to my campaign funds.

5. I am aware that the Wartime Election Act has made our solemn contracts with our naturalised citizens.

6. It is perfectly clear that the thousands of women throughout Canada who have laboured so heroically for the Red Cross Society are entitled to vote at this election, but this has not been allowed because the Hon. Arthur Meighen was not sure how they would vote, and was afraid to trust them.

7. I am forced to admit that before the closing of the last Parliament I filled every vacant office with my supporters, but as you know, it is a rule that to the victor belong the spoils of office.

8. I must confess that in a joking way I promised to eliminate patronage after forming my present Government, and that since then I have given a number of fat jobs to my discarded Ministers and other loyal supporters.

9. It is unfortunate that public opinion should continue to demand the resignation of Sir Joseph Flavelle because it is to men like him that we have to depend for our campaign funds.

10. It is to be hoped that Sir Sam Hughes has regretted that he called the present Government a "National Trust Government," and declared that it was a splendid triumph for Sir Joseph Flavelle and Sir Thomas White.

11. The reason why the Labour party is not represented in the Union Government is because the capitalists simply would not stand for it. I am sorry to be forced to admit this.

12. I have forgiven The Globe for stating in an editorial on 23rd April of this year that "the spirit of Bordenism is the spirit of faction and disunion," and that "the leadership of Sir Robert Borden during the past two years has been lacking in the masculine qualities of statesmanship that are indispensable to the successful prosecuting of the war."

13. I am very sorry to be informed that at this large Union meeting the only Liberal-Unionist on the platform is my friend, Hon. N. W. Rowell.

The foregoing are but a few of the statements Sir Robert Borden might have made.—Yours truly, Junius.

Peterborough, Dec. 3, 1917.

Christmas Candies That Do Not Mean the Use of Sugar

From the Food Controller's Office

Christmas—the season of mirth and jollity with holly and evergreen in our homes, with a table that in its festive air bespeaks the season, with the happiness of youth even in homes that have known the ravages of war—how will it be this year?

A little less exuberance, holly and evergreens as before, a table with the lavishness of other years somewhat modified, but still the same joy abounding among the boys and girls in Canadian homes in city and country.

With the people of France, Italy, Belgium, and Serbia on rations, with the boys and girls in Great Britain knowing less and less of confectionery and more and more of plain and restricted diet, it is not likely that there will be such a lavish supply of sweetmeats in Canada this Christmas as in other years.

Does it mean that there will be no Christmas candy? May we not send any to the men at the Front? Must the boys and girls a home have a candyless Christmas? We are asked only to use a little ingenuity in the combination of fruits and nuts, and of sweetmeats made from honey, molasses, maple sugar, and raisins. We can eat all the candies we want with a clear conscience if we eat those made from other things than cane or beet sugar. Chocolate is quite permissible, and the varieties of candies which can be made, without the use of cane or beet sugar, are numerous.

Human beings need sweets. Candies are wholesome when eaten in moderation. There is a movement on foot in the United States to display in the shops only such varieties of candies as are made entirely or largely from other ingredients than cane or beet sugar. People who are unpatriotic enough to want the latter may have them by asking for them; but it is anticipated that the demand for those varieties will be greatly reduced.

There never were any confections half as delicious or half as wholesome as those made in the home kitchen. They are simple and nourishing. They satisfy the child's normal craving for sweetmeats without creating a false taste. It should be a pleasant occupation for housewives to devise new and pretty Christmas bonbons for their boys and girls. They can picture some of the following at the children's party or on the dinner table—dates split open, pitted and a little marshmallow icing placed within, and bright red cherries on top; others filled with cherries or nuts or with marshmallow and nuts. Figs form the basis for another confection when sliced and topped with marshmallows and raisins. Other fig slices might have maple sugar and nuts on top, while maple sugar bonbons could be nicely finished off with raisins.

A pretty idea for anyone wanting a particularly decorative effect is that of a light yellow basket, with a bow of fluffy gauze ribbon on the handle, and in the basket rows of prunes from which the pitts have been removed and the openings filled with whipped cream piled high. The finishing touch is given when chopped green pistachio nuts are sprinkled over the cream.

The following are some tried and proved candy recipes which every housekeeper may be assured are nourishing, and are proper wartime confections:

Popcorn Candy.—For making popcorn candy, either honey, maple syrup, molasses, white cane syrup, or corn syrup may be used instead of sugar. To one cup of syrup allow one tablespoon of vinegar. Boil together until syrup hardens when dropped in cold water. Pour over freshly popped corn and mould into balls or fancy shapes for the Christmas tree. Little popcorn men will please the children. Mark in the features and outlines with melted chocolate.

Crystallised Fruits.—Use your own preserves. Peach, pear, apple, quince or watermelon rind will do. Drain from the fruit all syrup possible. Cut any size desired, sprinkle with sugar, and dry in the warmer or a very slow oven. It may be necessary to sprinkle the fruit again with sugar during the drying. When dry enough not to be at all sticky, sprinkle with sugar and pack in layers with wax paper between. This fruit may be used for dipping in bitter chocolate for bitter-sweets.

Bitter-Sweets.—An attractive variety of candies may be made by dipping sweet fruits in bitter chocolate. Use for this purpose dates, citron, candied orange peel or crystallised fruit. Melt unsweetened chocolate in a double boiler. Keep the chocolate just warm enough to prevent solidifying. With a silver fork drop pieces of fruit in chocolate. See that each piece is completely coated, then remove to waxed paper to harden.

Fruit Paste.—Put through the meat chopper enough cherry, peach or quince preserves to make a half-pint with the juice. Heat fruit and add two tablespoons of gelatine, previously softened in a very little cold water. Stir well, and continue stirring until it begins to cool and thicken, then pour into oiled dish to make a layer one inch thick. Let dry slowly, sprinkle with sugar and place in box with waxed paper between the layers. A mixture of dried apricots and dates may be used for this paste. Wash apricots and soak overnight in enough water to cover. Pour off the water, bring it to a boil, pour over apricots, and let stand until cool. Put apricots and dates through the meat chopper, and proceed with the proportions as given.

Chocolate Dainties.—Put through the meat chopper one-half cup each of dates, figs and nut meats. Add one tablespoon orange juice, a little grated orange peel and one square of melted unsweetened chocolate. Mould into balls and roll in chopped nuts or granulated sugar. This mixture may be packed in an oiled tin, put under a weight until firm, then cut in any shape desired.

Maple Creams.—Boil one cup maple sugar with one cup cold water until it forms a soft ball when dropped in cold water. Remove from the fire and stir rapidly until it becomes creamy. Form into balls the size of marbles and put nut meats on either side. Lay on wax paper to cool.

IT'S AN ILL WIND.

When It Comes Out of the East It Bears an Evil Repute.

No one has a good word for the east wind. In whatever part of the world it blows it is of ill repute, and this evil name began in old times.

At least one of the plagues of Egypt came on the wings of the east wind. "The Lord brought an east wind upon the land • • • and when it was morning the east wind brought the locusts." "Thou, Lord, breakest the ships of Tarshish with an east wind," cries the psalmist. "I will scatter them as with an east wind before the enemy" was the word concerning Judah that came to Jeremiah from the Lord. "Thus saith the Lord God" of Jerusalem, according to Ezekiel, "Shall it not utterly wither when the east wind toucheth it?" "And the east wind dried up her fruit," says the same authority, speaking again of Jerusalem.

Thus the stigma has come down the centuries. "Wind of the clinging mists and gray, harsh rains," a modern poet calls it.

Good old Isaak Walton knew its malefic influence when he wished, for the honest angler, that the east wind might never blow when he went fishing.

Hot Applications.

As a substitute for hot water bags in ordinary ailments, such as toothache, earache and other minor pains, use common flannel bags made in convenient sizes, with drawstrings. Fill them with hot sand or salt and they are safer than a cheap rubber bottle, just as efficacious and much handier to use. Keep half a dozen ready. They are of great help in time of aches and pains.

RATS ARE DESTRUCTIVE.

Destroy Property Valued at $200,000,000 Per Year.

At a time when every grain of wheat and every pound of meat is expected to play as important a role in the winning of the war as a grain of gunpowder, or a pound of steel when converted into cannon or shot, Dr. Edward W. Nelson, the noted biologist, points out, that rats are destroying more than $200,000,000 worth of foodstuffs and other property on this continent every twelve months, and that it requires the constant labor of 150,000 men to supply the food which these loathsome pests eat. A part of Dr. Nelson's communication follows:

Rats have been pests so long that they have been taken for granted by the public much as is the weather or the forces of nature. While people are often painfully aware of individual losses, they are unaware of the vast total which these individual sums aggregate and the consequent need of community action against the authors of such far-reaching economic drains.

Denmark estimated her losses in 1907 at about $2,000,000. The same year the losses in the rural districts of Great Britain and Ireland, not counting those in towns and on ships, were estimated at $73,000,000, and a capital of about $10,000,000 was profitably employed there in the industry of supplying means for their destruction. In 1904 the losses in France were computed at $40,000,000.

North America has eighteen times the combined area of the three countries mentioned, and investigations indicate that the direct annual losses here undoubtedly equal, if they do not exceed, $200,000,000, with a great additional sum in indirect losses, including the effect on the public health and commerce from the diseases carried by rats, and the necessary expenditures in combating them. The foregoing figures are based on pre-war prices and are vastly greater under present valuations.

In Europe, about 1907, after careful investigation, the estimated average annual loss caused by each rat was computed to equal $1.80 in Great Britain, $1.20 in Denmark, and $1 in France. On this continent the average is undoubtedly much larger than in any of the countries named, especially at present high prices of food and other merchandise.

There is no doubt that a very large number of rats subsist wholly on garbage and waste which is of no value, but the damage caused by rats in numerous places amounts to many dollars each year; probably $5 a year would not be an overestimate for the average loss caused by each rat living in a dwelling, hotel, restaurant, or other place having ready access to food supplies.

Assuming, roughly speaking, that as estimated, the rat population on this continent is 50,000,000 for the cities and 150,000,000 for the rural districts, it will require the destruction of property by each rat of only a little more than one-fourth of a cent a day to make the aggregate of the great sum estimated as destroyed by these pests yearly in this country.

Taking the average yearly returns on a man's labor in agriculture, as shown by the census of 1910, it requires the continuous work of about 150,000 men, with farms, agricultural implements, and other equipment to supply the foodstuffs destroyed annually by rats in America. In addition, rats destroy other property, mainly of agricultural origin, the production of which requires the work of about 50,000 men.

A Great Cartoonist.

The John Leech centenary has brought up a good many stories of the friendship which existed between Leech and Dean Hole. Hole often inspired Leech with sketches, and it was always amazing to Hole how humble a spirit the great caricaturist would show in accepting his suggestions. "Sometimes," says Hole in his "Memories," "he would ask, with the meekest diffidence, if he were told an anecdote worthy of illustration, 'may I use that?' as though you were conferring a priceless obligation, instead of receiving a privilege in playing jackal to such a lion." It was Hole who inspired the sketch which related how "the coachman unaccustomed to act as waiter, watched with agony of mind the jelly which he bore, swaying to and fro, and set it down on the table, with a gentle remonstrance of 'Who-o, who-o, who-o,' as though it were some restive horse." Leech had one failure in his representations of current events; it occurred during an Irish tour. While in Cork harbor he met with a most offensive smell, and, thinking it "quite strong enough to sketch," he pulled out his book to get it down, but failed, though perfect success had attended his record of a sneeze made previously.

Training Children.

Do these things for your children, says Leo Tolstoy, if you would properly train them:

Let them do all they can for themselves—carry their own jugs, wash up, arrange their own rooms, clean their boots and clothes, lay the table. Believe me, that unimportant as these things may seem, they are a hundred times more important for your children's happiness than a knowledge of French or of history.

These things train the children to simplicity, to work and to self independence.

If you can add work on the land, if it be but a kitchen garden, that will be well.

Believe me, that without that condition there is no possibility of a moral education, a Christian education or a consciousness of the fact that men are not naturally divided into the classes of masters and slaves, but that they are all brothers and equals.

Sem's Entrance Into Verdun

A CHOICE bit of "Up Pekin sure le Front" (and, this time, in a humorous vein) is the chapter describing the entry of Sem, Parisian cartoonist beloved by the French, into Verdun:

"It is morning and it rains.

"A formidable, uninterrupted rumbling keeps the air vibrating and the rain trembling.

"Over yonder, just beyond this tragically desolate open space, is Verdun.

"'Look out!' says Captain —— to me, 'we are going to cross a dangerous spot.'

"Ah! Ah! I shrink up into the corner of the auto. I roll myself into a ball.

"I make sure of my helmet, entering it as far as I can, pulling it down with both hands, as if I wanted to get my whole self into it. Et allez donc. The chauffeur, a bit pale, makes the motor do its best, the auto plunges into the danger zone and is engulfed in one of the monumental gates that pierce the venerable ramparts of Vauban. Ca y est! I am in Verdun!

"We drive on toward the citadel on the other side of the city, where we are expected.

"At last, we are confronted with lofty, sodded glacis, a sort of geometrically-ribbed hill, at the foot of which opens an arched portal, black as the entrance of a tunnel, whose depths appear to be punctured with tiny bright lights. Soldiers are grouped before it; two sentinels, with bayonets set, mount guard. It is the citadel.

"The auto stops. At the precise instant I step out, our arrival is saluted by four terrible explosions—four German shells that fall I know not where. Surely, not so very far away. As to that, for every self-respecting war correspondent, every shell falls at a distance of from thirty to fifty yards—never more.

"There are something like a hundred paces between me and the citadel entrance, a hundred exposed paces. I do not hesitate. I take my fear in both hands, I make a wild dash, and I throw myself, completely winded, under the protecting porch.

"Ouf! None too soon! A second flight of mitraille bursts with a crash as before, near the auto. I am seized with a little nervous panting, relieved laugh, like the people who, surprised by a shower, take refuge after a flurried flight under a porte cochere.

"All the same, I am a bit ashamed of my precipitation. In the presence of these impassive soldiers, who are eyeing me, I feel myself grow bright red under my horizon-blue helmet. There is no mistake about it, I lacked nerve, my entry is a flat failure. I should have arrived smiling, with the easy step of a man taking a constitutional. I endeavor to save my face, to create a diversion. I try to attribute my short panic to the alluvial rain. I snort with affectation. I brush the drops from my coat, I shake myself like a wet dog. Brrr! And I risk a flippant, 'Good heavens, what a shower!'

"'Monsieur should have taken his rifiaud!' breathes behind me a bantering voice. I do not insist and I plunge into the darkness of the long tunnel. . . .

"I am unutterably relieved, unspeakably tranquil under the thick layer of rocks and earth interposed between my head and the redoubtable sky which my imagination pictures to me sebraed with obuses.

"After the frightful uproar outside I appreciate deeply this peaceful silence. I even allow myself to forget deliciously the great drama that is being played up above.

"But the general calls me back to reality: 'Messieurs, we lunch at noon. We have just time to go to the fort of X——, where you will have a birdseye view of the battlefield.'

"Humph! we were so comfortable here. I have, I admit it, a slight inner hesitation. Is it altogether indispensable to view this battlefield? For that matter, it appears that one sees very little. To begin with, it rains. And then, this subterranean city is so novel, so interesting. How agreeable I find this citadel!

"'Aren't you ashamed, espece de pekin! Allons, ouste! Into the auto with you!'

"Daylight again, under a shower, in the tumult of the cannon. We cross full tilt the deserted country. At last, on an elevation, the fort. The autos stop. We climb the slope. We enter. Under the sonorous postern, a sound of musket butts, an energetic command: 'Present arms!' The post salutes.

"Just behind the general, between the lines of motionless fixed-eyed soldiers, I advance, convinced of my importance, taking to myself a part of the salute—my hand at the rim of my helmet, in the most approved military fashion.'

"Barely past, I look back, just in time to see a sturdy 'poilu' fairly convulsed with hilarity.

"But what is he laughing at? Can it be at me perchance?

"I begin to distrust my helmet.

"We rest only an instant at the fort.

"After a rather long course across country, we reach a sort of eminence that dominates the entire region. There, the general stops, and, suddenly growing grave, he points to the panorama spread out before us, and says: 'The battlefield of Verdun!'

"I shiver. Instinctively, I uncover, as in a church."

Nothing surprises some men like their own success.

METAL FILLINGS IN TEETH.

The Use of Different Materials Does Not Cause Electrolysis.

Among dentists there is a difference of opinion as to whether the filling of two cavities in one tooth with different metals—one with mercury amalgam, one with gold, for instance—will cause rapid decay of the tooth through electrolytic action between the two metals.

The matter was submitted to the editor of the Electrical Review, who replies that if the amalgam is thoroughly mixed there is no danger of electrolysis, but that if the mercury be not properly incorporated in the mass chemical action is quite likely to follow. He says that he and a dentist experimented with voltaic piles made of gold and amalgam, with blotters wet with sodium chloride and later with acetic acid, and when the amalgam had been properly mixed they were unable to measure any electrolytic action.

When decay does follow in such cases, he says, it is due not to electrolytic but to chemical action. This causes disintegration of the filling, and, of course, as soon as this has begun the acids of the mouth and the juices of the food can penetrate to the unprotected surface of the cavity and start further decay. And this takes place irrespective of whether or not gold has been used near by.

A Real Experience.

"Yes," said a traveling man, "I was once out of sight of land on the Atlantic ocean twenty-one days."

Another man spoke up: "On the Pacific ocean one time I didn't see land for twenty-nine days."

A bald man knocked the ashes from his cigar and contributed his bit:

"I started across the Kaw river at Tokepa in a skiff once," he said, "and was out of sight of land before I reached the other side."

"What!" demanded the man who had spun the first yarn. "The Kaw is not more than 300 feet wide at Topeka."

"Quite true," said the bald man quietly. "The skiff turned over, and I sank twice."

WOMEN TO ORGANIZE FOR Mr. HALL

A MEETING of all Women who are interested in the Election of Mr. R. R. HALL to Represent West Peterboro will be held in

Conservatory of Music Hall
RUBIDGE STREET, on Wednesday Ev'g
Dec. 5th at 8 o'clock.
To Organize to Canvass Women Voters who are entitled to Vote and to give assistance in Polling THEIR VOTES on Election Day.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

"Hello, Central!"

Have You Seen the Telephone Exhibit in Richard Hall & Son's Window

An old farmer couldn't really believe that people who were miles apart were able to converse over a telephone wire. One day his wife went to a distant friend who had a telephone in her house. During the afternoon the farmer sought shelter from a thunderstorm in the house of a neighbour, who also possessed a telephone, and who persuaded the farmer to call up his wife as a little surprise. Following instructions, the farmer put the receiver to his ear and, after the usual preliminaries, shouted:

"Hallos, Jane"

Just then a flash of lightning struck the wire and he fell to the floor under the force of the shock. Rising to his feet and shaking his head wisely, he said:

"It's wonderful! That was Jane right enough."

But the Bell Telephone has accomplished much more wonderful and startling things than this—judging by the inspiring object lesson in the large show window of the Richard Hall & Son store, George street. Here are exhibited in a clever and educative manner a series of the principal links that connect the old and original Bell telephone of forty-three years ago with the perfected telephone of to-day. The story of the Bell Telephone could not be told better, or its progress more lucidly demonstrated than by this interesting exhibit. With pictured photographs and telephone instruments and apparatus, the various stages of development are portrayed. Among the leading features of the exhibit are to be seen a half-tone photo of Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone; the Bell homestead at Brantford, where early experiences with the telephone were carried on; Thomas A. Watson, who, as a young man, built the first telephone for Mr. Bell; early types of switch-boards, when boy operators were used; the first telephone in use by Mr. Bell; some early types of telephone apparatus; training school for telephone operators, showing girls at practice on the switchboard; scene at Ritz-Castleton Hotel, Montreal, talking by telephone to Vancouver and San Francisco, the Memorial recently unveiled at Brantford, in honour of Dr. Bell's achievement in inventing the telephone.

The interest in these details are heightened and amplified by an appropriate display in the same window of female attire of forty-three years ago, and depicting the inflated fashion for long, wide skirts and dresses, and other dress accessories of 1874, as compared with the narrow and abbreviated skirts of to-day.

Five Mills On Next Year's Taxes For Patriotic Fund A Burden Says Labour Men

Ask Council to Use Influence to Have Fund Assumed by the Government—Otherwise Favour General Subscription on Debenture Issue For Required Amount

PROBLEN DISCUSSED

Anticipating the provision of at least $60,000.00 for the Patriotic Fund requirements in 1918, a numerous delegation from the Trades and Labour Council acquainted the City Council last night of their objections to the proposal that the money be raised entirely in next year's taxes. Mr. J. J. Hartley, President of the Trades and Labour Council, supported by other members, declared that an addition of five or six mills on the tax rate would impose a serious burden on property owners and tenants, and would raise the rate to a figure that would not only curtail the building of residences in Peterborough, but might also deter manufacturers from locating here. Although the Council had already announced its intention of transferring this knotty problem to the new year, Mayor Duffus proceeded with its discussion.

Mr. Hartley stated that the Trades and Labour Council had read of the likelihood of the city raising the $60,000 from next year, and regarded the proposal with grave misgivings. He was not finding fault with the taxes, but he believed the plan suggested would be unwise. It would place a burden on property owners and tenants too, for rents, already low, would have to be raised.

Mr. C. E. Adams said he felt that the Patriotic Fund should be taken over by the Government which should pay the dependents of soldiers twice a month, instead of monthly.

Mr. James Dillon stated that the Trades and Labour Council would appreciate any action the City Council might take to urge the Government to assume full responsibility for the Fund. The Government could abolish it and increase the separation allowances, grading them to allow soldiers' dependents at least as much money as they are receiving from their present separation allowances, augmented by the Patriotic Fund assistance. This plan would consolidate the two reliefs and would remove any suggestion of charity, which more or less surrounded the Patriotic Fund's operations.

ECONOMY OF THE FUND.

Replying to the deputation, whom Mayor Duffus cordially welcomed, he stated that Peterborough would probably benefit financially if the Government assumed the Patriotic Fund. It has been costing the County four or more mills on its assessment, including the city, whereas other communities, evading their share of this patriotic duty, were escaping with only one or one and a half mills.

"I've been opposed to putting this on the taxes because I believe it impedes the general progress of the city. By issuing debentures it costs us about twice as much as we actually raise."

Mayor Duffus said he favoured a general subscription throughout the city to collect the amount needed for next year, but the question had been left for the new Council to decide.

ALD. DOBBIN.

"It was felt unwise to load up the Government with the extra cost and expenditure that is represented by the Patriotic Fund," Ald. Dobbin said. He had proposed that a canvass of the citizens be taken, and if the amount received by this means proved insufficient for the assistance of the dependents of Peterborough soldiers, then the Council could supplement the total contribution up to the amount required. The operation of the Patriotic Fund had brought out the fact that its administration was costing only 1 1-2 per cent. Ald. Dobbin believed that if an effort were made to determine what each person or home in the city should voluntarily subscribe to the Fund, it might be successfully collected in that way next year.

FAVOURED FIVE MILLS.

Ald. Langford added a welcome to the Trades and Labour Council's representatives.

"I don't agree with the collection of the Patriotic Fund by subscription for the reason that many persons who could give, refuse to do so. It may be true that the wealthier people do not pay as much under the scheme of taxation as by the voluntary method, but they make up whatever the proportional deficiency may be by their contributions to the Red Cross and other Patriotic Funds." Ald. Langford did not favour the plan of borrowing the money by selling debentures, but believed the city should endeavour to meet its war burdens from year to year, instead of allowing the debt to pile up.

"Pay as we go" was his war-time motto, and he believed Peterborough should pay as much as it could now, because it has the money.

GOVERNMENT SHOULD TAKE IT

Ald. Stratton agreed with the deputation that the raising of the fund by taxation was not the proper method. He felt that the Government should look after it, but if that plan was not accessible for 1918 he preferred the extension of the burden by the issuing of debentures."

"I have always been in favour of the collection by the Government," Ald. Duncan stated, but as a temporary alternative he believed it might be satisfactory to take up subscriptions and secure the remainder by taxation.

Ald. Weir favoured the assumption of the Patriotic Fund by the Government, but he expected that the people would have to continue to provide the money, themselves. With that prospect he considered the debenture method preferable to the others suggested.

ONLY COST $5.00 PER $1,000.

Ald. Worth approved of the plan of raising the $60,000.00 in one year by taxation. It would be at the rate of only $5 per $1000 of assessment, or as Ald. Dobbin had it estimated, ten cents a week. Ald. Worth emphasized the likelihood of the sacrifice of economy if the Fund were administered by the Government. The Canadian Patriotic Fund Association does not make allowances in many cases of families that have private means and consequently do not need the assistance of this Citizens' Fund. If the Government assumed the Fund, allowances would be paid to the families of all the soldiers without consideration of home conditions. Hence it would likely prove more costly than the present system.

Ald. McIntyre emphasized the desirability of the Government taking over the Patriotic Fund, but until that was done he favoured the issuance of debentures for the amount required.

"We can't make the Government raise it," said Ald. Smith, and from the reports last year it was unlikely that it would take over the Fund in 1918. The problem before the Council was clear. The money needed for next year's patriotic allowances here would doubtless have to be raised by taxation, either in one year or by debentures extended over ten or twenty years. Ald. Smith stated that if the money were partly raised by subscription it would follow that these subscribers would have to pay the individual tax levy; besides most people Fund, and the subscriptions would in all probability be disappointingly small.

Ald. Saunders—"I'm not in favour of the debenture issue at all. We should try to raise the money by taxation, in one year."

Ald. Taylor—"I would like to keep would let the city as a whole raise the it off the taxes altogether, and believe we should try to raise the money by taking up public subscriptions. If a good campaign were organized we can get the money in that way.

WAGES HIGH, SO IS H. C. L.

Speaking a second time, Mr. Hartley pointed out that while wages were higher than they were a few years ago, it costs three times as much to live. Citizens who were paying for their homes found it "hard scratching" to pay their taxes, and to them $5.00 extra on $1,000 of assessment would be a burden. "I think the people should insist that the Government take over the Patriotic Fund," he said. "It occurs to me that spreading the payment over ten years or more would be easier for those who find it hard to pay their usual taxes. The Trades and Labour Council are anxious to protect those people who can not help themselves."

With this general exchange of opinions and desires the discussion was adjourned until the new Council wrestles with it.

LAST REGULAR MEETING OF THE COUNCIL PASSED MIDNIGHT HOUR

There were no empty seats in the aldermanic circle at the last regular meeting of the Council, last night. From 8 o'clock until 12.30 a.m. they pondered through a sheaf of communications, by-laws and routine business, and lead a deputation from the Trades and Labour Council through a discursive and apparently futile discussion of the method to be followed in collecting the Patriotic Fund for 1918. Four hours and one-half of mental activity developed an appetite that was quieted by a luncheon at the Boston Cafe.

STREET RAILWAY EXTENSION

A communication from the Hydro-Electric Power Commission explained that the ties ordered for the extension of the street railway on Monaghan Road were too short and had to be rejected. The Commission requested the Council to approve of the necessary delay until Spring.

Mr. George Sadler requested that a light be placed on Wolfe street, west of Park.

T. B. McGrath, junior, said he was assessed as a house holder at 112 Aylmer street, on which he paid taxes; he was also assessed on income with only a $600 exemption which he believed should be $1,200, and also paid $5 poll tax.

He asked for a just consideration of his taxes.

CITIZENS MAY KEEP PIGS.

Ald. Dobbin sugested the relaxation of the sanitary by-law to permit any householder to keep a pig under certain conditions of locality.

Ald. Duncan informed him that the Medical Officer of Health has that authority and has already allowed several citizens to keep a pig, one on each property. If Dr. Ames should refuse an appeal may be carried to the Board of Health.

To Ward Off Winter Complexion Ills

To keep the face smooth, white and beautiful all winter, there's nothing quite so good as ordinary mercolized wax. Rough, chapped or discolored skin, inevitable in this weather, is gently absorbed by the wax and replaced by the newer, fresher skin beneath. The face exhibits no trace of the wax, the latter being applied at bedtime and washed off mornings. Creams, powders and rouges, on the other hand, are apt to appear conspicuous at this season, because of alternating expansion and contraction of the skin, due to changing temperatures. You are advised to try this simple treatment. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any drugstore and use like cold cream. This will help any skin at once, and in a week or so the complexion will look remarkably youthful and healthy.

Winds and flying dust often cause squinting and other contortions which make wrinkles. You can quickly get rid of every wrinkle, however produced, by using a harmless face bath made by dissolving one ounce powdered saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel.

"LAUGHTER" THE SUBJECT OF INTERESTING LECTURE

The last of the Mark Street Methodist Church Anniversary services, held last night, was attended by an unusually large number and a splendid and interesting programme was presented. A feature of the evening was an address by Rev. Mr. Mitchell, who spoke on "Laughter and its Significance". A striking tribute of the lasting affection of Mr. Mitchell's former congregation was the large number from St. Andrew's, who attended both on Sunday and last night.

MR. MITCHELL'S ADDRESS

"Laughter," Mr. Mitchell said, was said by Plato to be an insoluable mystery." Man has been variously defined as a follower of ideals, a tool user and as a laughing animal. The last seems to be the more definite definition, as man is the only laughing animal." Laughter has its significance first, over the soul, telling, as it does, something of the quality of the soul. There is the laugh of the synic, demonic laughter. By a man's laugh we determine the quality of his soul. Secondly, laughter has a significance for bodily health and is an expression of health. Aristotle tells us laughter is an expression of perfect living, it is an expression not only of health, but a condition of health, and has been known in many cases to effect marvellous cures to sickness.

Thirdly, laughter has its significance for a man's vocation. When a man laughs he will find many things one being success, the heights of which have been obtained by a sunny smile.

Laughter, lastly, has its significance in the spreading of the kingdom, and gladness is a condition of the progress of the kingdom. We have too much sadness these days where we should have more laughter. The Bible teaches us that "there is a time to laugh" and there is much to justify laughter. A striking example of this is the fact that we do not depend upon what we have, but what we owe, to be happy. No man can be made miserable without his own consent. We need happiness because the world needs it as it never needed it before. In these days we meet too many who have forgotten how to laugh.

Mr. Mitchell concluded by saying we cannot laugh the heart's laugh unless we are right with ourselves and God, and a soul is an exile until it has found peace with God.

VOTE OF THANKS.

Rev. Mr. Whattam, Pastor of Mark Street Church, moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Mitchell for his address and hoped to have him at Mark Street again before long.

SCENE FROM "LILAC TIME," A TIMELY COMEDY DRAMA OF TO-DAY.

One of the very best casts of players that will visit Peterborough on Friday and Saturday next, this season, will be found with the "Lilac Time" Company that plays here at "The Grand.". In the Company are such well known people of the stage as Adelaide French, who will be remembered for her excellent work as the star of Madame X, which play she headed for two seasons. Miss French finds a better part in "Lilac Times" than anything she has ever attempted; there is Alpheus Lincoln, the late leading man of "War Brides"—Charles Henderson, the original "Nobody" of Henry Savages "Everywoman," and several seasons with the Cohan & Harris; Gustave Rolland, last season of the Blanch Bates Company, and late director of the French Theatre, New York, and many others. In all, a strong company of some twenty players, go to make up an attraction that will prove to be the theatrical event of the season here.

The sale of seats at the box office opens to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Council Passed City's Accounts In Finance Report

The following report of the Finance committee was passed at the Council meeting last night:

That steps be taken to have an application made to the Legislature to amend the Hospitals Act so that a period of residence of two years in a municipality will be required to make the municipality responsible for the maintenance of indigent patients in hospitals.

That the Clerk write to St. John's Industrial school with reference to an account received from the school for $42.86 and inform them that this committee is advised that the city is not liable for the account.

That this Council instruct the City Solicitor to inform the County Judge when the appeal of the Quaker Oats Company comes before him on their application for a remission of taxes for 1917 on account of the destruction of their buildings by fire, that this Council is willing to make a remission of taxes on an assessment of $240,000 for garbage rates, patriotic rates and Provincial war taxes.

That the feet of $40.00 be paid to the local selectors of jurors in accordance with the certificates of the Clerk of the Peace.

That the City Treasurer be authorized to pay accounts up to the end of the year on the order of this committee upon the accounts being certified by the chairman of the respective committees to which they relate.

That the following accounts be paid: B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co., $12.00; George Ball, $95.00; Can. Pac. Rly. Co.'s Telegraph, 26c.; Fitzgerald & Company, $12.00; G.N.W. DONATION IS APPRECIATED BY WAR VETERANS

When Messrs. Yeates Brothers opened their bowling alley last week, they donated the proceeds of the first night to the Great War Veterans' Association. The opening did not take place until late in the evening, but the neat sum of $10.35 was realized.

The firm has received the following letter of thanks:

Gentlemen,—I have to acknowledge receipt of your cheque for $10.35.

The Veterans desire to express our keen appreciation of your kindness and thoughtfulness on their behalf. We purpose placing this amount to give the children of returned soldiers some little present during the coming Christmas.

Again thanking you for your kindness, I remain, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

Sidney Whatley,
Secretary G.W.V.A.

Nordheimer And Steinway Pianos

Player Pianos and the Aeolian Vocalion—Ably Represented by Mr. Frank Whitehouse

Music in the home has come to be a requisite of first importance to the cultured and refined, and equally so to the modest home of small beginnings. It is the magnet which attracts son and daughter to the fireside, and the charm makes home a haven to the tired mind and body. After the day's toil and commercial strife. Musicless homes, according to the result of investigation, are in the majority of circumstances, those forgotten by the son and daughter after a few years in the business world.

When Mr. Frank Whitehouse was established in this city as representative for the Nordheimer and Steinway pianos, some few years ago, he also secured for his musical warerooms the sole district agency for that wonderful phonograph, the Aeolian Vocalion, Player Pianos, etc.

Evidence of the growth of Mr. Whitehouse's business has not been wanting. The high-grade instruments, for which he has been given the exclusive control in this district, have all proven to be popular sellers. The Nordheimer and the Steinway pianos are known to be pianos of distinction. Each occupy a sphere of its own away from the average. Much has also been said about the wonderful Aeolian-Vocalion. When the Graduola is played with this phonograph you realize that it is in a class by itself, and that this delightful invention lends to the Vocalion a unique charm which no other phonograph possesses.

Any of these instruments would make superb Christmas gifts. Which for you, dear reader? Which would you rather have? Freedom in picking and choosing your favourite is yours to enjoy.

Mr. Whitehouse's unique music warerooms have recently undergone important improvements. The interior has been treated to new decorations in a pleasing blue effect, harmonising well with the white enamelled woodwork. Other pleasing features, such as portable lamps with silk shades, etc., contribute to making a visit to these music rooms a real pleasure.

How A Peterboro' Soldier Died

Late Pte. E. C. King Was Severely Wounded in Several Places

Mrs. H. H. King, wife of the late Private E. C. King, of the 93rd Battalion, has received the following letter from the Red Cross authorities concerning the death of her husband. The letter reads as follows:

No. 3 Australian C.C.S.,
B.E.F.,
France, 31-10-1917.

Mrs. H. H. King,
312 Townsend Street.

Dear Madam,

I am writing to tell you about your husband, Pte. E. C. King, No. 95718. He was brought into this hospital yesterday at 11 a.m., very collapsed and suffering from severe penetrating wound of the back into his abdomen, his bowel being very severely injured in several places, also another wound in the right thigh. His condition was very low from shock and loss of blood, and in spite of everything that was done to revive him he did not rally at all, and died last night at 8 o'clock. I told him when he was first admitted not to worry, that I would write and tell you that he was wounded. So he was quite relieved and glad to think that you would all know about him, and sent his love to everyone, but had no idea at all that he was dying. I am afraid it is not very much to tell you, but it might be some comfort to you to know that he was in hospital where he had every possible care and attention, and was relieved of all his pain. He was buried to-day in a military cemetery at "Nine Elms," near Poperinghe, and if there is anything further with regard to the grave that you wish to know, you can write to the officer in charge, G.R.W., War Office. This unit is in charge of all soldiers' graves in France. All his small personal belongings will be eventually sent on to you as his next-of-kin.

I remain,

Yours faithfully,

Ida O'Dwyer, Sister-in-Charge.

Major Davidson Writes From Battle Front

Tells of Meeting Peterboro' People Who Send Messages Home

Belgium, Nov. 9, 1917.

Here I am, having an experience at the Front, or near it, rather, before leaving France. I have been at and beyond Ypres two days. Such sights and sounds and scenes—unspeakable. My heart and head are full to bursting.

I met all sorts of people in odd situations: Lt. Weeks of the 75th, on the road beyond Ypres, son of C. E. Weeks, of Lindsay, a boyhood friend; Nursing Sister Bennett of Vancouver, and formerly of Peterborough, (Ashburnham); when passing through a town, yesterday; Pte. Tilcock of Peterborough, son of Mrs. Tilcock, 150 Water street; Sergt. F. Kelsey of 1 Canadian Tunnelling Company, late 21st Battalion of Peterborough; he worked in the C.G.E. I threw up my hands in front of a lorry to get a ride, and was surprised to be greeted by name, by Kelsey, formerly of the 57th Regiment. Capt. Bagshaw is the Dentist of this Hospital and I see him daily. He has ten men under him. Miss Mowry was at this Hospital, but left two weeks ago for her own unit, No. 7. Had lunch with our Chief Chaplain at Canadian Headquarters. He took me around two days, and met a master from T. C. S., Port Hope there and so on. Cannot write more. All the above people were "in the pink" (of health) as they say out here. Let their friends know. They all send messages. In haste.

J. C. DAVIDSON.

NEW TANK.

British Engineers Now Perfecting a New Machine.

New York, December 1. — The British army engineers are now perfecting a new type of tank, which will radically alter the prevailing situation in 1918, according to an announcement made by Captain Richard Haigh, of the British Army, at the Hero Land Bazaar at the Grand Central Palace. He said:

"Expecting that the war will last another five years at least, the British are now perfecting a new style of tank which, when produced, next year, will create a marked change in whatever situation may then be existing. The enemy can never stop our honoured British tank."

57th REGIMENT AFTER & 93rd BAND INSTRUMENTS

Lieut.-Col. Mills Discusses Matter With the Great War Veterans—Latter, However, of the Opinion That G. W. V. A. Should Have a Band and Should Be Given Possession of the Instruments.

At the regular semi-monthly meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association, held last evening in the recreation room of the Armouries, Lieut.-Col. Jos. Mills, Officer Commanding the 57th Regiment, waited upon the Veterans in regard to the band instruments formerly used by the 93rd Band, and now in the custody of the city.

Lieut.-Col. Mills explained that he was making application to the City Council that the 93rd instruments be turned over to the band of the 57th. He pointed out that the latter was sadly in need of new instruments and as the Regiment had no funds available, it was impossible at the present time to purchase them. There had been some talk of a Veterans' Band, he understood, but he thought that probably the Veterans had not considered the difficulties in connection with a band. He could promise that if the instruments were placed at the disposal of the 57th Regiment the Veterans could count upon having the services of the 57th Band whenever they were needed. Accordingly he asked the G. W. V. A. not to oppose the request from the 57th Regiment to the Council.

Col. Mills also said that if possible he proposed to re-organize the 57th Regiment in the Spring, and in this connection he would appreciate the assistance of the Veterans.

The matter was discussed by the Veterans later on in the evening, and it was the unanimous opinion of those who took part in the discussion that a Veterans' Band should be organized if at all possible and the 93rd instruments secured. It was the feeling of the members that the Veterans were entitled to the instruments if any body in the city was, and a motion that the matter be left in the hands of the Executive Committee and the bandsmen among the members, was carried.

SIX NEW MEMBERS.

Six new members were added to the strength of the Association. The newcomers included Capt. Morrison, formerly of the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion; Sergt. Stevens, formerly of the 39th Battalion; Pte. R. F. Tamblin, formerly of the 59th Battalion Band; Pte. Chas. Knight, formerly of the 15th Battalion, and Ptes. Scanlon and Chase, formerly of the 93rd Battalion.

A letter was read from Comrade Geo. Toone, resigning from the position of Vice-President of the Association on account of his being appointed to a position with the Board of Pension Commissioners. Comrade Walter Perks was elected to fill the balance of Comrade Toone's term as vice-president.

A letter from F. H. Dobbin, Secretary of the Patriotic Fund, paying a tribute to Comrade Toone's services as a member of the Patriotic Fund Committee, and asking that the G. W. V. A. appoint a successor, was read, and Comrade Edward Bird was selected to fill the position.

Comrades W. Farr and J. J. Cook were appointed members of the Committee representing the Veterans to co-operate with the Women's Union Government League.

The Provincial Organizer wrote the local branch, pointing out that they had been selling the membership pin at 50c, whereas 75 cents was the correct price. It was decided that all members should be asked to pay the additional 25c.

Comrade W. Perks occupied the chair at last night's meeting.

By-law To Abolish The Ward System Of Electing Aldermen Will Be Submitted To People

A by-law to abolish the ward system of electing aldermen will be presented to the ratepayers at the municipal elections in January. The Council reached this decision last night after a tie vote, which Mayor Duffus decided by voting for the resolution moved by Ald. McIntyre and seconded by Ald. Duncan.

A deputation from the Trades and Labour Council had made a number of requests to the City Fathers and this suggestion of a by-law to enable the ratepayers to express their favour or disfavour of the ward system was almost forgotten in the discussion of the method to be employed in raising the 1918 Patriotic Fund. It dallied in the background and seemed due for a year's hoist. In fact half the deputation had already departed and the remainder of the Trades and Labour men were moving toward the door when Mr. C. E. Adams recalled their petition to abolish the ward system and asked the Council if it was their intention to take any immediate action in the matter.

Ald. Duncan said he would like to have it dealt with, and Ald. McIntyre stated that he had given a notice of motion at the last meeting which he intended to deliver before the meeting adjourned. He moved, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that a by-law be submitted at the January elections providing for the reversion to the system of electing aldermen from the city generally and not as representatives of particular wards.

The vote resulted as follows:

Ayes — Aldermen Taylor, Dobbin, Duncan, McIntyre.

Nayes—Aldermen Saunders, Worth, Langford, Weir and Smith.

Mayor Duffus voted "Aye," remarking that a decision did not often rest with him.

Had Been Tried Before.

The discussion on the resolution was comparatively brief. Ald. Smith stated that Peterborough, like Toronto and other cities, had tried the plan of electing aldermen from the city as a whole, but finding it unsatisfactory and unworkable, had gone back to the ward system.

Ald. McIntyre claimed that a better class of candidates were offered by the former method, and Ald. Duncan argued that by its operation a ratepayer was not restricted to voting for only the candidate in his ward. If the people wanted to change to that system he was in favour of giving them the opportunity of manifesting their preference.

Mr. Jas. Dillon and other members of the deputation presented their reasons for the abolition of the ward system which will be supported or defeated by the ratepayers' ballots on January 7th, 1918.

Posthumous Poem By Late Pte. Mulligan

In the personal effects of Private Vincent Mulligan, who died of wounds on November 18th the following poem was found by his parents yesterday. It comes like a peep inside the veil and indicates that the young soldier had a premonition of death for which he was prepared, and in which he closed a splendid young life with the greatest service he could perform:

I am home in heaven, dear ones,
Oh, so happy and so bright!
There is perfect joy and beauty
In this everlasting light.

All the pain and grief are over:
Every restless tossing passed;
I am now at peace for ever,
Safely home in heaven at last!

Did you wonder I so calmly,
Trod the valley of the shade?
Ah, but Jesus' love illumined
Every dark and fearful glade.

And He came Himself to meet me
In that way so hard to tread;
And with Jesus' arm to lean on,
Could I have one doubt or dread?

Then you must not grieve so sorely,
For I love you dearly still;
Try to look beyond earth's shadows.
Pray to trust our Father's will.

There is work still waiting for you,
So you must not idly stand;
Do it now, while life remaineth—
You shall rest in Jesus' land.

When that work is all completed
He will gently call you home!
Oh, the rapture of that meeting!
Oh, the joy to see you come!

Hamilton, Canada, "Times": The German higher command made a big mistake when it forced the United States into the war. It will be a great factor in deciding the fate of the Kaiser and the German empire. Like Great Britain, America has within it the resources to become a great military power, one able to challenge the whole of Germany.

MONTE GRAPPA A SECOND VERDUN FOR THE ENEMY'S FORCES

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN ITALY, Dec. 4. — Italy began the fourth week of her heroic defence at Monte Grappa to-day. The height has been a second Verdun for Germany. Three weeks of constantly renewed attacks by Austro-Germans have failed to gain ground. To-day the enemy, his vast forces exhausted by the desperation of the attacks, is reorganizing, readjusting, refilling his shattered forces, perhaps for another blow. At Verdun French soldiers coined the immortal phrase, "Ils ne passeront pas," "they shall not pass." They backed the slogan with their heroic deeds. The Crown Prince did not pass.

At Monte Grappa, Italy's sturdy soldiers took up that phrase, "they shall not pass." To-day, they too, have enshrined it on Italy's record of heroism.

THE ENEMY BEATEN.

The enemy is beaten at Monte Grappa. He may attack again after to-day's lull, but the temporary suspension of his plan to crash through has been fatal to his campaign. From now on, wherever he may seek to strike, he will find every strategic point on the Piave front held down, not only by Italy's heroic fighters, but by veterans of the French and British armies. The Austro-German assault at Monte Grappa constituted the Teuton's third effort to turn the Italian flanks on the Piave front.

The first endeavour was when the Austrians launched the attack on the lower Piave against the Italian right wing. The result was the Italians wiped out an entire Teutonic army which crossed the river.

Immediately Gen. Conrad's and Krobutin's armies attacked on the left Italian wing, the second attempt at flanking. They burst over the Asiago Plateau, and there they were likewise checked.

Then came the third trial between the Piave and the Brenta rivers. The enemy concentrated for this supreme effort not only Konrad's and Krobutin's armies, but divisions from the armies of both Kruuss and Below.

GRAPPA THE CENTRE.

In the centre of this third battle ground lay Grappa, a mountainous crest, the southern slopes of which descend abruptly to the Venetian Plains. The mountain was the last barrier between the enemy and the turning of the Italian left wing. A victory for the foe here would have meant retreat to the Adige—the opening to the German spoliation of the Venetian Plains, with the rich cities of Venice, Padua, Vicenza and Treviso.

Grappa's importance thus equalized that of Verdun. Carrying out the parallel mounts Pertica, Solaroia, Spinoncia, Pailone, Monferena and Tomba, constituted the advanced defences of the mountain, just as Forts Douamont, Vaux, Thiaumont, Froid de Terre and others of Verdun's advanced defences, constituted the outer chain of the French citadel.

Against Grappa's outer ring the Germans launched the cream of the mountain fighting troops, just as the Crown Prince threw his Prussians against Douamont and the others at Verdun. At Grappa the famous German Alpen Korps, the Austrian Imperial Sharpshooters, the German Chasseurs, and Austrian Edelweiss divisions were hurled to the assault.

The Italians fought like fiends. Prisoners to-day declare the resistance often wiped out half of the attackers' effectives. That was almost the ratio at Verdun.

Like Verdun, also, the defenders' heroic resistance permitted time for Allied reinforcements to complete their organization. At Grappa, the stoppage of the enemy move allowed French and British armies to get into line in perfect organization, without hurry. They are now there. The Piave line now seems impassable.

Council Will Lend 93rd Instruments To The 57th Band

Responding to a request from Col. Mills of the 57th Regiment, the Council decided last night to loan the 93rd Battalion band instruments to the 57th band on an agreement to be drawn up by City Solicitor Gordon and approved by the Council. Col. Mills stated that some of the 57th band instruments have seen 30 years' service and all of them have been used for 15 years. The agreement will define the responsibility of the 57th officers for the care of the instruments.

Ald. Stratton asked whether the Council had the right to lend them.

City Clerk Armstrong read the agreement under which they were given to the 93rd band for custody and it was interpreted as placing their disposal in the power of the Council.

Ald. Langford moved, seconded by Ald. Worth, that the 93rd instruments be loaned to the 57th band under an agreement to be submitted to the Council.

Convicts To Be Witnesses

Canadian Press Despatch:

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 4.—Two convicts from Canadian prison are to be the principal witnesses for the government at the trial which begins in Federal Court here to-day of Albert Kaltschmidt and several others, on charges of conspiring to dynamite numerous Canadian factories and bridges. They are Charles F. Respa and William Leffler, convicted of dynamiting the plant of the Peabody Overall Company, Limited at Walkerville, Ont., in June, 1915. Respa, under sentence of life imprisonment, and Leffler, sentenced for ten years, were brought here from Kingston Penitentiary. According to Canadian authorities, Leffler in his confession, charged that Kaltschmidt who has lived in Detroit for a number of years, was the instigator of the far reaching dynamiting conspiracy. Respa's father, Frank Respa, 70 years of age, is one of those to be tried with Kaltschmidt. The others are Maria Schmidt and Mrs. Ida Neef, respectively Kaltschmidt's daughter and his sister, and their husbands, Carl Schimdt and Fritz A. Neef.

Everything goes round in a sewing circle.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members
Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

Exemptions Granted.

Mervyn Patterson Mather, farmer, Otonabee.

John J. Corkery, farmer, South Monaghan.

Exemptions Disallowed.

John Ambrose Doris, farmer, Otonabee.

Thomas Murray, 425 Charlotte street.

John Christopher Rutherford, 328 London street.

Walter V. McIlmoyle, 217 Charlotte street.

Stephen O'Toole, 114 Hunter street.

William James McFarlane, 261 Lake street.

Archie Rose, 9 Lundy Block.

Albert Roy Rutherford, Y.M.C.A.

William J. S. Morrow.

"E" Men Exempted.

Calvin Hiram Hurst, 536 Stewart street.

The tribunal was engaged this morning with deferred decisions. Two men, John Stanley Cook and Peter Cleary, have failed to report to the Board since their first appearance. Their names have been given to the police.

John Ambrose Doris, Otonabee, works a farm which he and his brother have rented. Their parents live on a farm nearby and have a third son helping at home. Disallowed.

Thomas Murray, 425 Charlotte street, applied on medical grounds. He was sent up for re-examination, but failed to report back to the tribunal. Exemption disallowed.

John Christopher Rutherford, 328 London street, applied for exemption on medical grounds. He is a student at St. Michael's College. Disallowed.

Walter V. McIlmoyle, 217 Charlotte street, appealed on the grounds of sole support of his widowed mother. Disallowed.

Stephen O'Toole, 114 Hunter street, is a driver for the Dominion Express Co. He had one brother killed in action and another is also overseas. He has one brother at home who has been transferred to Class 2. Exemption disallowed.

William James McFarlane, 261 Lake street, has his rating changed owing to false statements. He claimed exemption as the support of his parents, stating that his father had been ill nearly all summer. Disallowed.

Albert Roy Rutherford, Y.M.C.A., traveller for J. J. Turner & Sons, helps on his father's farm during the harvest. He has two young brothers at home. Disallowed.

William John S. Morrow asked to be exempted on domestic grounds. He is a fireman on the government dredge. His parents and one brother live at home. Disallowed.

Mervyn Patterson Mather, Otonabee, was exempted until he ceases to be employed as a farmer. He has six brothers, one in khaki.

Archie Rose, 9 Lundy block, employed at the Brinton Carpet Co., asked for exemption on the grounds of ill health. Disallowed.

John J. Corkery was exempted while he is employed as a farmer. His farm is in South Monaghan, and he has a brother in Otonabee whose exemption has been refused by Tribunal 275.

RECOMMENDS JOS. STEINBERG FOR THE GOVERNMENT FISH

Mr. Joseph Steinberg's appeal for the Council's recommendation to the government fish sales branch, was supported by a motion of Ald. Worth, seconded by Ald. Smith, that Mr. Steinberg be shipped as much fish as he requires.

"What about Paskins?" asked Ald. Duncan.

Ald. Dobbin replied that the committee composed of Mr. E. F. Mason, J. T. Braund and himself had recommended that the right to sell the fish be let to as few dealers as possible. As a result, Douros and Gettas have been bringing in 250 pounds a week, Pringle 250 pounds and R. C. Braund 100 pounds. Mr. Steinberg, he added, might have properly complained that he was debarred from receiving the government's 14 cent fish and his business might thereby suffer. In Hamilton, Toronto and other cities the tendency is to decrease the number of retail dealers.

COUNCIL'S SYMPATHY FOR THE FAMILY OF THE LATE J. B. M'WILLIAMS

The Council last night honoured the memory of the late J. B. McWilliams, at one time a councillor, and father of ex-Mayor R. F. McWilliams, by a standing vote on a resolution of sympathy which will be conveyed to the family.

The resolution was moved by Ald. Taylor and seconded by Ald. Saunders.

Two Skating Rinks For The West Ward

Mr. C. E. Canfield submitted a lengthy petition to the Council last night requesting that a public skating rink be opened at the corner of Walton street and Homewood avenue, last winter's location, and not at the old West Ward school yard.

Aldermen Worth and Duncan moved that rinks be provided in both locations and to distribute the favours, Ald. Taylor got another rink for the south end, at King Edward Park.

EUCHRE PARTY A GREAT SUCCESS

The euchre party, held last night in the W. O. W. hall, by the Ladies' Circle of the Woodmen of the World, was a decided success. The ladies desire to thank all those who attended and took part, and to Tucker's Orchestra for furnishing music for dancing. The proceeds were for necessities for Woodmen boys at the front. The programme opened with the National Anthem and consisted of instrumental music by Mr. F. Clark, Miss Walsh and others.

Gray and tan are favoured for dress shoes.

VICTORY LOAN IS OVERSUBSCRIBED IN PETERBOROUGH

Peterborough's Objective Was Exceeded by Nearly One Million Dollars

With the subscriptions which have not as yet been turned in, Peterborough's contribution to the Victory Loan will in all probability show an over subscription of the original objective ($750,000) of one million dollars. So far the total accounted for is $1,661,950.

Heads the List.

Mr. Peter Campbell and G. W. Johnson, who canvassed in the west ward, carry the laurels for collections in the city, their total having reached $102,100, while W. Sherin and T. Braden, who canvassed in Lakefield and Douro, head the list in the county collections with a total of $131,850.

POSITION FOR G. W. V. A. MAN

Any member of the G.W.V.A. desirous of obtaining a permanent position as mail carrier, please apply to Secretary, Barrie Building, this evening, at 7.30.

The executive of the G.W.V.A. will meet at the Barrie Building to-night at 7.30 o'clock.

"A Self-Made Widow," the newest World-Picture Brady-Made, comes to the Empire Theatre to-night, and the patrons of this theatre will have the opportunity of seeing Miss Alice Brady in a particularly fascinating role, that of an unsophisticated young country girl who is very romantic and who elopes to New York City with a handsome city man. But when she reaches New York she finds that her prospective husband has a wife and several children. Rather than admit her mistake she takes a desperate chance and stays in New York under false pretensions. Just what these false pretensions are and what comes from the situation are are shown in the drama. Miss Brady's acting in "A Self-Made Widow" is splendidly effective. The whole production is different and delightful.

PUBLIC OPINION

MYTH MAKING IN WAR TIME.

(Chicago Tribune.)

Mr. Tumulty, private secretary to the president, is alive and well in Washington. Remarkable, not to say creepy! Only the other day he was arrested as a German spy, tried, convicted, and shot. Hundreds of perfectly sane Americans believe it.

Kerensky—delicate, puny, and a T. B.—slipped out of Petrograd last week, hid no one knew where, and defied detection when most wanted. Again remarkable! He is Lord Kitchener.

Somewhere in France American troops have arrived without the loss of a man. Wonderful! Outward-bound transport loaded to the gunwales with American troops have been sunk by the half dozen. People tell this with a straight face.

Early in the war a large Russian army took ship at Archangel, landed on British soil, and crossed Scotland and England by train. That army was seen. There are people in England who still believe that it was seen.

Twenty years ago or thereabouts a distinguished theologian brought out a book called "The Gospel for an Age of Doubt." It is now gathering dust on a top shelf, for ours is no longer an age of doubt. It can swallow anything and lick its chops. It can set going the most fantastic rumours—that Mr. Tumulty has been shot, that Kerensky is Lord Kitchener, that our first line trenches in France are manned by troops already drowned, that the Red Cross is an organization of grafters, humbugs, and thieves, that whenever our forces suffer a reverse the war department "conceals it in its cheek like a damask worm." It begins to appear that the age of doubt, if there ever was such a thing, released enormous masses of credulity which are now seeking investment on the smallest provocation — such, for instance, as the arrival of gossip at fourth hand, more or less in the style of "I seen a man that seen a man that said he seen the devil." Andrew Lang wrote Myths and Myth Makers" and devoted the entire volume to the ancients. It was most unjust. When it comes to myth making, antiquity has nothing on modernity.

NORTHCLIFFE ON REVOLUTION.

(Cleveland Citizen.)

We have a more kindly feeling toward Lord Northcliffe, now that he has been in Cleveland and spoken his piece, than we had before he came.

Although owner of the ultra-Tory London Times, Northcliffe talks like a real democrat—he sees that merry old England is again labouring in revolution and evidently realizes that he and his class can't stop it. Asked by a reporter as to what will happen in England after the war, Northcliffe replied:

"The greatest social revolution in British history, greater even than Magna Charta, the Civil War, or the Reform Bill of 1832.

"Labour has behaved magnificently and labour will never go back to where it was before the war started. The present high wages, the result of a more equitable distribution of wealth, which is apparent in this, as well as in other countries, will endure after the war."

Speaking of the socialization process now going on in Great Britain, the editor said:

"The country has taken over every essential thing the nation possesses. The people have seized the mines, the mill and the railways.

"Any storekeeper who overcharges can be put out of business. The fines for profiteers are enormous.

"One farmer who overcharged for potatoes only last Monday was fined $25,000. In addition to the fines, there are heavy jail penalties and the man who gets a jail sentence in Great Britain serves every day of the sentence.

"There are no such things as suspended sentences in England. Any line imposed is paid forthwith or the prisoner immediately taken to jail."

Perhaps we great democrats can learn something even from a British Tory. At least the English appear to be several years ahead of us in the matter of abolishing capitalistic waste and dispensing justice.

Adverse Report On Max Peters' Island Bathing Proposal

Mr. Max Peters' project to build a bathing place on the island north of the C.P.R. bridge was the subject of a criticism by the special committee which reported through Alderman Weir last night. Consideration for the property owners on Engleburn avenue, and doubts that Mr. Peters' plans were insufficient, influenced the committee. The question was sent back to the committee for reconsideration.

Swapping Horses.

An Indiana man was traveling dow the Ohio on a steamer with a mar and two-year-old colt when by a sudden careen of the boat all three were tilted into the water. The Hoosier, a he rose puffing and blowing above wa ter, caught hold of the tail of the colt not having a doubt but that the natural instinct of the animal would carry him safely ashore. The old mare made for the land, but the frightened colt swam lustily down the current with its owner still hanging fast. "Let go of the colt and hang on to the mare!" shouted some of his friends. "Booh!" exclaimed the Hoosier, spouting the water from his mouth, "it's mighty fine telling me to let go the colt, but to a man who can't swim this ain't exactly the time for swapping horses." SALVATION ARMY.

The Adherents' Tea at the Salvation Army Temple last evening, was a decided success from every standpoint, and about four hundred gathered to tea, and afterward, together with the Salvationists, packed the Temple to the door to hear an excellent programme of vocal and instrumental music, recitations, etc. About three hundred slides were thrown on the canvas and after a happy and profitable evening every one went home tired, happy and satisfied.

A great deal of credit is due to the ladies who so successfully and cheerfully performed their duties and looked after the eatable side of things.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux Says the Plan to Isolate Quebec Will Be A Failure

Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 4, 1917—At a meeting held last night in the Maisonneuve Market Hall the Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux said he was sure that the Liberals would elect two of their candidates in the city of Toronto. He also stated that there would be at least thirty-five Liberals elected in the Province of Ontario on December 17th. In Quebec he said that all the Unionist Government could expect was two seats out of 65, and he added that he would not be at all surprised if the Liberals carried the sixty-five seats. The former postmaster-general said that the government had bought nearly all the big English newspapers of Canada in order to vilify the Province of Quebec and to stir up the other provinces against it. He predicted that the plan to isolate the Province of Quebec was doomed.

Sand Dunes in Gascony.

One of the most interesting and remarkable of the many regions for the observation of sand dunes lies between Bordeaux and Bayonne, in Gascony. The sea here throws every year upon the beach, along a line of 100 miles in length, some 5,000,000 cubic yards of sand. The prevailing westerly winds continue piecing up the surface particles from the westward slope, whirl them over to the inward slope, where they are again deposited, and the entire ridge by this means alone moves gradually inward. In the course of years there has thus been formed a complex system of dunes, all approximately parallel with the coast and with one another and of all altitudes up to 250 feet. These are marching steadily inward at a rate of from three to six feet a year, whole villages having sometimes been torn down to prevent burial and rebuilt at a distance.

When Ice Covered Europe.

During the long tertiary epoch, when opossums disported themselves on the site of Paris and mastodons tramped along the valley of the Thames, the earth was in the throes of mountain making. The Alps, the Himalayas, the Alleghenies, the Andes, attest the power of her activity in those days. At their termination our continents stood greatly higher than they do now, and this aided their glaciation, although it does not fully account for it. But as they became loaded with ice Europe and America gradually and we may venture to say contemporaneously sank. This was inevitable. Owing to the extreme heat and pressure prevailing in its interior the earth is an eminently elastic body. Its surface actually bulges in or out with a very slight increase or decrease of the load upon it.

Mrs. Blanca De Saulles Has Been Acquitted And Child Returned

Slain Man's Relatives, at Conference, Decide to Surrender Custody of the Child—Overjoyed Parent Declares She Will Remain in This Country—Praises American Courts

HOMECOMING A SURPRISE

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—John Longer De Saulles, Jr., has been turned to his mother to stay. Charles A. H. De Saulles, a brother of John H. De Saulles, the slain man, and other relatives decided at a family conference to surrender the child in view of the verdict of acquittal returned by the jury at the trial of Mrs. Blanca De Saulles.

The return of the child was a surprise to its mother. At the request of Mrs. De Saulles's lawyer she had consented to pose for photographers in her home, "The Crossways," at Roslyn, L.I., and her picture was being taken when an automobile drew up in front of her home. She had just been talking about her son and said:

"Can't you men do something to help me get him back?"

She had hardly spoken when she saw her son getting out of the machine, accompanied by her lawyer, Henry A. Uterhart. Mrs. De Saulles ran to the door and the boy was in her arms in a minute.

Mr. Uterhart had telephoned in the morning regarding the boy to George Gordon Battle, counsel for the family. Mr. Battle replied that Charles A. H. De Saulles and members of the Heckscher family, cousins of the slain man, would hold a conference with their legal advisers later in the day and decide upon their course.

At 1.30 o'clock Mr. Battle said that it had been decided to let the mother have the child. Mr. Uterhart went in a machine to the residence of G. Maurice Heckscher, and the child was allowed to leave the house at 2.30. When the boy was with his mother later in the day he said that Mrs. Heckscher, in kissing him goodbye, said, "Good-bye, for ever."

Dressed in Sailor Garb.

Mr. Uterhart took the boy in his machine to the mother's country place at Roslyn without sending the news ahead, so that the child's return was a surprise. The boy, who will be five years old on Chrismas Day, is plump and sturdy and large for his age. He was dressed in sailor's costume. Mrs. De Saulles had been so hardened by the trial that she did not notice the strangers present when she met her child. The boy did not at first, but after a few embraces he looked somewhat surprised at the spectators and said, "What is the trouble, mother?"

He used the word "mother" when the conversation was of a business nature, but called her by the nickname of "Bumby" when he was playing with her or embracing her. Mrs. De Saulles told the child that they were never to be separated again, and he said he was very glad. He added that he would rather be with her than anything in the world.

Mrs. De Saulles thought a second, and said that she would rather be with him than anything in "the universe."

"What is the universe?" asked the boy. The explanation of this raised many questions, which continued to multiply for some time. The photographers finally got Mrs. De Saulles to pose with her son. When this ordeal was over John's aunt, Miss Amalia Errazuris, called him to have a cup of chocolate. A few minutes later he shouted from the dining-room to his mother for another cup. As the first cup was a small one, he was allowed to have another.

One of the first questions raised was where Mrs. De Saulles intended to live in the future, and the boy was consulted on this. He said that he wanted to go to Chili, where he had first learned to ride horseback on a horse called Tokio. This reminded him that he had two riding crops at The Crossways, and he called for them. He suggested California as his second choice of a place to live.

Likes American Courts.

Mrs. De Saulles said, however, that she intended to stay in this country, and would live for the present at The Crossways. She further asserted, contrary to what had been said of her, hat she liked this country and liked Americans. "American courts are splendid," she said.

Mrs. De Saulles, who has had most of the newspapers supplied to her in her room in the Nassau County Jail, said that she had read accounts of the trial with interest, and had liked them all with the exception of an article by a woman short-story writer, who had said that the plight of Mrs. De Saulles was the more pitiful because she had never read a book and was short of intellectual resources, which might have kept her from brooding over the trial. Mrs. De Saulles said this was not true, and added that it was "not nice"—her unvarying formula of condemnation.

When Mrs. De Saulles was asked how she had managed to preserve throughout the trial the mask of calm and indifference which had been the marvel of all who saw her, she replied: "I schooled myself to it beforehand. I knew that psychologists and everyone else would be watching me, and I steeled myself to hold my expression. It was very hard, but one can do what one has to do."

She said that the most difficult part of the trial for her was when she entered the courtroom each day, as she knew every eye in the courtroom was fixed on her. She declared that she had not been inattentive, as some had thought, to what was going on in the court, but she thought she had seen everything that was going on.

Mrs. De Saulles was asked what she considered the climax of the trial, and replied: "The verdict, of course."

Asked if she had seen Juror 3 announce the verdict to her with a wink as he took his seat in the jury box, before the verdict had been asked by the clerk, she answered: "Of course I did. I would not have missed that for anything."

Confident of Acquittal.

She asserted that she felt certain the verdict would be in her favour, but the first knowledge of it was conveyed to her by the wink.

Mrs. De Saulles said she was vexed when she learned that her son had been told all about the case, what she had done, why she was on trial, and why she was held a prisoner.

"I think it was a shame to fill his small head with all this," she said. "He has been told to repeat it over and over, so that he could not possibly forget it. He told me that he would beg to be told that it was not true."

The boy was still wearing yesterday the Sheriff's badge which had been given to him on his visits to the Mineola Jail, where he was known as the Sheriff.

Mrs. De Saulles was asked if she intended to take any steps to recover from the De Saulles estate any of the money alleged to be due her from property bought by De Saulles with her money.

"I would not touch a penny of it under any circumstances," she said. "And I need money. I may have to go to work."

Mrs. De Saulles denied that she had cried after the appeal to the jury by Mr. Uterhart.

"Do you hink I would go through what I did at the trial and then cry over myself?" she said.

Mrs. De Saulles said she thought District Attorney Weeks had "not been very nice," in spite of her counsel's praise for his "gentlemanly" conduct of the trial.

Mrs. De Saulles feels secure in the possession of her son. The possibility of legal action is anticipated if she should try to take the child to Chili, because of the position taken by American courts against allowing an American boy to lose his nationality. But Mrs. De Saulles was emphatic in asserting that she had no intention of taking the boy to Chili, and that she intended to bring him up an American.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GREY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost, you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and not a medicine. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Short Summing Up.

One of the shortest summings up on record is believed to be that delivered by the late Commissione. Kerr at the Old Bailey in a case where a man was charged with being in the unlawful possession of a gold watch and chain. The appearance of the prisoner certainly did not correspond with the legitimate possession of such costly ornaments, but he asserted his innocence of the charge and declared that he had found the watch and chain on the pavement. The judge looked at the man in the dock and then at the men in the box. "Gentlemen of the jury," he said, "I have walked over the pavements of London during the last forty years, and I've never found a gold watch and chain there yet. Consider your verdict!"

THEY GAVE THIS RUN-DOWN MAN VINOL

And He Got Back His Strength and Energy

Sheboygan, Wis.—"I was all 'fagged out,' run down, no appetite, nervous, sleepless nights and droway during the day, and was not fit to work. A friend told me to take Vinol. I did so, and can now eat three square meals a day. I sleep well, am alert, active, strong and well and have gained eleven pounds."—A. W. Higby, Sheboygan, Wis.

This is because Vinol contains the elements needed to create a healthy appetite and restore strength. The complete formula is printed on every package. This is your protection.

ENNISMORE TOWNSHIP SCHOOL DESTROYED THIS MORNING

One of the Best Schools in the Township Fell a Prey to the Flames

Early this morning fire destroyed number four school at Ennismore. The cause of the fire is unknown, but it is thought to have originated near the stove, which was left burning in accordance with the usual custom. The fire broke out about four o'clock this morning. The building, which is valued at over two thousand dollars was a brick structure and one of the more recently built schools in the township. The teacher was Miss Galvin.

Animal Sentries.

Man is not alone in using sentries to guard him from danger. Birds and animals have been doing this for countless ages. Every gunner who knows anything about hunting geese is familiar with the fact that if he is to be successful he must always evade the wild goose picket.

Most birds that congregate in flocks, particularly in winter, always put a picket on guard. The golden plover is an example of this. The British starlings conduct their movements on military lines.

The beaver always posts a picket on guard, and that probably accounts for the reason that so few are ever seen, although their work is much in evidence. Sentries of the wild are often killed "doing their bit."

Evidence Required.

The editor of the local paper believed that he was doing a kindly act by suppressing from the list of "drunk and disorderly" on market day the name of a country subscriber that by rights belonged there. The subscriber, however, did not regard the omission as a favor.

"I suppressed your name for your wife's sake," the editor politely explained.

"Well, that's the awkward part of it," the farmer said, "for, not seeing my name among the rest, she won't believe I came to town at all."

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.— Reports from Rome indicate the possibility of another Austro-German offensive. The weather is mild in the mountains. Italian aviators report a heavy concentration of German troops behind the enemy lines.

Two More Machines.

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, Dec. 5. — Lieut. Raoul, a member of the Franco-American Flying Corps, brought down two more German machines yesterday, making seventeen in all.

BE READY FOR EMERGENCIES.

The best way is to always keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, ready for emergencies. Then when croup or colds come suddenly they can be promptly cured before they have time to reach an acute and dangerous stage. To meet this requirement we have put the syrup up in family size bottles which contain nearly three times as much as the 25-cent bottle and sell at 60 cents.

WHEN FRANK JOINED THE BAND.

There are some boys you simply couldn't chain to the piano and be sure that they would put in an hour's practice, yet they would follow a brass band for miles until completely fagged out. This attraction for the band should be seized upon as a suitable means of doing a sort of Y.M.C.A. work in the towns which are too small to maintain a branch of that institution.

In many of our small Canadian towns there seems to be nothing to draw the young men together except for pure cussedness. The only means of spending the evenings is often just hanging around, from which nothing but evil ever comes. Then let a band be organized in the town. A father comes to the leader and says: "Will you take Frank in the band, and look after him?" The leader makes no promise and assumes no responsibility for the young fellow when off duty, but does agree to look after him on duty.

Frank finds himself in a dashing uniform, but under discipline. On practice nights he must be regular, punctual and obedient. He finds his leader a good musician and a good fellow—but strict. As a young member of a band said to the writer, "Our leader is a good fellow, but there is no moonshine during the hour and a half's practice." Frank has something definite to accomplish. In each piece of music he has to keep his end up. He wants to show improvement as time goes on. Incentive proves his salvation.

All the while this young man is gaining a valuable musical education at little or no cost to himself. He gains a better equipment for life and becomes a better citizen, to the delight of his parents. Surely the leaders of our existing bands deserve more consideration and support, and every town which has no band would be much the better for having one.

Parallel Stories.

When Napoleon was a student at Brienne he happened to be asked by one of the examiners the following question: "Supposing you were in an invested town, threatened with starvation, how would you supply yourself with provisions?" "From the enemy," replied the sublieutenant of artillery. And this answer so pleased the examiners that they passed him without further questioning. Now, Napoleon's answer was by no means original, for one of Suvaroff's sergeants obtained promotion from the ranks by giving the very same answer when asked the very same question.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

CHAPTER X.

Duvall, after having satisfied himself that Ruth Morton was safely installed in her suite of room at the hotel, came down to the lobby to await the arrival of Mrs. Morton.

The unexpected meeting with Grace caused him the utmost anxiety. He appreciated fully her reasons for having come to see him, and yet he deeply regretted her coming. The enemies of Ruth Morton were far too clever, too shrewd, he feared, not to take advantage of her mistake, and by means of it trace him at once to his present address. A complete disguise became an immediate necessity. He decided to assume one as soon as Mrs. Morton had arrived.

The latter came in about ten minutes later accompanied by Nora. Duvall explained matters to the clerk at the desk, and the supposed Mrs. Bradley was conducted to her rooms at once. Duvall accompanied her.

They found Ruth resting quietly but her joy at her mother's arrival was very apparent. She feared to be left alone and seemed to expect her persecutors to appear from every closet, through every door and window.

"Oh, mother, I'm so glad to see you," she exclaimed.

"I'm glad to find you safe," Mrs. Morton returned.

"I advise you to stay right here with your daughter throughout the evening, Mrs. Morton," said Duvall, as he made ready to go to his own room. "Have your meals sent up. Admit no one. Open no packages. I have every hope that before the night is over I may have some important and satisfactory news for you. I shall probably not see you again until after the performance to-night, but if anything vital occurs I will of course communicate with you by telephone. Good-bye, and good luck."

When he reached his own room, he proceeded to the business of divesting himself completely of all resemblance of Richard Duvall. It was clear that the persons he was seeking knew him by sight, and hence his opportunities to accomplish anything against them were very greatly lessened. The threatening telephone message received by Grace did not worry him at all, but the fact that those people were so constantly upon his heels did. He determined to disappear completely as Duvall and reappear in the person of John Bradley, using all his skill in the matter of disguise to create for himself a totally different personality.

Taking a make-up box from his grip he proceeded first to give his dark brown hair a very decided and natural looking touch of gray, over the temples and at the sides. Then he fitted into place a short pointed grayish beard and a mustache with waxed ends. These were the products of the skill of one of the best wig makers in Paris, and so cleverly made that they would defy detection, even in broad daylight. A pair of gold rimmed eyeglasses completed the facial disguise. Duvall might now have passed anywhere for a well-groomed professional man of fifty-five or sixty.

The impression was heightened by his frock coat and silk hat. He felt quite sure that in his present disguise the plotters against Ruth Morton's welfare could not possibly recognize him.

He went down to the theatre very early after a hasty dinner, and found Mr. Baker in the box office. The moving picture man did not recognize him of course, and Duvall after drawing him aside, had some little difficulty in convincing him of his identity. Once it had been established, however, Mr. Baker conducted him to a dressing room behind the scenes, and motioned him to a chair.

"We can talk here without being seen or heard," he said. "Is there anything new?"

"Nothing. I have taken Mrs. Morton and her daughter to a hotel where I feel sure they will be quite safe from further annoyance. Ruth will not come to the studio for a few days, until we have gotten to the bottom of this affair. I am staying in an adjoining room so as to be on hand at once in case of any trouble. I suppose you have everything fixed for to-night?"

"Yes." Mr. Baker's tone was dubious. "I have inserted in the film the material you gave me. It will appear just at the end of Part I. I hope it will not spoil our picture."

"I think not. As a matter of fact when the reasons for its introduction become know I imagine it will give you a lot of very valuable advertising."

"Possibly so," Mr. Baker granted. "But after all, I begin to feel very doubtful as to the results. This woman, whoever she is that is persecuting Miss Morton seems to be mighty clever. She may not be affected in the way you think, by what she sees on the screen."

"I realize that. It is only a chance. But don't you think that under the circumstances, it is a chance worth taking?"

"Mose certainly; otherwise I would not have consented to it. But, as I say, I doubt very much its success."

"Well—we can only try. You will remember what I said about the, and the call for a doctor if one appears to be needed."

"Yes. I have all that in mind. Miss Morton is not coming to-night, I presume."

"No. I advised against it."

"I'm glad of that."

Duvall sat in silence for a moment. "By the way," he said presently. "There is one important matter that I have overlooked. Do you give your employees passes for these opening performances?"

"No—not regularly, that is. But any member of our organization who wishes to see the performance would of course be admitted. We reserve a section of the house for that purpose. A number of our people usually come over."

"Good! That's just what I had hoped for. Where is this section?"

"The last five rows on the left-hand side of the house. But why?"

"Don't you see? All the evidence points to the fact that the person who is responsible for these threats either works in your studio or is in some way able to gain access to it at any time. Witness the stolen paragraph—the substituted telegram of this morning. In the latter it was definitely stated that the woman in the case would be in the audience to-night. I am hoping sincerely that she will not have the cleverness to enter as one of the public, but will come in as one of your people, and sit in the section of the house reserved exclusively for your employees. In that event, I think we shall discover who she is beyond a doubt."

"I certainly hope so," sighed Mr. Baker. "This thing has got us all up in the air. Our President had a long conference with me this afternoon about Miss Morton. He seems to think she is going to pieces, and recommended trying to get John Clayton away from the Multigraph people to take her place. He says that she is losing her good looks. I told him nothing of course, but it worried me a lot. I am very fond of Ruth Morton and I don't want to see her lose her place."

"She won't lose it," asserted Duvall. "When we get through her position with your company will be stronger than it has ever been before. Shall we go out in the lobby and take a look at the crowd as it comes in?"

Mr. Baker assented and the two men stationed themselves near the box office.

Without appearing to do so Duvall inspected the various members of the upcoming crowd. His scrutiny was careful, comprehensive, but the only person he recognized was Grace.

That she also recognized him he knew. She had seen the disguise he wore many times and was familiar with it. She did not betray herself however by so much as a glance, but proceeded at once to her seat.

When the moment arrived for the beginning of the performance, the house was filled. Duvall, with Baker at his side, stationed himself back of the left hand section of seats, so that the rows reserved for the employees of the company were directly in front of him. He occupied himself during the interval before the lights were switched off by noting carefully all the women in the last five rows, but none of them attracted his attention particularly.

Soon the performance began. Ruth Morton, the American Beauty, stepped upon the screen, a compelling vision of loveliness. The audience followed eagerly her exciting adventures. Duvall himself, in spite of his precaution, found himself absorbed by the charm and action of the picture. In the opening scenes Ruth appeared as a poor girl, trying to make her way in the great world of the theatre. Her struggles, her sacrifices, her failures, were almost vividly portrayed. When at last through her marvelous beauty, she succeeded in gaining recognition from the critics, he applauded with those about him, completely under the spell of her charm.

The final scene of the first part was a view of Ruth as Catherine Grey, the American Beauty, refusing the dubious offers made her by a rich New Yorker. With a faith in herself by no means assumed Catherine turned from his picture of luxury, of steam yachts, of country estates, of unlimited bank accounts, with a smile which showed her confidence in her beauty, her talents. The audience watched her, spellbound, as she stood on the sidewalk before the theatre, looking with grave inscrutable eyes after the costly limousine that had just driven away without her. In no picture heretofore taken of the girl had she appeared to better advantage. Every line of her lovely face seemed responsive to the effect of the lighting, the situation, the motives which inspired her. The audience drew itself back, ready to register its approval of the first part of the film with hearty applause.

And then, something happened. The lovely, smiling face of Ruth Morton faded from view, and in its place came with brutal suddenness the picture of a huge grinning death's head, amazing in its suggestion of horror. The audience sat in utter silence, wondering what could be the reason for this sudden apparition. Beneath the death's head appeared in huge letters the words:

"We know the woman."

The thing had come as a complete surprise. The tension throughout the house was electric. Duvall saw his wife rise from her seat on the aisle, a few rows away, and come quickly to the rear of the house. She at least realized that a moment of importance had arrived.

And then, without warning, the stillness of the theatre was broken by a sudden cry and a woman sitting some three rows from where Duvall stood, but on the opposite side of the aisle from the seats in which sat Mr. Baker, rose to her feet, turned, and fell heavily against the back of the seat ahead of her. At almost the same moment the lights were switched on, and a voice was heard calling, "Is there a doctor in the house?"

It was Mr. Baker and Duvall, who stood beside him, sprang forward at once.

"I am a doctor," he cried, and approached the place where the woman sat.

"Can I be of any assistance?" Grace asked. "I am a trained nurse."

"Yes," replied Duvall quickly. "Get this woman to the ladies' waiting room at once."

Grace sprang forward. There was a bustle among the audience, a sudden rising, a craning of necks. Everyone seemed to be looking for the person who had uttered the sudden cry. Before anyone fully realized what had happened Grace had reached the fainting woman's side, and supporting her with an arm about her waist, was leading her toward the rear of the house.

TO SUFFER FROM HEADACHES

Makes Life Miserable

Headaches seems to be habitual with many people. Some are seldom, if ever, free from it, suffering continually with the dull throbbings, the intense pain, sometimes in one part, sometimes in another, and then over the whole head, varying in its severity by the cause which brings it on.

The varieties of headache most common are sick or bilious headache, nervous headache, headache from constipation, debility or indigestion and periodical and spasmodic headache, and undoubtedly the cause must be removed before permanent relief can be had.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that has been on the market for over 40 years, removes the cause of the headaches, and not only does this but also restores the entire system to healthy action and buoyant vigour.

Miss Emily Smith, 204 Bellwoods Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters. For two years I was greatly troubled with violent headaches, particularly in the morning. I tried everything to cure me until a friend recommended B.B.B. I tried it, and now I am completely cured."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Aspirant For Criminal Honors

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

The city of Naples is protected from the waters of the bay on which it is built by a sea wall. At the northern end of this wall is a landing to which a few boats are fastened. One day two men lounged on this landing. One of them said to the other:

"Luigi, how is it that you always have money to spend and yet you never work, while I am usually hunting for a job and can never get one unless it is unloading the ships at the docks on the other side of the city? And, I can assure you, that is very hard work and poor pay."

A knowing look came upon Luigi's face. "Only fools work, Giovanni," he said. "Wise men plan."

"I know what you mean," said Giovanni. "What you call wisdom is arranging to take one's share of the good things of the earth of which he has been unjustly deprived. That is all very well for you, for if you get caught you are not punished, while I —well, I would suffer the penalty."

"What do you mean by that?"

"You know very well that when you are tried your friends are in court. A witness is called to testify against you. You clasp your hands together over your breast dolorously. The witness knows that if he testifies against you he will be kiffed. How is all this arranged?"

"Do you really wish to become one of us?"

"I surely do."

"Well, I have my eye on a rich man who should by rights divide with me, I being poor. He is looking for a butler. Go to him and solicit the place. When you see a chance for a good haul make it, divide with me, and I will see, if you are arrested and tried for maintaining your right, that you are protected."

Giovanni accepted the proposition, went to one Signor Murelli and obtained the position of butler, to Luigi's surprise, with very little difficulty. Within a month he left Murelli's service with 1,000 lire, which he divided with Luigi. Giovanni was arrested and tried, but the witnesses against him were cowed, and he was acquitted.

One day soon after that he went to his friend Luigi and said: "I have heard that the police are on the track of the murderer of Francelli, who was done to death six months ago. They have laid a trap for him, and he will very likely walk into it."

"What trap?"

"As to that, if I give information I must be paid for it. I don't save a man's life for nothing."

Luigi tried in vain to get from Giovanni the method of procedure of the police to trap the murderer, but failed. Luigi, who knew who was the murderer, went to him and told him what he had heard. It was agreed that Giovanni should be paid 500 lire for the secret. Giovanni refused to deal with any one except the person most concerned, but consented to tell things to prove that on his information depended the safety of the criminal. This frightened the latter, and, knowing that Giovanni had robbed his master and had been protected from punishment by the society of criminals, he felt it would be safe to trust him. He therefore agreed to meet him and hear what he had to say.

When the two met Giovanni demanded his pay before giving the information. Criminals do not keep their money long, and the murderer, whose name was Andrea Cavelli, could raise only a part of the sum agreed upon. Giovanni accepted it on condition that Cavelli would give his note for the rest, stipulating what the payments were for. Cavelli balked at this for awhile, but when Giovanni reminded him that he himself was a criminal and had applied through Luigi for membership in the Society For Mutual Criminal Protection he consented and signed the note filled in as Giovanni desired.

The first installment having been paid Giovanni said the police knew that Cavelli was the murderer of Francelli, but had nothing except oral testimony against him, which would be frowned down at the trial by members of the Society For Mutual Protection. The government had therefore secured the services of a woman, who was to enthrall Cavelli and secure evidence that could not be suppressed by threats. All Cavelli had to do to keep himself safe was to beware of any woman who seemed disposed to favor him. But Giovanni declared that as soon as the police had found the proper person for the decoy he would know it and would communicate it to Cavelli.

The day after this arrangement had been made a party of the carabinieri arrested Cavelli, and the officer who commanded it was Giovanni.

He had been instructed by the government to track the murderer of Francelli and for the purpose had made the acquaintance of Luigi. The position of butler had been given him by Murelli with the understanding that he was of the carabinieri and that the robbery of his master was faked. In this way he gained the confidence of the criminals and succeeded in securing the written evidence needed to convict the murderer, for the note Cavelli had given him was held to be tantamount to a confession.

Cavelli was brought to trial, and a [illegible] expecting to terrify witnesses. They had no opportunity.

EVERYDAY READING

Repentance towards God is a necessity, for except we repent we shall perish. Receiving Jesus brings to us the right or privilege of becoming sons of God. Believing on the Lord Jesus we become possessors of eternal life. Those who have received Jesus, are born of God, or born again. Jesus said to Nicodemus, a religious man, "Ye must be born again." We must become as a little child in order to enter the kingdom of heaven. Without faith it is impossible to please God. What about the natural born sceptic or doubter, or the man that has no faith? Every encouragement and hope for him, for faith is the gift of God. The man who comes to Jesus in full surrender will by the grace of God be enabled to have faith or trust in Him. As many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the Sons of God. The Spirit Himself bears witness to that fact. The law of the Spirit is the law under which the followers of Jesus come. There is no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus, for the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus makes us free from the law that reveals sin. The law, or the requirements, or commandments of the Spirit, are not hard or grievous. The one who takes upon himself the yoke of the Lord Jesus, and commences and continues to learn of Him, is the one who is obedient to the law of the Spirit. The child of God who continues to walk after the Spirit, or be led by the Spirit, shall never backslide. This walking after the Spirit brings to us freedom that is more than liberty. In order to have this freedom continually as ours we must walk after the same manner as we received Jesus.

Paul warned the Colossians not to be deluded by the persuaviness of speech of those who would rob them of their liberty. He said, let no man judge you in regard to meat, drink and holy days. He cautioned them not to be robbed of their prize. What was that prize, but a complete salvation, that brought unto them not only victory over sin, but blessed freedom in the will of God, which is more than liebrty; and this prize procured to them by JESUS ONLY. He said, if YOU have died with Christ, why do ye subject yourselves to ordinances? Paul said to the Galatians to stand fast and not be entangled again in a yoke of bondage. It is a sad fact that in this our day, many after being set free, are again entangled, by coming under ordinances, forms, ceremonies, creeds and theories. If men would be child-like, continuing to learn of Jesus, all would be well.

Bewildered, doubting and (I might say) unhappy one, turn away from man's preachments and opinions, and turn to God. Come to Jesus. He will be the answer to all your questionings. He will give you a sure foundation to build upon and you will be able to say, "we speak of that which we do know."

USED FOR SHAVING.

Many men are troubled, more particularly in the cold weather, with a sort of roughness of the skin or eczema, caused by shaving. The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment after the shave soon cures the trouble and by using it after each shave you keep the skin soft and prevent chafing and soreness. Being a mild antiseptic qualities this ointment prevents and its anti-cures Barber's Itch.

SUPPORT UNION GOVERNMENT

Women of Canada:

"Be True to the Boys At the Front"

Sir Robert Borden in his manifesto says: "The franchise will be extended to women, not chiefly in recognition of devoted and capable service in the war, but as a measure of justice too long delayed. If men die, women suffer; if they are wounded, women heal; if they are maimed, women labor."

The franchise is extended to the women relatives of fighting Canadians, in order that they may help hasten Victory and bring the boys back from the trenches covered with the glory they have won.

A Vote for a Unionist Candidate Is a Vote for Reinforcements

The Union Government is pledged to carry on its work of raising the 100,000 reinforcements so urgently needed to support the Canadians at the front. Laurier and his adherents would stop this work, take a referendum, and experiment with voluntary enlistment, the possibilities of which have been exhausted. The most clear-headed, right-minded Liberals have gladly and without coercion helped to form the Union Government; they have weighed the pros and cons, they have not allowed politics to interfere with their patriotism, or their promise to our brave boys in France to "see them through."

WOMEN WHO CAN VOTE

Every woman may vote who is a British subject, 21 years of age, resident in Canada one year, and in the constituency 30 days, who is the mother, wife, widow, daughter, sister or half-sister of any person, male or female, living or dead, who is serving or has served without Canada in any of the Military forces, or within or without Canada in any of the Naval forces of Canada or of Great Britain in the Present War, or who has been honorably discharged from such services, and the date of whose enlistment was prior to Sept. 20th, 1917.

Such women should vote for the Unionist Candidate to ensure prompt reinforcements at the front.

Every ounce of strength in Canada should be exerted to help right a monstrous wrong the Prussian hierarchy would inflict upon the world. That is why the vote is placed in the hands of those most dear to our soldiers, trusting that the wifely love, and motherly devotion, and sisterly care, will vote as the boys would vote to carry on the work begun, and so far continued in the heroic spirit of self-sacrifice.

DRINK HOT WATER AND RID JOINTS OF RHEUMATIC RUST

Why rheumatism and lumbago sufferers should drink phosphated hot water each morning before breakfast

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which is not completely eliminated each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste material, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons, called uric acid, is formed and then sucked into the blood where it continues to circulate, collecting grain by grain in the joints of the body much like rust collects on the hinge as shown above.

Men and women who suffer from lumbago, rheumatism, or sore, stiff, aching joints should begin drinking phosphated hot water, not as a means to magic relief from pain, but to prevent more uric acid forming in the system. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will first neuralise and then wash out of the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels the previous day's accumulation of toxins and poisons; thus cleansing, sweetening, and freshening the entire alimentary canal, each morning, before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make any rheumatic or lumbago sufferer an enthusiast on the morning inside bath.

Millions of people keep their joints free from these rheumatic acids by practising this daily internal sanitation. A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate, drunk before breakfast, is wonderfully invigorating; besides, it is an excellent health measure because it cleanses the alimentary organs of all waste, gases, and sour fermentations, making one look and feel clean, sweet and fresh all day.

Those who try this for one week may find themselves free from sick headaches, constipation, bilious attacks, sallowness, nasty breath, and stomach acidity.

A LITTLE PIECE OF LEAD.

The Costliest Thing This World of Ours Has Ever Known.

Just think of one small piece of lead, probably weighing less than an ounce, that cost the world some $100,000,000,000 in money, probably $100,000,000,000 in property, more than 11,000,000 lives and individual suffering and loss impossible of computation—a bit of lead that embroiled in war Germany, Austria-Hungary, Britain, France, Belgium, the United States, Turkey, Siberia Italy, Montenegro, Roumania, Bulgaria, Albania, Egypt, Canada, Australia China, Japan, South Africa, India and Russia and brought every other nation to the brink of internal trouble or outward disaster, the consequences of which are being felt by every human being, civilized or uncivilized, white black, yellow or brown!

That small piece of lead was fired from a pistol in the hands of a crack brained youth of Servian nativity into the body of the heir to the Austrian throne. The troubles arising from this mad act and its punishment set fire to the powder trains in Europe and led to hostile act after hostile act and finally and suddenly to open war in 1914.

That little piece of lead should be preserved as a memorial to all future generations and as the costliest thing mankind has ever known. It would become the greatest silent teacher the world has ever seen. It would teach restraint for the weak minded and violent; it would teach the importance of minor acts and things; it would teach peace as no costly monument, no book of horrors, no painting of tragedy could ever teach it.

Tortoise Shell.

The finest of tortoise shell is said to be that which comes from the Indian archipelago, although much of that obtained on the Florida coast is of the very best quality, says the Scientific American. There are three rows of plates on the back of the animal called "blades" by the fishermen. In the central row are five plates and in each of the others four plates, the latter containing the best material. Besides these, there are twenty-five small plates around the edges of the shell known as "feet" or "noses." The biggest turtle does not furnish more than sixteen pounds of shell. Formerly the undershell was discarded as worthless but now it is much esteemed for its delicacy of coloring.

What Will It Do For Me?

YOU have heard of the great good this food cure is accomplishing for others. You have come to realize that nervous diseases do not right themselves, and therefore feel the necessity of some treatment to help you back to health and strength.

Now comes the all-important question as to what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will do for you.

Basing our answer on a knowledge of the restorative value of the ingredients contained in this food cure, and on the experience of those who have proven its curative powers under the most trying conditions, we want to tell you that—

It will make your blood rich and red.

It will nourish the starved nerve cells back to health and vigor.

Mrs. C. French, 104 Lansdowne street, Peterboro', Ont., writes: "I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness, frequent headaches and indigestion. For many years I was troubled with a twitching or fidgety feeling about my limbs after retiring, causing me much loss of sleep. If wakened out of my first sleep, even had I been asleep only five minutes, I would lie awake for hours and could not get to sleep again. Any sudden noise or a door slamming would set my nerves going, and I would fear that something dreadful was going to happen. I had tried different remedies for this trouble, but without success. A friend asked me one day why I didn't try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I thought I could at least give it a trial. I secured some and commenced using them, and found they benefited me so much that I have taken fully a dozen boxes. My nervousness or fidgety feeling in the limbs is entirely cured. I can now eat and sleep well. I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food strongly, and would advise anyone suffering from nervous trouble of any kind to use them according to directions."

It will cure nervous headaches by removing the cause.

It will strengthen the action of the heart.

It will correct the weakness and inactivity of the digestive organs.

It will restore energy, ambition and confidence.

It will prevent the development of nervous prostration, paralysis and locomotor ataxia.

Why not put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test? We know that the formula is right. We have proven to you by thousands of reports from cured ones that this treatment positively effects cure, even in the most complicated cases.

We cannot do more. It remains for you to make the test. You have everything to gain by using this building-up treatment, for it cannot fail to be of at least some benefit to you.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilisation and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

Heart Beat So Fast

Could Not Sleep

HAD TO SIT UP IN BED

Heart trouble has of late years become very prevalent. Sometimes a pain catches you in the region of the heart, now and then your heart skips beats, palpitates, throbs, or beats with such rapidity and violence you think it will burst. You have weak and dizzy spells, are nervous, irritable and depressed, and if you attempt to walk upstairs or any distance you get all out of breath.

There is no other remedy will do you so much good, restore your heart to a natural condition, build up your strength and give you back vigor and vitality as Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. A. Russell, Niagara Falls, Ont., writes: "At nights I could not sleep, and had to sit up in bed, my heart would beast so fast.

"When I went to walk very far I would get all out of breath, and would have to sit down and rest before I could go any further. I was advised to get Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and before I had used two boxes I could sleep and walk as far as I liked without any trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

"Lots of fresh air and work will build you up," commented Mr. D. W. Dumble, when Bernard C. Hale, a farm laborer, claimed to be in ill-health. Hale who was passed as "A 2" by the doctors, gave evidence as to the importance of continuing his present employment on the farm. Hale's employer has a two hundred acre farm and his only son is at the front.

Having regard to the fact that Hale's employer did not make any effort to claim exemption for Hale, Lieut.-Col. Clegg asked to have the claim disallowed.

Judgment was reserved.

"E" MEN EXEMPTED.

Buree Gunn, Elm street, Harold E. Lowes, 781 George street, W. G. McDougall, 30 Lisburn avenue, P. Butler, 470 Stewart street, J. J. Bickell, a farmer, Michael Condon, a farmer, and Fred Wheeler, Peterboro, all "E" men, were exempted until "E" category men are required.

E. H. Kidd, a farmer, and E. Armstrong, 139 Douro street, both "B" men, were exempted until "B" men are called.

Andrew Brotherstone, who has two brothers in the military service, is a marine engineer. A fourth brother is a marine engineer on the steamer Rainbow.

Brotherstone was exempted until May the first.

WAS EXEMPTED.

Frank Bowness, a draughtsman, whose services are indispensable to the Canadian General Electric Company, was exempted so long as he continues his present line of employment with the C. G. E.

Cecil B. Ryan claimed to be a United States citizen. Ryan was exempted by the Board. He will be subject to arrest at all times unless he is able to produce sufficient proof of his nationality.

MUSIC IN THE HOME
FRIGHTFULNESS IN MUSIC.

One composer has the truly Prussian knack of knowing his trade. He is equipped like the Doctors of Bonn, Strauss, magnificently. Not only is he completely at home in all the technicalities of the science of sound, but he is regarded as the greatest master of orchestration since Berlioz. The language of music in all its dialects is as familiar to his as is French to a Parisian gamin. Gifted with extraordinary acquisitive powers, inextraordinary acquisitive powers, inportunity to speak great things and scale the heights of immortality.

He is best known for three Symphonic Poems and three Grand Operas. "Till Eulenspeigel's Merry Pranks" was his earliest orchestral work of consequence. It is a musical version of a folk tale green with salacious slime. Tod and Verklarung (Death and Transfiguration) is a gruesome review in the hour of death of the sound and fury of war. Both of these works, which are of unexampled brilliance, are marred by their defiance of the canons of beauty. The Sinfonia Domestica is a ribald travesty on home life.

The Operas will not soon be forgotten. That does not mean because of their beauty. Salome was the first. Traditionally the ordinary Opera libretto deals with passion and ragedy. Salome dealt with lascivious lust and murder. New York spewed the vile thing out of her mouth, and Mary Garden smeared her artistic reputation for ever by her appearance as the bloody dancer. Elektra was the second. There is no more terrible story in the classics than that of the maniacal murderess. Despite wonders of orchestral "tone-painting," the composer's decadent delight in unrestrained "expression" disgusted American lovers of Opera and the work died. Der Rosenkavalier, "a comedy of lubricity," was the third. Let us hope it will be the last.

The temperament of Strauss is similar to the temperament of the soldiers who ravaged Louvain and bombarded Rheims. It is the devilish side of intellectuality, diabolical ingenuity applied to debasing and disgusting themes. This is the German music which the war has taken from us. It can well be spared. The work of the old, unPrussianized Germans remains universal, music to be learned and loved. Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, and even Brahms lived for beauty, for humanity, and for civilisation.

A Fight for Life

It has been fight or die for many of us in the past and the lucky people are those who have suffered, but who are now well because they heeded nature's warning signal in time to correct their trouble with that wonderful new discovery of Dr. Pierce's, called "An-u-ric." You should promptly heed these warnings, some of which are dizzy spells, backache, irregularity of the urine or the painful twinges of rheumatism, sciatica or lumbago. To delay may make possible the dangerous forms of kidney disease, such as diabetes or stone in bladder.

To overcome these distressing conditions take plenty of exercise in the open air, avoid a heavy meat diet, drink freely of water and at each meal take Anuric (double strength). You will, in a short time, find that you are one of the firm indorsers of Anuric.

Hamilton, Ont.—"For kidney ailments I have never known any medicine to equal Anuric. When I started to take it I was very miserable with lame back, pains in the cords of my neck and shoulders and all over my body. The water was high colored and offensive. All of these conditions left me after one week's use of Anuric and I consider it to be the greatest of all kidney medicines."—Mrs. Jennie Clark, 79 Queen St. So.

Toronto, Ont.—"My husband suffered severely with pains in his back for three or four weeks. He commenced to take Anuric and in three or four days he not only looked better, but remarked that his back felt much better, and now he says that his pain has all gone. It is with pleasure that we recommend Anuric."—Mrs. Mary Ryan, 54 Seaton St.

Resumption Of Offensive On Italian Front Expected

Great Forces of Men and Guns Have Been Massed By the Austrians and Germans in the Asiags Section---Nothing But Customary Artillery Activity to Report on Western Front Says British Official Announcement.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Tuesday—Great forces of men and guns have been massed by the Austrians and Germans in the Asiago section, according to reports reaching here to-night, and resumption of the offensive is expected. The reports indicate that the enemy is employing ten divisions of troops.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 5.—In addition to the customary artillery activity on both sides of the battle fronts, says to-day's War Office announcement, there is nothing of particular interest to report.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, December 5.—In a special cable to-day Walter Willison, Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press with the Canadian Armies in Flanders, says that political interest overshadows almost everything else in the Canadian corps at present. Thousands of men have already cast their ballots. Pre-election developments in Canada are being closely followed, although there is a striking dearth of Canadian newspapers to give the views of the candidates and the feeling of constituency. Mr. Willison says the army is subscribing with splendid spirit to the Victory Loan. One enthusiastic soldier bought a bond for his youngster some time before it was born.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, December 5.—Austro-German forces yesterday captured some hill positions in Sette Comuni on the mountainous front in Northern Italy, the German War Office announced to-day.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, via London, December 5.—Negotiations between the Germans and Russians for an armistice are extending to the Roumanian troops, the War Office announced.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, December 5.—Complete agreement is shown by the foreign press of the city, whether serving Germans and Hungarians, or written in the tongue of foreign language, and that agreement is that President Wilson's message is a powerful war document, not a peace message, a confident expression of strength, and not a hesitatory statement of weakness.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, December 5.—A joint resolution drafted in accordance with the views of President Wilson and the State Department, declaring a "state of war exists" and "to have existed," since noon to-day, between the United and the Austro-Hungarian Government, and directing the employment of the entire naval and military forces to carry on war against that government, was introduced to-day by Chairman Flood of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

(By Lowell Mellett.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PARIS, December 5.—An Inter-Allied Shipping Council was announced to-day as and in process of formation from deliberations of committees of the recent Inter-Allied Council.

The board's object is to co-ordinate the Allies' action as to shipping to establish a common programme, to free tonnage available for transport of American troops and to make the blockade effective.

BAZAAR A "GREAT" SUCCESS

A most successful bazaar was held under the auspices of the Girls' Auxiliary of St. John's Church yesterday afternoon and evening in the School Room. Over $100 was realised. There was a splendid patronage for the fancy work, aprons, knitting bags, and other articles for sale, including the home cooking. Afternoon tea was served, and many dropped in for this part of the event.

Mrs. Conway and her assistants are to be congratulated upon the success. The thanks of the Auxiliary is extended to Mr. J. M. Greene for loaning an Edison for the occasion.

THE BRITISH PRESS ENTHUSIASTIC OVER WILSON'S MESSAGE

Gave Powerful Impetus to the American Plan For a Complete, Open, Frank and Joint Re-Statement of Allied War Aims

APPROVAL GENERAL

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Dec. 5.— President Wilson's message to Congress gave a powerful impetus to-day to the American plan for a complete, open, frank and joint re-statement of allied war aims.

The Daily News' editorial comment endorsed the plan. Other newspapers joining in the general chorus of hearty approval of the whole tone of Wilson's address, indicated their belief in the necessity for a repledging of the hosts of democracy.

The Daily News says:

"If the President could have said earlier what he said to-day, and if in Britain and France and Italy the responsible leaders of these nations had made his language their own, Russia might to-day be driving the German armies from her borders."

The Daily News held up the President's speech to more praise than it has greeted any previous utterance of the American executive, judging it "another example of comprehension by which he clarified fundamental issues of the war."

"It would be affection to pretend that the speech echoes the declaration of the allied statesmen," the editorial continued. "His vision comprehends the world, theirs only half."

The Times still refused to-day to agree with the President's differention between the German government and the German people.

"President Wilson," the "Thunderer" said, "has re-stated the allies' purpose with uncompromising force. With a straightforward statement of war aims, the last hopes of the pacifists must founder."

"As a re-affirmation of previous war utterances, the speech is of first-class importance," asserted the Chronicle.

"Clear, far-sighted and statesmanlike" was the Express' opinion.

Practically every editorial referred to the address as the most emphatic announcement of America's determination to wage war to the limit. The President's recommendation that war be declared on Austria was regarded as one further evidence of the inflexible determination.

Contradicted The Evidence Of Mr. F. J. Squire At Hearing

(Special to The Examiner.)

HAVELOCK, Dec. 5.— An enquiry into the fires that occurred here in the early morning of Saturday, November 10th, was opened in the town hall yesterday afternoon by Deputy Fire Marshall Rogers of Toronto. Chief Thompson and Detective Newhall were present from Peterborough. The chief interest of the hearing was the evidence of Mr. F. J Squire, who was chairman of the military tribunal in this village. His testimony was contradicted by witnesses at a number of points. The hearing is continuing this afternoon and it is expected that startling developments may be announced.

Frank Jenne says:

A PROBLEM FOR KAISER

Has to Reconcile His Dealings With Ultra Radical Russian Bolsheviki With His Non-Recognition of German Socialists

AFRAID OF LATTER

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Arthur E. Mann.)

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Kaiser Wilhelm has a delicate little problem on his hands to-day. It is to reconcile his dealings with the ultra-radical Bolsheviki and his tacit recognition of such forces, with the non-recognition of even less radical Socialists in Germany.

Reports from Germany indicate the Kaiser's dilemna is an acute one. He is risking the loss of his own prestige in negotiating with "wild-eyed" Russian Socialists. It seems a foregone conclusion that the radical German Socialist wing, Ledebour's party, Haases' party and Liebknecht's party will demand more recognition from the Germant government when that government gets through lauding and applauding the Bolsheviki for peace arrangements.

Situation In Russia Is Unique

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The situation in Russia is unique in history, according to the Petrograd correspondent of the Morning Post, writing Saturday but is is not yet advisable to attempt to raise the curtain upon the "mysteries of the tragi-comic drama." The correspondent insists that "Russia will right herself if generously allowed the necessary latitude by puzzled allies, and next spring it will put new armies in the field to fight the invader with the success that marked the Russian efforts earlier in the war."

LINE MAY HAVE TO BE ADJUSTED

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Speaking of German attacks on the British salient in Cambrai area, General Maurice said: "The enemy has to certain extent got us into an awkward position, and some adjustment of our line may be necessary. We may have to make slight withdrawals on the north of the salient."

BALANCE IN OUR FAVOUR

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Dec. 5.— "For the first time since May, 1915, the Germans captured British guns at Cambrai," said Gen. F. B. Maurice, director of operations to-day. "We captured 138 of the enemy's guns at Cambrai alone. Therefore there is no reason for us to be ashamed at the balance."

More German Troops Are Massing On Cambrai Front

Although Crown Prince Rupprecht's First Tremendous Blow Failed to Reach Its Objectives British Officers Look For Resumption of the Fighting.

GUN FIRE INCREASING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Dec. 5.—Germany hasn't finished her effort out of Cambrai. Fighting was still continuing to-day. It had abated somewhat from the ferocity of the past few days. Nevertheless British aviators reported more German troops massing, more guns being hurriedly yanked to battle-front positions, and every indication that Crown Prince Rupprecht was far from giving up after having failed in his initial attempts.

Moreover, artillery fire was increasing to-day. British officers believed the most critical moment around Cambrai had passed to-day. They were equally certain, however, that Hindenburg would not allow matters to stand where they now are. They looked for the resumption of fighting on the same tremendous scale of the past few days, which has strewn German corpses around the Cambrai bulge.

HINDENBURG THERE.

It was rumoured to-day that Hindenburg had either been on the Cambrai front or was there now. So far Germany's most powerful efforts have failed to flatten out Byng's bump in the direction of the German depot city. The German's first objectives were not even reached. The completeness of the failure of German plans was illustrated in prisoners' statements to-day that German Uhlans were held for days in readiness before the lines for the break in the British front that the Germans schemed to attain, but which they did not achieve.

ARTILLERY FIRE INCREASING.

The artillery fire in the whole Cambrai sector was increasing to-day, and the massing of more infantry forces forecasts another drive. The German reinforcements have come from various parts of the western front. I was in Flanders Sunday during a local British advance in the Passchendaele region, and at that time comment was evoked on the fact that the German barrage was nine minutes late and of much lighter force than that in any previous fighting. The answer was apparent. Either the British guns had knocked the enemy artillery, or the Germans had been withdrawing their pieces for use on another front. The latter was undoubtedly the correct assumption. Apparently Hindenburg and Rupprecht will continue the battle at Cambrai as long as troops are available.

Every British officer and Tommy is confident the Boche will be unable to make much headway.

INTERESTING PROGRAMME FOR FRIDAY'S MEETING

The public generally is reminded of the meeting in Victoria Hall on Friday evening when the Ladies' Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. will be organized and a report presented from the committee in regard to the club rooms. A most interesting programme has been arranged. Mrs. M. K. Douglas, recently home from overseas service, and Mrs. John Allen, will give addresses, and Messrs. Douglas Carlisle and Chas. Coleman have consented to sing. The public is cordially invited, and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance of ladies.

Mr. Burnham's "Do Nothing Policy" Is Roundly Scored

Metal Products Company Should Not Have Been Allowed to Get Away From Peterborough--Burnham Doing Nothing to Help Food Production

Mr. R. R. Hall addressed a fair attendance of the electors at May's schoolhouse last evening.

In the course of his address he referred to the "do nothing" policy adopted by Mr. Burnham. Mr. Hall said, "Read for yourselves Mr. Burnham's address to the electors, which you will find published in the Daily Review and you will find a "no nothing" policy.

We all know Great Britain has appealed to Canada for ships and food. To this appeal of the British Government Mr. Burnham adpots a "do nothing policy."

The Peterborough Metal Products owed its existence to Government contracts which it had received while located in Peterborough, and which should have been carried out in Peterborough.

The Company gave employment to a large number of men. It had a pay roll of $30,000 a month. This Company never should have been allowed to carry away these Government contracts to the Province of Quebec.

The working men of Peterborough and their families should not have been thrown out of employment to suit the selfish purposes of this Company with the winter approaching.

Consider the loss and inconvenience that has been needlessly inflicted upon this Company's many employees by reason of this Company carrying away from this City these large government contracts.

Loss to the City.

Consider the loss that has been inflicted upon this City by losing the benefit of a pay roll of $30,000 a month.

Consider the fact that a large number of these employees have been forced to go to the Province of Quebec at their own expense to hold down their jobs with this Company.

Had Mr. Burnham exercised the influences which a member of Parliament could exercise with the Government this industry would have been saved to Peterborough.

But what can the electors expect from a candidate who adopts a "do nothing" policy.

The Food Question.

Mr. Burnham does not even think it worth while to address the farmers of this riding and, to ascertain their views how food production can be increased nor has Mr. Burnham even advocated how food production can be increased. He simply adopts a "do nothing" policy.

If food production is not increased then the people of Peterborough must expect that the cost of living will still go higher. Food will become scarcer and the workingmen of Peterborough will be forced to adopt a lower standard of living and eat poorer food.

Mr. Burnham advocates no policy which will bring relief, but simply adopts a "do nothing" policy.

It is known that many families in Peterborough are at their wits end to know where they are going to get the next bag of coal to keep them from freezing. Mr. Burnham knows that the Government should see that the railways furnish the cars and make provision for a prompt and immediate supply of coal.

The people who want coal, and have the money to buy coal are forced to beg for coal from the dealers, who would only be too glad to supply it if the Government furnished them with the cars that would enable them to meet the wants of the people and here again we find on the coal question Mr. Burnham adopts a "do nothing" policy.

WHO IS RIGHT?

No doubt reinforcements for the hard worked Canadian soldiers at the front are sorely needed. But is the need as great as the Union government supporters assert, in order to sugar-coat the conscription bill?

General Mewburn, the Minister of Militia, speaking at Ottawa, is reported as saying that there are 143,000 Canadian soldiers in France, 116,000 in England, and 35,000 Canadians under arms and under training.

If these figures are correct—and the Minister of Militia should be a reliable authority —the need for reinforcements is not as great as it is represented to be, though great enough. General Mewburn's figures don't agree with those of Hon. Mr. Rowell; but Mr. Rowell is a lawyer with a brief to make out a case for conscription.

Can the Grit members of the Borden government, live five years in its atmosphere without moral asphyxiation?

WILL HE GET THE CHANCE?

A prominent journalistic supporter of the Union or Borden government, makes much of the declaration of Hon. Frank Carvell, Minister of Public Work, that he will put an end to patronage and graft. To cook a hare—first catch the hare. Hon. Mr. Carvell must be sure that he will have the chance to work the reforms he no doubt honestly intends.

When the elections are over, Sir Borden, if he succeeds in getting popular whitewashing of his government's record, will have little use for the Grit leaders that pulled his chestnuts out of the fire. Mr. Carvell will probably have to reckon with Hon. Bob. Rogers, ex-Minister of Public Works, who is not much in evidence at present, but, after disinfection, has been placed in cold storage. Sir Robert wouldn't commit the outrage of whitewashing Hon. Robert Rogers and let him loose "for keeps." Mr. Carvell and his Liberal associates in the Borden government, may reasonably regard their usefulness as gone after the boots are cleaned.

The Globe admits that under the Borden government there was a "patronage orgy."

ET TU, BRUTE!

Hon. Mr. Rowell said at Port Dover that the foes of anti-conscriptionists that Canada should let the United States do her fighting was "the most cowardly argument he ever heard."

But the Borden government, of which Mr. Rowell is for the moment a tolerated member, not only held the principle of this "cowardly argument," but acted upon it.

For a century Canada accepted the protection of the British navy—let it do Canada's fighting.

In 1909 Sir Wilfrid Laurier wiped out Canada's disgrace in this regard by passing an act providing for Canada building and having a navy of her own. But Sir Robert Borden heeded the "cowardly argument" that Britain should continue to do Canada's fighting.

The Nationalists of Quebec, opposed to any help to Britain, saw conscription in a Canadian Navy, sharpened their knife for Laurier, and Mr. Borden backed them. To please the Nationalists and win their support, he agreed to kill the Canadian navy, and in return helped, with party funds, the election of 28 or 30 Nationalist supporters of his government. Besides, he gave Bourassa full swing in Quebec, and allowed him to preach the damnable doctrine of Canadian abstention from Britain's wars; and it is due to the compact between Bourassa and Borden that we have, as is asserted, a solid Quebec to-day arrayed against Canada's participation in the war.

The Globe's eulogy of Carvell as the "wiper out" of the Morines, the Flemmings, the De Witt Pisters and the J. Wesley Allisons, is the strongest condemnation of the government of which he is a member, that made or permitted these outrages of which they were guilty.

HAVE WE A CANADIAN KAISER?

Canada is helping fight the battle of democracy—the undoing of foreign tyrants, while we are asked to submit to petty tyranny and mildly diluted despotism at home.

Though Sir Robert Borden is described by his enemies, some of whom have become his most adulatory defenders, as a weakling, he is no little of a dictator.

Without any authority from his colleagues or the parliament of the people, he declared that Canada should furnish a fighting force of 500,000 soldiers.

When by official neglect of voluntary recruiting; when, after he had instructed Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia to "go slow on recruiting" so that the profits of munition makers should not be lessened by scarcity of labour, he saw that his lacking 100,000 recruits were not being enrolled. Without consulting his colleagues—unless possibly Hon. Bob. Rogers—or the people's representatives, he announced conscription

To make conscription go down, our autocratic Premier procured an Election Act to insure sanction of its application. As if he had taken lessons from the big Kaiser, he devised and concocted the most tyrannous Franchise Act ever imposed upon a free people. He made a "scrap of paper" of the solemn act of naturalisation that confers the gift of British citizenship, and pledges the honour of the country to the full enjoyment of its privileges.

He enfranchised a part of the women of Canada and disfranchised thousands of women, almost as good, perhaps, who enjoyed the franchise under provincial laws He changed the basis of enumeration and registration to give his government discriminatory control In a word, he loaded the franchise dice beautifully

When he saw that a union government would be a safe shelter from the storms of popular indignation over his stupendous war maladministration he appointed himself leader and formed a union government, which he has endowed with the spirit of petty dictation that he has practised in other ways

He not only stuffed the ballot boxes by virtue of his disfranchising act, but he has assumed to dictate who should be candidates

Sir Robert Borden also ventures to modify the Military Service Act. He fears that strict enforcement will lose him votes. He therefore tells farmers' sons that the Act will be modified in their favour. He tells Classes C, D, and E that they need not fear the force of the Act. He meets the charge that there has been too free exemption by tribunals by the statement that there will be appeals to the end that the Act shall be rigidly enforced. He plays safe every way. The elections will be over and the votes he is fishing for secured, perhaps, and then —but that's another story

This is the second union government Sir Robert Borden has formed. The first was formed in 1911—a union government between Conservatives and Nationalists

ASKING A GOOD DEAL.

Sir Sam Hughes, in his scorching letter to Sir Robert Borden, calling attention to the evil results of Sir Robert's spineless and supine war administration, says that it was not only unjust and cruel to the soldiers, and contrary to military success, "but it must politically reflect seriously upon the government."

Nonsense. We are asked to relieve the government of all responsibility for its past sins. We must forgive and forget and "go it blind"—must trust the highest interests of the country to a government which, according to itself—one of its members—has muddled war work, but above all, has imperilled the government's reputation.

We must overlook everything the Borden government has done wrong and take it to our heart as something upon whose integrity, whose return to power, the issue of the war depends—something without which the allied cause must collapse.

All the Borden government organs take this tone, and a large number of Liberal newspapers, who at one time in moments of sincere candour, beat the Borden government with many stripes, join the chorus. The great Globe, is one of these that is willing to swallow its own record of criticism and castigation. It is now an out-and-out, if not abject, and grovelling supporter of the Borden government, which has not been purged of any of its crimes, nor relieved of any responsibility in respect of them, simply because Sir Robert Borden has chosen to include a few Liberals, and call it a "union" government.

In this connection it may be well to appeal from "Philip drunk to Philip sober"—from the Globe in its new-found political fellowship to the Globe when it saw things in their real light. On this page is published an article from the Globe, when it was a recognised partisan critic of the Borden government.

In this article, published as recently as the 23rd of last April, the Globe truthfully says:

"The spirit of Bordenism is the spirit of faction and disunion. . . . Bordenism has been found wanting. . . . The leadership of Sir Robert Borden during the past two years has been lacking in the masculine qualities of statesmanship, that are indispensable to the successful prosecution of tre war abroad, and to the sane and practical conduct of affairs at home."

That is pretty plain speaking, and does not argue any great love for, or confidence in, Sir Robert Borden or the Borden government. But there is more and stronger proof. The Globe says:

"Shortcomings and blunders might be forgiven any government suddenly brought face to face with unprecedented conditions of war, but the offencies of the Borden government smell to heaven and strike at the foundations of national character. They sap and undermine the codes of honour and national decency, to which Ministers of the Crown are supposed to conform. Doubly heinous are the sins of the Borden government in the light of the great issues of this war, issues that distinguish between right and wrong and that raise an impassible barrier between us and the Prussian foe."

There is more in the same train, but who would gather the full force of the Globe's condemnation of Sir Robert Borden, his government and its work, should carefully read the article published on this page and then set it against its present attitude of almost sycophancy towards Sir Robert Borden and his still existent government.

He has not changed since the condemnation was written. He is the same weak leader, that created the spirit of Bordenism— "the spirit of faction and disunion." The same shameless record of the government which he permitted, still "smells to heaven."

The weak leader that "flouted honesty and decency in public life" is the self-constituted leader of a so-called Union government we are asked to trust blindly, unshriven as it is, of its administrative crimes, that not only wasted the national substance in compiling a record that "smells to heaven," but impaired the efficiency and imperilled the health and lives of our soldiers.

If the Globe's condemnation of last April was as sincere as it is true, the injunction to forget and forgive is a little too much for human credulity—the indictment still holds, and the offenders are asking for unlimited endorsation and confidence at the hands of the people.

If the "Union" government is not the Borden government, what has become of the Borden government? It still holds office; constitutionally the same government as it was last April, with the same burden of guilt, the same responsibility towards an outraged country and a betrayed soldiery. We are asked to trust the Borden government under the disguise of a Union government. If by a loyalist stampede by which it gained power six years ago, it succeeds—and this scheme helped by "doctored" voters' lists, by a Prussian franchise enormity, may succeed — the credulous listeners to the voice of the deceiver, may prepare for such another condemnation of the "Union" government as the Globe warrantly inflicted upon virtually the same government in its old form, in April, 1917.

When Food Controller Hanna failed to control the price of butter, he promised importation of margarine, so that the poor man's children should not eat dry bread. This promise goes into the same discard as Premier Borden's promise of appointing a Labour representative in his government.

A few hats are made entirely of chenille braid.

THE MENACE OF BORDENISM PUNGENTLY DEMONSTRATED

From the Toronto Globe of Monday, April 23rd, 1917

The spirit of Bordenism is the spirit of faction and disunion. Leadership in these perilous times should transcend all considerations of party, and, by its lofty appeals to the sentiment of patriotism, by its wide vision and masculine grasp of affairs, and by its broad and tolerate sympathies attract to the side of the Government and to the service of the nation the enthusiastic and loyal support of every citizen. Bordenism has been tried and found wanting.

The leadership of Sir Robert Borden during the past two years has been lacking in the masculine qualities of statesmanship that are indispensable to the successful prosecution of war abroad and to the same and practical conduct of affairs at home. Shortcomings and unavoidable blunders might be forgiven any government suddenly brought face to face with unprecedented conditions of war, but the offences of the Borden Cabinet smell to Heaven and strike at the foundations of national character. They sap and undermine the codes of honour and standards of public decency to which their public conduct is judged. Doubly heinous are the sins of the Borden Government in the light of the great issues of this war, issues that distinguish between right and wrong and that raise an insuperable moral barrier between Canada and the Prussian foe. While Canadian troops are facing death that British ideals may prevail throughout the Dominion, the prime minister, Sir Robert Borden, shows his contempt for these ideals by flirting with popular applause in the British Isles in the company of Hon. Robert Rogers, Borden and Rogerism! In days when Canada is making tremendous sacrifices, Sir Robert Borden flouts honour and decency in public life and humiliates his country by sailing to England in the company of a minister who is placed outside the pale by the findings of the Galt Commission. Under Sir Robert Borden's leadership or lack of leadership, the country has drifted from its safe moorings. No one can say what the future may bring forth. Bordenism has failed Canada in days of war; it is an unsafe guide for the country in the pregnant days of peace that lie immediately ahead.

Bordenism has failed not only as an instrument of war, but also as an instrument of reconstruction after the war. The first step toward any successful plan of national reconstruction is the creation of a national atmosphere, in which all who love their country and desire to serve her may be gathered beneath a common flag. Bordenism is a menace to national unity. Throughout the election campaign of 1911 and during the intervening period it has been a disintegrating influence in the life of Canada and a serious weakness to the Empire. Instead of consolidating the forces of the nation, Bordenism has intensified party divisions and encouraged the growth of discord and faction. Signs are not wanting that, in sheer desperation, the Bordenites intend to resort to the rusty weapons of the moral assasin. Chief among these is the cry of disloyalty against all who condemn the hopeless incompetence and inefficiency of the Borden Government in the conduct of the war, and its lack of foresight and preparedness in dealing with the problems that are arising out of the war. The Liberals of Canada are not unaccustomed to the cry of disloyalty, by which the Tories always seek to hide the poverty of their arguments against reforms. This war and the sacrifices it entails on all classes in the community make Liberals less prone than formerly to tolerate the dangerous firebrands who serve the cause of Bordenism by defaming the character of loyal Liberals. The arrogant pretensions of Tories who boast a monopoly of the civic virtues and who parade their loyalty to the throne with offensive vulgarity might be laughed at by Liberals were it not part of the systematic propaganda on which Bordenism and Quebec Nationalism floated into office in 1911, and by means of which the same unholy alliance, with its unsavory record of the past five years, hopes to maintain its power and influence during the coming period of reconstruction.

Hard to Drop Meat?

All depends on what you eat as a substitute. It is a good time to study "food value." You may be eating the wrong foods, the foods that cost most and give the least nutriment. Shredded Wheat Biscuit contains more real, body-building nutriment, pound for pound, than meat, eggs or potatoes and costs much less. Two of these Biscuits with milk and a little fruit make a nourishing meal at a cost of a few cents. Make Shredded Wheat your "meat." A satisfying breakfast on which to start the day's work. It is ready-cooked and ready-to-eat. Made in Canada.

A Nephew Of Peterboro' Man Killed In Action

Lieut.-Col. Joseph Mills Has Lost Two Nephews Since the First of the Year—Struck by a Shell

"Jack" Mills, one of the best known of Kingston's students and athletes, has given his life in the war, according to a letter received on Monday by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mills, 120 University Avenue, Kingston. The letter was sent by Lieut. Milner, P.P.C.L.I., after a conversation with "Jack's" chum, who was wounded and is now in England. It appears that "Jack" was struck by a shell on the morning of October 30th and killed instantly. This took place when an advance was being made.

"Jack" Mills enlisted three years ago in Queen's Engineers and went overseas with the reinforcing company to the Princess Pats, being in the wiring division of that famous regiment. Some time ago he was wounded in the left shoulder.

The dead hero was born in Kingston twenty-two years ago and attended the local schools and Collegiate Institute and also took one year's work in Science at Queen's. In sporting circles he was always prominent, being in 1913 and 1914 goalkeeper for Edmonton hockey team.

He was a nephew of Lieut.-Col. Joseph Mills of Peterborough. This is the second nephew of Lieut.-Col. Mills who has been killed in action since the first of the year

There is left to mourn his loss his parents, one sister, Miss Florence May, at home, and five brothers, Dr. R. M., in Brooklyn; George W., and Herbert H. at home, Thomas Stanley in Ottawa, and Gordon K., with the Flying Corps in Texas.

The Food Value of Good Milk

That is—Pure, Clarified and Pasteurized Milk

This is a matter that every person should understand for reasons of Economy, as well as for its relations to Health.

Milk is one of the most wonderful foods. It is one of the cheapest foods on the market. It is also one of the most easily digested foods. It is very nourishing. It contains the chief parts of the different foods commonly used on the table.

Milk is the equal to a meal consisting of meat and eggs, sugar and cereals, oils and fats, with salt and water. A milk diet, therefore, is like a mixed diet. Milk contains all the elements necessary to sustain life. As to the comparative cost of milk as a food, it gives more for the money than any animal food you use.

To get the nourishment contained in a quart of milk—according to Prof. Rosenau of Harvard—you would have to buy and prepare ¾ pound of beef, or 8 eggs, or 2 pounds of chicken, or 2 pounds of cod-fish. Each of these cost you more, to say nothing of the time, labor and fuel required in preparation.

BEGIN TO-DAY TO DRINK MORE MILK. TEACH YOUR FAMILY TO KNOW ITS VALUE.

MUSIC A PROFESSION FOR THE BLIND

In the animal kingdom it is observed that no creatures are favourites, but a certain compensation balances every gift and every defect. That is a truth expounded in his Essay on Compensation in which Emerson puts it down for a fact that for everything one has missed he has gained something else. When Nature deprives a person of the sense of sight, it is an immeasurable loss, yet that same Nature, once thought cruel, now beneficient, makes up the deficiency by an extraordinary endowment along some other line.

So often it is that finest of compensations, the talent for music. There is no doubt that music is one of the most suitable professions for the blind. In a Government report recently issued in Britain on the welfare of the blind it is stated that there are almost 1,000—947 to be exact—persons in the United Kingdom thus afflicted who are following the professions of music, making of musical instruments, piano tuning, etc. There are at least one hundred blind organists in Britain, many of whom are choir masters as well. It is expected that these numbers will be materially increased owing to the fact that a greater amount of attention is now being given to music in hte institutions for the blind.

The aforesaid report shows from an investigation among several hundred persons that 86 per cent. of the men and 81 per cent. of the women are known to have been succesful in their musical occupations. This report suggests the desirability for a blind person to combine the position of organist, or music teacher, or professional singer, as the case may be with that of pianoforte tuning, so that in the event of a falling off in his professional work he can resort to the more practical occupation, or the other way around, as circumstances dictate.

CITY COUNCIL CONSIDER WAYS AND MEANS OF PREVENTING ACCIDENTS

Several Recommendations Will Be Forwarded to the Board of Railway Commissioners—To Prevent Level Crossing Accidents.

In reference to a communication from the Railway Commissioners of Ontario asking for suggestions regarding the prevention of accidents to motor cars at level railway crossings, the City Council has recommended that City Clerk Armstrong reply as follows:

(a) Where possible, a view of the railway should be provided so that a motorist would see an approaching train when he is at least 300 feet from the crossing.

(b) That signs should be placed on each approach to the railway 300 feet from the crossing on the right side of the approaching motor car, painted white, and low enough so that they will be illuminated by the headlights of the motor car, and that they should not be placed in the centre of the highway.

(c) That humps or hog-backs should not be placed on the highways.

(d) It should not be necessary for motorists to stop before crossing a railway, but they should slow down.

(e) That either bells or wig-wag signals are effective warnings.

(f) That whistle signals should be blown at least 600 feet from the crossing, and the bell rung continuously while the train is approaching the crossing.

(g) That the expense of bells or other protection be borne by the railways.

LAST REGULAR MEETING OF BOARD OF EDUCATION

New Additions to the Public School Teaching Staff—Accounts Passed —Not One Day Lost on Teaching Staff During Month of November Through Illness.

The last regular meeting of the Board of Education for the year 1917 was held last evening with the following members present: Messrs. V. Eastwood, chairman, W. H. Hill, J. W. Miller, A. A. Fowler, J. Crane, J. B. McGrath, R. Denne and Dr. F. C. Neal. The members lost no time in cleaning up the business in hand, as many of them were anxious to put in an appearance at the Commencement Exercises that were being held in the Collegiate Institute.

School Inspector Mowat, who was present, reported that during the month of November not one day was lost by members of the teaching staff through illness or other causes. This is unusual as it is satisfactory.

David Quinlan, of Ennismore, applied for a rebate of Collegiate Institute fees, his daughter having attended for only a portion of the year. The matter was referred to the Supervision committee with power to act.

Accounts Presented.

Coleman Bros $100, Mail and Empire $7, Globe Printing Co. $7.30, Kingan Hardware Co. $2.40, White & Ackford $2.50, Taylor and Hall $3.82, Elliot's store $2.50, J. Hunter 50c., G. M. Confusion Over The New Parcel Regulations

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Dec. 5.— The announcement from the Canadian High Commissioner to the effect that Christmas parcels to civilians in Great Britain are prohibited entry, has caused considerable confusion and the Postmaster-General's Department and the Department of Trade and Commerce are being bombarded with enquiries from all parts of the Dominion. As a consequence the matter is being further investigated.

As a matter of fact it is pointed out that many Canadians have been attempting with some success to evade the British import restrictions by sending tea, coffee, sugar, cocoa, foodstuffs to England by parcel post. This fact may be responsible for the general order covering all parcels.

Enquiry is made, however, to ascertain whether the order really applies to all parcels to civilians or simply to parcels containing prohibited articles. The [illegible] does not apply to soldiers' parcels at all.

THE POPE IS NOT ASSISTING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ROME, Dec. 5.—The Pope is not assisting and does not intend to assist in the negotiations for peace or an armistice between Russia and Germany, the United Press was authorized to state by the Vatican to-day.

SOLDIERS HOME FROM OVERSEAS

Mrs. Robert Glover, 177 Adeline street, has received word of the death of her two soldier brothers, Ptes. Walter and Wm. James. One was killed in action and the other has died in England. Her friends will sympathize with her in her double bereavement in the loss of her only two brothers.

Scene from "LILAC TIME," which comes to "The Grand" Friday and Saturday, December 7 and 8.

Speaking of the play which appeared at The Russell Theatre, Ottawa, on Saturday last, the Ottawa Journal says in part:

As a war play, full of virile situations and genuine heart interest, "Lilac Time," presented at the Russell on Saturday evening, left little to be desired. It is strong, stirring play, full of action, and realistically portraying a typical "Somewhere in France." Most of the characters wear khaki.

Although it would be hard to find a war play with more success and accuracy.

HOTELS IN GOOD SHAPE AS REGARDS FIRE PROTECTION

Following is a report of the inspection of the local hotels by Fire Chief Grange:

Peterborough, 4th Dec., 1917.

To the Chairman and Board of License Commissioners, City.

Gentlemen,

I beg leave to advise your honourable body of my first annual inspection of licensed hotels, made on the 26th day of November, in accordance with City By-law No. 1620. On the occasion of my first visit since I became Chief of the Fire Department I was accompanied by Mr. Joseph Stewart, License Inspector for this district. We went through all the buildings and premises in connection with the ten hotels, commencing at the top floor and working our way down through each floor into every room, and also testing the efficiency and strength of the permanent fire escapes, all of which I found to be in perfect order in every respect. We found that the bedrooms of all the hotels, both those provided for guests and servants, were provided with the regulation rope for fire escapes. In Mr. Hogan's hotel, East City, the rope had been removed from Room No. 2. Ropes also were removed in the Montgomery Hotel from Rooms No. 6, 4, 5, and 22. Ropes also were removed in the Montreal House from Room No. 9, and also in the Grand Hotel from Room No. 3, and also in the Empress Hotel ropes were removed from Rooms No. 142 and 125, and also in the White Hotel rope was removed from Room No. 11.

I notified the proprietors of each hotel who had ropes removed from their different rooms that I would give them two days to replace those ropes. On my second visit I found that those ropes had been replaced, except in the Empress Hotel. The proprietor, Mr. Graham, informed me that the ropes had been ordered, and as soon as they were delivered, Mr. Graham would see that the ropes were placed in the rooms that were without them.

We also inspected the storm windows on the different hotels, and found them to be fitted with hooks and eyes fastened on the inside. We didn't insist on having hinges placed on the outside, as it was an easy matter in case of fire to open the windows from the inside and let them fall out. The Hogan Hotel, East City, storm windows were fastened with a button on the outside, which was dangerous in case of fire. Those windows we had fitted with two hinges on one side, and hooks and eyes on the other side, hooks to fasten on the inside of the window, so in the event of a fire it would be an easy matter to unhook the window from the inside and allow the window to swing outwards.

I have much pleasure in reporting to your Board that on the occasion of my visit, nothing of an offensive nature was found to exist. The premises were clean and no combustible rubbish was found in any of the hotels. I may further add that no person was advised ahead of time of our visit. The hotelkeepers seemed to take kindly to the inspection, and assisted us in every way possible.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

I have the honour to be, sirs,
Your obedient servant,
George Grange,
Chief of Fire Dept.

Spent Enough To Build A Fine Home

Slater Says Money He Paid Out For Medicines Was Thrown Away —Tanlac Ends Troubles

"If I had all the money I have spent on useless medicines during the last few years I could build me a fine home," said William Slater of 10 Jillison Avenue, Toronto, the other day Mr. Slater is a well-known employe of the Canadian Pacific railway and works in the roundhouse at Lambton.

"For the past nine years," he continued, "I had such sharp rheumatic pains from my left shoulder down that I couldn't sleep or even lie on my left side, and sometimes my limbs felt like they were paralyzed. If I sat in one position long I would become so stiff it would almost kill me to straighten up, and I was nervous and irritable all the time. I didn't rest well and got up in the mornings feeling so miserable I could hardly drag myself off to work. I fell off in weight, had no life nor energy and was just going from bad to worse.

"One day an old friend said to me: 'Billie, why don't you try Tanlac? I've tried it and I know it will help you if anything will,' so to please him I took his advice, and now I can sleep on my left side with ease, those old pains are going away and I never any more. My nerves don't worry of life and energy and ready for any me and I get up in the mornings full of life and energy and ready for any kind of job; I have gained seven pounds and feel in better spirits than I have in years.

"My daughter, who was in a badly run-down condition, has begun taking Tanlac, too, and though she has been using it but a short time her improvement is really wonderful. My wife is simply delighted with the way Tanlac is building us up so well and strong again, and the whole family is now boosting Tanlac every opportunity we get.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements must, to secure insertion, be signed with which thus assumes the responsibility.

Sir: Will you please allow me space in your valuable paper to ask you a question. By whose or what authority have those women that are going around from house to house calling on the women that have votes and deliberately asking them what way they are going to vote? Now a woman that has the nerve to walk into a house and pry into such private business is as bold and as brazen as brass, and must have gall as big as a wash tub.

A woman in East City yesterday going from house to house, asking what way the women were going to vote, was told by one woman that she was going to vote for Mr. Hall. She saw that woman take out her pencil and mark her name, and also her daughter's name. Now the people are alarmed about such work—women prying around from house to house with a list of names, and asking questions, and prying into such private affairs, and when she don't get an answer to suit, takes her pencil and strokes out her name. Be wise women. Don't let any person know your private business. Very soon we will have some of those business women calling on us, directing us how to wash our face. That will be the next if the Borden government is returned. The last call was, don't eat so much. We are getting so sick of such work and such ignorance—it is very trying on our nerves.

An East City Woman.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—At the January session of the County Council, 1917, Mr. Rye reported Hogg's Bridge to be in a dangerous condition, when he was corrected and assured that it was raised and rebuilt in 1916 and carrying all traffic.

At the June session he reported that only temporary repairs had been made to Hogg's Bridge, asking for another inspection, and when the Warden and the Chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee arrived at the bridge they were so surprised at the misrepresentations of Mr. Rye no remarks were then made. The other bridges were then visited the same day, at his request, and not only was he not sure of the road, but he did not know county bridges from township bridges, and he did not know the name of any bridge, save Hogg's, although the financial statement shows one day and twenty miles claimed by Mr. Rye inspecting Monaghan bridges prior to the June session.—Respectfully yours,

F. J. Bullied,
Chairman of Roads Committee.

Editor of Examiner.

Sir,—As a ratepayer I wish to protest the action of the Council in loaning the band instruments lately used by the 93rd Battalion to the 57th Regiment.

Where was the 57th Band during the summer months? They never played their usual concerts. Are the citizens of this city to provide by public subscription instruments for the 57th Regiment? Let the Government supply them, if they are worn out. It looks to me that it is a well-devised scheme on the part of a few to keep down the War Veterans' Society from having a band. And who are more entitled to them than the men who have been overseas, who, when this war is over, will be nearly 2,000 strong in this city, and will require a band. I think the other party is afraid of the musical opposition they will have, therefore we think that now would be a good time to kill such an occasion arising.

The War Veterans are at present nearly two hundred strong, and men are returning every day, therefore as a subscriber to the funds which bought those instruments I think it would be in the best interests of the city to hand over the above to the G.W.V.A. and end forever this question, for no one but the above is entitled to them.

If they are to be loaned, why should not the Salvation Army Band have the half of them; they sent far more bandsmen from this city than did the 57th Band, and are deserving of consideration. They did not back out of their concerts last Summer.

Give them to where they belong (the G.W.V.A.), the men who have earned them while the others stayed at home.

RATEPAYER.

Keene, Ont., Nov. 30, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Where is the justice of selective conscription? A farmer owning two hundred acres or more has three sons who are exempted because they work on farms. The father is well off and can keep his dependents if he did not work an acre of land, and the British Empire would not greatly suffer if he did not. He has little worry, his sons will not go to war, and can earn seventy-five dollars a month and their board.

On the other hand, a poor labourer in the city earning two dollars and a half a day has three sons. He may or may not own his home. He is sixty years old or perhaps older. Consequently he can not expect to work much longer. If he has kept out of debt and lived he has done well in these times. Knowing the lack of an education he has tried to educate his sons in order that they can demand a better position than his own. They come under the Military Service Act and receive no exemption. They receive a dollar and ten cents a day while the members of the Exemption Tribunals draw ten dollars and possibly more.

Imagine men sitting on Exemption Tribunals and deciding the fate of labouring men while they, themselves, have never worked in a factory or on a farm, and, in some cases, have been so fortunate as to never have worked at all. Can they see things in the light of a working man? Can they decide whether a man is indispensable in a factory when they know nothing at all about the inside of one? Their decisions, in some cases, would be ludicrous if they were not so tragic.

Again, I ask, where is the justice under the Military Service Act of 1917 or, as it is popularly known, "Selective conscription."

Thanking you, Sir, for your valuable space in this paper, I remain,
Sincerely Yours,
"KEENE"

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—It makes me absolutely tired when I hear politicians and mono-maniac patriots talk of women working our farms. It is true women can do a great deal and are doing a great share both in this country and in England, but farming here and in England are not parallel at all.

I am a farmer's wife and have a practical and theoretical knowledge of all work on the farm, and when I hear a man say "Let the women run the farms" I don't think he knows what he is talking about, or else he lacks good sense and judgment. It reminds me of the line "with sated heart he hears the pant of toiling hinds with brown arms bare and wearies in his easy chair."

Not many of us farm women had much experience holding down an easy-chair this last year, and some of our family doctors are sharing the harvest; they tell us that a woman's organs are not constituted to stand the heavy lifting and outdoor labour on the farm; and that is why farmers' wives are prematurely old at forty.

Female help is almost unobtainable here, too, as the farmers' daughters find the work and wages more attractive in the factories and have a better time working in town.

The men around here who depended last season on female help have very little plowing done this fall, and are letting their land run to pasture.

The farming community is becoming bored by the two songs: "Let the women do the farm work" and "Speed up production," as the two are not at all compatible.

FARMER'S WIFE.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—While reading in last Saturday's evening paper the article headed "Production," a suggestion came to me as to the securing of farm help for greater production. It is that the Government conscript all eligibles down in Quebec. There are millions of slackers there, and so allow the farm hands exemption in other provinces for greater production. Ontario Province has done its share in voluntary enlistment.—Yours,

Mrs. A. Hope.

THE FINEST PICTURE WE HAVE SHOWN

"Les Miserables" at the Empire To-day and To-morrow

The Empire, always on the look-out for high class pictures, has secured for to-night and to-morrow "Les Miserables" from Victor Hugo's famous masterpiece. This picture played all one week to crowded houses in Toronto and has to appear again by special request.

Chicago, New York, St. Louis and all big American cities speak most flatteringly and enthusiastically of it.

Victor Hugo's life story of Jean Valjean, marks a distinct epoch in the educational side of the motion picture, as it is a masterpiece from the pen of a great author and in this imposing production, directed by Albert Capellani, the high ideals of the master have been sustained throughout the eight parts.

The characers of this gripping story are delineated in a finished and artistic manner by a company of French players, headed by M. Henry Kraus and La Petite Fromet. The three names, Victor Hugo, Pathe and Capellani are a guarantee of the high standard of this offering. "Les Miserables" will be presented continuously.

57th CHAPTER I.O.D.E.

The 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. are holding a sale of fancy articles, aprons, bags and home-made cooking, Jam and Pickles, in the Tea Room, in the Masonic Dining Hall, Tomorrow, Thursday Afternoon from 2 to 6. There will also be a very attractive orange tree. Afternoon tea will be served as usual.

Satisfaction

Over-coats

If you have not bought your overcoat, it will pay you to see what we are showing in the different styles of Young Men's short model coats. Blues, browns, greys and fancy plaids, velvet and self collars, plain backs, belted backs, pinch backs and disappearing belts. Lots of style and quality. Reasonable too.

$18.00 TO $26.50

Men's Suits

Don't run away with the idea that you must pay an enormous price for a suit to have real quality. We are showing men's suits, made of real good tweeds and worsteds, Sovereign Brand make, best of linings, and made to retain their shape at

$16.50 TO $20.00

We also are showing the higher grades in young men's top-notch clothing from

$20.00 TO $35.00

Or will make one to your measure if you prefer.

When a man buys a cheap article he feels good when he pays for it, and then feels rotten while he's using it; but when he buys a quality article he feels good every time he uses it and thinks about the quality a long time after he forgets the price.

Students And Graduates Of Collegiate Institute Honour Memory Of Their Soldier Dead

Forty Ex-Pupils Have Been Killed in the War, Two Are Missing and 286 Enlistments Already—Annual Commencement Exercises Under Cloud of Casualties.

AN EXCELLENT PROGRAMME

Peterborough's pride in the Collegiate Institute was eloquently expressed last night by the large attendance at the annual Commencement exercises. Every corner of the assembly hall was crowded and not a few citizens were turned away unable to gain admittance. The occasion fittingly demonstrated the people's appreciation of the unfailing service the Collegiate Institute and its devoted staff, under the principalship of Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, are rendering the youth of this city; it was also an evidence that the old school holds a warm place in the hearts of graduates, many of whom were present last night to honour and to share in the honours of the 1917 class.

The well-deserved tributes to the students who had carried off the year's prizes in their studies and on the atheletic field were not, however, the customary feature of this Commencement. It was the homage to the absent ones, the boys whom the Collegiate had equipped for life's work and who have sacrificed both life and career for their country and its institutions, and the grateful respect to their memories and spirits that seemed strangely near that marked this year's Commencement an unforgettable one.

Two hundred and eighty-six former students of the Collegiate have enlisted in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and there are doubtless others, and of that number forty have been killed and two are missing. The memory and the deeds of thirty-two of these heroic dead are perpetuated in their pictures which adorn the corridors of the Institute. And the roll is not yet ended. Realizing the significance of their sacrifice and the loss of these former students to Peterborough and to the nation, it was only natural that this year's Commencement should be saddened by haunting recollections, and the usual elation subdued.

THE HONOUR ROLL.

The Collegiate's imposing honour roll is as follows:

PROUD OF THE INSTITUTE

In his address as chairman Mr. Vincent Eastwood referred to the continued success the Collegiate Institute had won. The citizens looked upon it with satisfaction and pride, and the Board of Education was more than gratified with the results of the work of Mr. Kenner and his staff. Mr. Eastwood spoke of the sacrifice that falls on every person in these times and acknowledged the response of the teachers by their devoted and special efforts.

PRIZES PRESENTED.

Capt. Burnham's prize of a gold watch to the pupil obtaining the highest marks at the entrance examinations was presented by him to Bertie Giroux.

The athletic prizes were distributed by Mr. J. S. Graham, B.A., the silver trophies being won as follows:

Staff Cup and Senior Championship Medal—Jack Thrinbeck.

The H. S. Macdonald Cup and Junior Championship Medal—Jack Porteous.

The Nicholls scholarships were presented by Rev. J. R. Webb and Rev. Robert Pogue, as follows:

Honour Matriculation, $20.00—Miss Phyllis Young.

Faculty Entrance, Part II., $20.00—Miss Eunice Curtis.

Faculty Entrance, Part I., $20.00—Miss Hazel Crowe.

Junior Matriculation, $15.00—Miss Agnes Carmichael.

Middle School Normal Entrance, $15.00—Miss Mary Eastwood.

Junior School Normal Entrance, $10.00—Miss Florence Pammett.

The remainder of the programme was as follows:

Musical selection—The Institute Orchestra.

Swedish Folk Drill—Collegiate Institute Girls, under the direction of Miss L. Sanderson, B.A.

Piano Solo—Miss Isabel Baird.

Butterfly drill—Collegiate Institute Girls.

Valedictory address — Miss Hazel Crowe.

Vocal solo—Mr. Douglas Carlisle.

Hornpipe drill—Collegiate Institute girls.

"Our Heroic Dead"—Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, B.A.

"The Last Post"—Cadet Stanley Brannd.

God Save the King.

In congratulating Master Giroux upon winning the gold watch for the highest standin" in the Entrance examinations, Capt. Burnham referred to the distinguished service of his brother, Private Cyril Giroux. The success of the Institute reflected the highest possible credit upon Mr. Kenner, "who, by his ability to communicate his enthusiasm to his pupils, has shown that he is a man of priceless value to the community." The first essential in the work of the Board of Education was success. Mr. Burnham said, "the ability on the part of the staff to develop the education of the community successfully. After that cut out the frills and furbelows. Our attention is on the gallant lads at the front who are fighting to preserve these things we are celebrating tonight, as well as our lives, our comfort and all we enjoy."

Mr. Burnham described the conditions at the front and the extreme hardships and the dangers the men face day after day and night after night. "Let us at no time pause," he urged. 'Let us remember that our first consideration must be to back up the boys who have backed us up. I would be glad indeed if we could do away with everything else except an earnest effort to help them." Let us not grow war weary, Mr. Burnham cautioned. It is consistent with the stamina and courage of our races."

IDEALS FOR PUPILS.

Rev. Robt. Pogue counselled the students to choose an ideal, to keep ever before them and with steadfastness they should eventually realize its fruition.

Rev. J. R. Webb reminded the students that they stood on holy ground in the old school, hallowed by the sacrifice of the graduates of a few years ago. Rev. Mr. Webb referred to the presence of Hugh Carmichael, who had just returned from England, and the young soldier received a warm welcome. "There is so much in life for those who prepare themselves," he declared, as an encouragement to the students to apply themselves closely to their work.

DRILLS WERE DELIGHTFUL.

In the whole programme there was not a disappointing number. The costume dances by the Collegiate girls, under the direction of Miss Sanderson were delightful performances, providing another evidence of the versatility of the students and the special advantages the Collegiate offers to its pupils.

In his address on "Our Heroic Dead" Mr. Kenner excelled himself, and that statement should convey to those who have heard him speak on other occasions, an idea of the magnificent tribute of respect he paid to the memory of the ex-pupils who for the last time have gone over the parapet. As an address, it was perfect in form, and the effective quotations from many sources seemed like so many flowers placed on the graves of the student heroes. The high literary quality of the address accentuated the deep feeling that pervaded it. Excerpts would fail to do it justice.

The message from the memory of these students who have made the supreme sacrifice, Mr. Kenner expressed in the beautiful lines from "In Flanders Fields."

"Take up our quarrel with the foe!
To you, from falling hands, we throw
The torch; be yours, to hold it high!
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders' fields"

This was the message to those at home to carry on, to despatch the needed reinforcements that the dead shall not have died in vain.

At the close of Mr. Kenner's address a thrill swept over the standing audience as Cadet Braund sounded the Last Post and the Commencement crowd involuntarily bowed their heads to the memory of those boys whose sacrifice has brought the old school its greatest honours.

Important To Farmers

The Warden of the County of Peterborough has been appointed by the Ottawa Government to look after the Exemption Interests of the Farmers. The following telegram was the last of a series passing between MR. BURNHAM and the GOVERNMENT since the Borden Meeting Last Friday Night and the Visit of the Farmers' Deputation to Sir ROBERT BORDEN. The telegram reads as follows:

"Your wires received. I am directed to appoint the Warden. Please wire me his full name and address. I will wire appointment and instructions to Warden and communicate the same to you by wire. If additional representation necessary, ask Warden to select and submit names by wire.

"The Deputy Minister of Agriculture"

It will be satisfactory to Farmers generally that the Government has decided to put Farmers in charge of Farm Exemption Cases.

The above officials were recommended by Mr. Burnham as most likely to be satisfactory to the Public generally.

PTE. G. G. EASON WAS SEVERELY WOUNDED

Mrs. George Hurl, 486 Roger St., has received the following letter in regard to her brother, Pte. G. G. Eason, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who was severely wounded in the recent fighting:

Belgium, November 7, 1917.

Dear Mrs. Hurle,

Your brother, Gordon Eason, passed through our hospital and was my patient. He was anxious that you should know that he had been wounded and that he was doing very well. He certainly was very ill for a few days. Indeed, we were very doubtful whether he would be spared, but I am glad to say that he was well enough to be sent down to the base. I cannot tell you where he went, but I told him to get somebody to write you from wherever he went. I hope you very soon got favourable news of him and that you will soon have him back with you in his own land, as this is a perfect hell on earth for the poor boys.

His injury was in the right leg, but he lost a great deal of blood before he was fixed up. I am writing from the 3rd Australian Casualty Clearing Station, and have great sympathy for your men, as, like them, we are many miles from home and fellow feeling, etc.

I remain, yours sincerely,

(Sister) Blanche Cresswick.

No. 9 General Hospital,
B.E.F., France,
8th Nov., 1917.

Dear Mrs. Hurl,

Your brother, Pte. G. G. Eason, asks me to write you. He is in Ward 19 of this hospital. He has been severely wounded, and it has been necessary to take off part of his right leg near the knee in order to save his life. He is well cared for, and we hope he will go on nicely now. He is quite cheerful in himself.

With kind regards, yours sincerely,

W. H. Small,
Wesleyan Chaplain.

PTE. G. G. EASON.

You Get Better Cough Syrup by Making it at Home

What's more, you save about $2 by it. Easily made and costs little.

You'll never really know what a fine cough syrup you can make until you prepare this famous home-made remedy. You not only save $2 as compared with the ready-made kind, but you will also have a more effective and dependable remedy in every way. It overcomes the usual coughs, throat and chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough quickly.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) from any good drug store, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Here you have 16 ounces—a family supply—of the most effective cough syrup that money can buy—at a cost of only 53 cents or less. It never spoils.

The prompt and positive results given by this pleasant tasting cough syrup have caused it to be used in more homes than any other remedy. It quickly loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, bronchitis, croup and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

MUSICAL PROGRAMME ENJOYED

From a musical standpoint the Mark Street Anniversary services held this week were a pronounced success. The items on the programme on Monday night were especially well chosen and included talent from many of the city churches. Miss Bryce, formerly of St. Andrew's Church, now of Keene, was heartily welcomed back by her friends, and her solo, "A Corner of the Flag" greatly enjoyed. Mrs. King, who has lately come to the city, favoured Mark Street by several delightful selections, and was heartily encored again and again. Miss Kempt, the organist and soloist, was heard to great advantage in her splendid numbers. Mr. Whitehouse's violin selections, always looked for with great pleasure, were rendered in his customary masterful manner, and heartily applauded. Miss Sucee, one of Peterborough's most promising musicians, charmed her audience by her selections. Special mention may be made of Miss Winnifred Parker's elocutionary powers. In her selection from David Copperfield, she was heard with great interest and received hearty applause.

On Sunday, the music, which was specially well chosen, Mr. Brown kindly consented to render a solo. Mrs. Wand and Miss Kempt also added most enjoyable solos.

CAUGHT FOE PREPARING FOR NEW ATTACK

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Dec. 5.— British guns to-day smashed great groups of Germans massed for attack in the direction of Villiers Plouich before the German attacking machine could get under way. Otherwise there was a lull over practically the whole Cambrai sector to-day so far as infantry actions were concerned.

The artillery, however, was increasingly active everywhere on this front. The lull was accompanied by unmistakable indications reported by British airmen that Crown Prince Rupprecht would resume his driving tactics just as soon as he can bind up the wounds of his terribly mutilated divisions. The weather was freezingly cold to-day but fair. Airmen on both sides have been exceedingly active both day and night during the last few days.

Toques are made of white satin. Some toques are high and narrow. The long apron panels are still seen.

WARDEN TO REPRESENT AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT

Maxwell Brown to Investigate Cases in Which Farmers Sons and Farm Labourers Have Been Selected For Military Service and Whose Services on the Farm Are Considered Necessary

Mr. J. H. Burnham has received the following telegram this afternoon:

"Your fourth wire received. We have appointed Maxwell Brown, warden, and have wired him as follows: 'It has been brought to the attention of the Minister of Agriculture that in some cases tribunals appointed under the Military Service Act have selected farmers' sons and men employed as help on the farms whose services could not be spared and would be the means of causing a reduction in the production of foodstuffs. In order that such results might not happen and as a protection to agriculture the Minister has appointed you to represent the Department of Agriculture to look into such cases in West Peterborough and to take up same and to communicate with the district military representative, Military Headquarters, Kingston, and to report to such military official your objections and reasons why such persons so selected should be relieved from military service in order that he may remain on the farm. Arrangements are being made for pay and expenses in connection with your services. I have sent duplicate to the County Clerk'."

FIRE DANGER FROM CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS

Sir,—Following our usual custom at this season of the year, I beg to call your attention to the dangers to life and property from Christmas decorations, displays, etc., which are frequently made at this time of year. The use of Christmas greens, harvest specimens, and other inflammable materials, such as draperies, scenery, cotton to represent snow, and the like (especially in connection with electric and other lighting systems), is decidedly an increase of hazard, it being impossible to make displays of that nature perfectly safe.

The Statutory Conditions of your insurance policy read in part as follows:

"Any change material to the risk but within the control or knowledge of the assured, shall avoid the policy, as to the part affected thereby, unless the change is promptly notified in writing to the company or its local agent."

In addition to the danger to property from the displays referred to, the danger to life in crowded stores or places of meeting, by reason of a panic occasioned by fire, even though it be small and easily controlled, is so great that the underwriters, who have made a study of such hazards, would fail in their duty should they not give this warning.

By order.

John A. Robertson, Secretary,
Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association.

ONE IN EVERY FIVE MEMBERS OF LANSDOWNE LODGE HAS ENLISTED

Not a Single Member Has Been Called Up Under the Military Service Act—Officers Were Elected at the Annual Meeting Last Night.

A SPLENDID RECORD

The annual meeting for the nomination and election of officers of Lansdowne Lodge No. 25, S.O.E., B.S., took place last evening, when the following were elected:

Worthy Past President—Bro. E. Kitney.
Worthy President—Bro. A. Follis.
Worthy Vice-President—Bro. B. Lemmon.
Worthy Chaplain — Bro. P. G. Webb.
Worthy Financial-Secretary—Bro. W. G. Shiner.
Worthy Recording-Secretary—Bro. A. Kingdon.
Worthy Treasurer—Bro. C. Wood.
1st Committeeman—Bro. F. Rathbone.
2nd Committeeman—Bro. E. H. Hope.
3rd Committeeman—Bro. H. Sowden.
4th Committeeman—Bro. A. Frick.
5th Committeeman—Bro. H. A. Bromley.
6th Committeeman — Bro. W. D. Roberts.
Inside Guard—Bro. J. Runnett.
Outside Guard—Bro. J. Townsend.
Hall Trust—Bros. R. Waram, F. Rathbone and C. Wood.
Trustees—Bros. R. Tivey and D. Curtis.
Delegate to Supreme Lodge—Bro. W. G. Shiner.
Alternative—Bro. R. Waram.
Auditors—Bros. H. Beal, F. Kitney and R. Waram.
Advisory Board—(Juvenile Lodge) Bros. R. Waram, A. Follis, A. Kingdon, C. Wood, W. G. Shiner, F. Smith
Lodge Physician—Dr. J. W. DeC. King.

Encouraging reports were presented and the members were very enthusiastic over the results of a most successful year, in spite of the extraordinary conditions, due to the great war.

The report of the Financial Secretary showed that during the past year Lansdowne Lodge has paid out in sick benefits, and superannuation approximately $600.00.

In funeral benefits $1,070.00.

In insurance claims $4,500.00.

A total of more than $6,200,00, in addition to this, the Lodge is keeping in good standing over 50 members who are serving, or have served either in the Canadian Army, Imperial Army or the British Navy.

The record of the Sons of England throughout Canada in this great war in which the Empire is engaged is a glorious one, and Lansdowne Lodge can claim as her record that one member out of every five is a volunteer, and not a single member has been called up under the Military Service Act. Thus showing that every eligible man has enlisted.

The Lodge has also invested a large portion of her funds in the Victory War Loan, thus adding to her patriotic endeavours.

The Juvenile Lodge recently formed is also progressing most favourably, and is the pride of the senior members.

The Lodge enters upon another chapter in its history in the most optimistic manner, feeling that it is performing a valuable service to the members, and also the city at large.

A CHRISTMAS TREAT FOR SOLDIERS' KIDDIES

The Examiner acknowledges with pleasure the receipt of a cheque for $10 from Mr. A. E. Dawson for the fund to provide a Christmas treat for the children of Peterborough soldiers. The big event, which will be held under the auspices of the Great War Veterans' Association, can be made a memorable one for the kiddies if the people of the city will do their share by contributing to the fund. The Veterans have shown a commendable spirit by not only undertaking the work, but by contributing $100 of their own funds to the financial assistance of the proposition.

The fund now stands as follows:

Mr. G. N. Gordon	$ 50.00
The Great War Veterans	100.00
Messrs. Yeates Bros.	10.35
Mr. A. E. Dawson	10.00
	$170.35

Who will be the next to contribute? The Examiner will receive subscriptions and turn them over to the G.W.V.A.

Alex. Young Badly Hurt

Mr. Alexander Young, 4th Concession, Smith, was seriously injured this morning at ten o'clock. He was engaged in building a barn at Mr. Percy Edminson's farm, Concession 3, Smith, when he slid from the roof about 20 feet, to the ground. Dr. Scott, who was called, found him to have sustained a compound fracture and internal injuries. Belleghem's ambulance was called and took Mr. Young to Nicholl's Hospital.

ASSAULT CASE FOR MAGISTRATE DUMBLE

Frank McKnight was charged in Police Court this morning with assaulting and doing grievous bodily harm to Clarence McDougall at noon yesterday outside the Auburn Woollen Mills gate. McKnight, according to the plaintiff, had attempted to ambush him on Monday night, but he managed to elude him. At noon yesterday McDougall said he did not want to fight, but an alleged smash on one eye, and a pummelling when he was down, were said to be the causes of the damaged face he presented in Police Court. The case was adjourned until this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

LIEUT. DAVIES BADLY GASSED

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 5.—Lieut. Gordon Davies, son of Rev. B. Davies, formerly of Essex, Ont., was admitted to hospital at Wimereux, France, on November 9th, suffering from severe gas poisoning; later he was removed to London, Eng., and from there sent a cable home.

OBITUARY

BAGULEY. — At the residence of her brother in law, John H. Young, 279 Blythe wood Road, North, Toronto, on Tuesday morning, Dec. 4th, Sarah Baguley, daughter of the late J. J. Baguley.

Funeral on Thursday at 2 p.m. to Mount Pleasant cemetery.

E. C. HOWSON.

The last mortal remains of the late E. C. Howson, who died at Calgary on Wednesday last were laid at rest in the Keene Cemetery on Monday afternoon. The remains were accompanied from Calgary to Keene by Mr. George W. Buck, son-in-law of the deceased, and were at Keene taken in charge by Mr. T. W. Mather, undertaker.

A service was held in the Methodist church, conducted by the two local clergymen.

The pallbearers were six nephews of the deceased. A number of neighbors and friends from Keene, Norwood, Peterboro, and other points, attended the funeral.

The late E. C. Howson was born in the township of Otonabee near Keene, 67 years ago, and resided upon and worked the farm upon which he was born, until about 12 years ago when he removed to Peterboro. About 8 years ago he went west to Calgary, where he has since resided.

He was a member of the Methodist church, and in politics a Liberal.

He leaves to mourn his death, his widow, in Calgary, and five daughters, most of whom are in the western provinces. Three brothers and two sisters also survive him.

GRAIN MARKET

Oats again moved up another cent higher yesterday. The present uninterrupted strength in oats is in part due to car shortage, hampering the free movement of the crops. The situation appears to be worse in the United States than on this side the border. The United States Interstate Committee yesterday recommended the drastic measure of the immediate taking over of all the railroads. The government has, in fact, issued an order that all empties be sent to grain receiving points, in order to facilitate the prompt removal of the crops.

Mad Carousal Marks Bolsheviki Celebration In New York City

President Wilson's Name is Jeered—Governments, Institutions and Society Denounced and Approach of Social Revolution Hailed.

A NOISY DEMONSTRATION

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Anarchists, Socialists, I. W. W.s, and extreme left wing radicals, hailing themselves as the Bolsheviki of the City of New York, held a meeting at the Park View Palace, at 110th Street and Fifth Avenue, to celebrate the triumph of their cause in Petrograd. They jeered and hissed at the name of President Wilson; they denounced Governments, institutions, and society. They hailed the approach of social revolution and the destruction of the existing order of things.

It was a demonstration of the Bolsheviki in action, and it wound up in a frenzy of music and dancing, with a long-haired Bolsheviki reeling through the ranks of whirling comrades with a bottle of whisky in his hand. He wore shabby clothes, his brown hair hung to his shoulders, and a loose black tie flowed from his neck. Holding the bottle aloft as he danced, he invited all to drink, and if none would drink with him he drank by himself, caressing the bottle as he did so, and wafting kisses after each drink to the spirit of freedom, to the triumph of the social revolution and the salvation of the proletariat.

He was a living representation of the Bolsheviki banner displayed in front of the stage. Or it was a picture of a moujik steeping himself in liquor, while the inscription underneath read: "Hail, Bolsheviki! Drink, brothers! Life is short, but vodka is plentiful!" Some one asked the drunken Bolsheviki whether he was following this practice, and he replied defiantly: "What practice? I believe in no practice." And then he took another drink.

His appearance was the climax to a noisy, turbulent meeting that began in violent speeches and ended in queer dances. It was the first meeting of its particular kind in this city, but Secret Service men present vowed there wouldn't be many more if they had anything to do with the enforcement of the law against seditious speech and action in time of war. Speakers in flowing ties and long hair stood on the platform and denounced every institution in sight.

A couple of orators were so generally opposed to everything and everybody that they were even inclined to shout, "Down with Trotsky and Lenine" because they did not consider those Russian extremists to be extreme enough to keep pace with their conception of social revolution. They favoured "death" to this and "death" to that. They wanted no kind of democracy that would keep the individual chained to any system of law or order, but wanted the individual to be "free, free, free." Capital, Government, society, everything tainted by the old system of things must perish and only the individual to whom nature, according to Bolsheviki, had granted precious, inalienable rights to do whatever he pleased, should survive.

Removes Hairy Growths Without Pain or Bother

(Modes of To-day)

It is not necessary to use a painful process to remove hairy growths, for with a little delatone handy you can keep the skin entirely free from these beauty destroyers. To remove hair, make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water. Spread this on the hairy surface and in about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To guard against disappointment, be careful to get real delatone.

OMEMEE PERSONALS

Mr. Chamberlin, manager of the Hydro system in Omemee, is in town again at work, and is expecting the transformer for the lights any day.

Serg. F. Corneil arrived home from overseas on Tuesday evening, and was welcomed at the six o'clock train by a host of friends. The school children also marched in a body. He was conveyed in an automobile down Sturgeon to Kent Streets, thence to Mr. J. Weir's, where supper was provided. Fred enlisted in Omemee two years ago, and went overseas with the 109th Battalion He is looking well, but is still suffering from a severe wound in the shin.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 87 cars with 1152 cattle, 166 calves, 2,268 hogs, and 528 sheep and lambs.

Receipts of cattle so far this week are disappointingly small and poor in quality. The bulk of the offerings have ranged common to medium. Choice fat Christmas cattle have not yet put in an appearance outside of one or two loads. The market is holding good and firm for anything of fair quality. The demand for stockers and feeders has slowed down, though prices show practically no changes.

Sheep and lambs continue in a strong, steady market.

Hogs are firmer and 25 cents higher.

WITH THE KAISER IN THE DISCARD, WOULD BE PEACE

Let Germans Establish a Democratic Form of Govt. If They Want Hostilities to Cease

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The German people may shortly know the terms on which they can have peace if they overthrow Kaiserism and establish a democratic form of Government.

This will be the result of President Wilson's message to Congress if the allies accept the obvious invitation the President has extended to them to declare their war aims.

Bargaining is the trade of diplomats but American diplomacy wants nothing out of the war to be bargained for. Other belligerents, however, are not in this position. They desire other things besides the establishment of a Parliamentary Government in Germany.

France, for instance, wants Alsace-Lorraine. The justice of these ambitions and their relationship to a democratic peace would have to be determined before any public announcement of peace terms were made If the Allies should state the irreducible minimum of their terms they would have to take into consideration the practical possibilty of securing what they want.

NATIONS MUST FACE FACTS.

To arrive at a basis of justice in determining peace conditions is difficult because national prejudices are frequently hard to overcome. Nevertheless, before the war can end, each nation must face the inexorable facts confronting it. President Wilson's message to Congress is the most important move yet made by a belligerent Government toward looking facts in the face. The final test of war aims must now centre about the extent of sacrifices a nation is willing to make to run the risk of getting what it wants.

Once let it be made clear to the Germans what these aims are, and the war will have entered a new phase. The people of Germany can then calculate exactly what they will gain by refusing to be led farther astray by their militarists and what they must pay for having started the war.

TIRED AND DISCOURAGED

Mrs. Warren Randlee, Bothesay, Kings County, N.B., "I have three small children and had to stay in the house all winter. So when spring came I was all run down doing all my work and looking after the children. I felt all tired out and looked on the gloomy side all the time. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the results were most satisfactory. I feel fine now, and am recommending the Nerve Food to others."

Dried fruits should be soaked before beginning to cook them, and then they should be cooked in their own juice.

WARDEN TO REPRESENT AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT

Maxwell Brown to Investigate Cases in Which Farmers' Sons and Farm Labourers Have Been Selected For Military Service and Whose Services on the Farm Are Considered Necessary

Mr. J. H. Burnham has received the following telegram this afternoon:

"Your fourth wire received. We have appointed Maxwell Brown, warden, and have wired him as follows: 'It has been brought to the attention of the Minister of Agriculture that in some cases tribunals appointed under the Military Service Act have selected farmers' sons and men employed as help on the farms whose services could not be spared and would be the means of causing a reduction in the production of foodstuffs. In order that such results might not happen and as a protection to agriculture the Minister has appointed you to represent the Department of Agriculture to look into such cases in West Peterborough and to take up same and to communicate with the district military repcesentative, Military Headquarters, Kingston and to report to such military official your objections and reasons why such persons so selected should be relieved from military service in order that he may remain on the farm. Arrangements are being made for pay and expenses in connection with your services. I have sent duplicate to the County Clerk.'"

George O'Halloran,
Deputy Minister of Agriculture.

COUNTY COURT SITTINGS TO ADJOURN UNTIL DEC. 11TH

The County Court sittings and quarterly sessions announced for Tuesday, Dec. 11th, at 1 p.m., will meet formally on that date and adjourn until Tuesday, Dec. 18th, at 10.30 o'clock. The Sheriff has been directed to notify the jurors that they are not required to be present on the 11th, but must be present on the 18th. No cases will be tried on the 11th.

The Court will sit at the City Council Chambers.

Season of Many Furs.

Velvet bags for afternoon use are gorgeous in their colourings. Many striped bags are being carried.

New georgette crepe blouses are trimmed with filet lace and many tucks. They are seen in white and flesh colour.

Fur coats are being shown in knee length. All are made of the short haired fur such as nutria, seal and muskrat. They are lined in warm and bright silks.

Every indication points toward a season of many furs. Fashion has given a large variety from which to choose. Those being worn in "sets" are kolinsky, sable and the ever-popular fox.

Dandruff Surely Destroys the Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

Almost at once the theatre became dark, and the second part of the picture was flashed upon the screen. The lovely face of Ruth Morton once more greeted the eyes of the audience. The interruption had occupied less than a minute.

Duvall, standing at the entrance to the aisle, watched Grace come quickly toward him supporting the fainting woman. The latter seemed to be completely overcome and Grace was obliged almost to carry her.

"Keep her there in the dressing room until I return," he said in a quick whisper. Then with a nod to Mr. Baker who stood close by, he went toward the street. A taxicab drew up awaiting a fare. Duvall signalled to it.

"Wait for me here," he said to the driver. "I will be back in a moment." Then he re-entered the theatre.

Grace meanwhile had conducted the woman to the ladies' dressing room, and placed her upon a couch.

She was a frail, insignificant looking creature, not at all the sort of person one would associate with threats of the kind that Ruth Morton had been receiving. She appeared to be greatly ashamed of her sudden collapse, and kept insisting, in spite of her evident weakness, that she was quite all right again, and wanted to go.

Grace, however, paid no attention to her protestations, but insisted that she remain quiet.

"The doctor will be here in a moment," she said. "You must wait quietly until he comes."

The woman, however, seemed determined to leave and it was with a sigh of relief that Grace welcomed her husband's return.

Duvall came in hurriedly, as he did so taking a small brown bottle from his waistcoat pocket.

"Get me a glass of water," he said to the negro maid. The woman brought one at once.

Duvall took a tablet from the bottle and placed it in the glass, stirring the water about with the end of a lead pencil until the tablet was dissolved. Then he went up to the woman on the couch.

"Here—drink this," he said. "It will quiet your nerves."

The woman took the glass, her eyes regarding him with suspicion. Duvall, in the character of a physician, turned aside, and addressed a few words to Grace, fearing that in some way the woman might succeed in recognising him. As a result both failed to see that instead of drinkin the medicine he had given to her, the girl swiftly poured it upon the floor. When he again turned to her, she held the empty glass in her hand.

"Come with me, Miss," he said. "I will see you home."

"It isn't necessary," the woman gasped. "I—I'm —" right now."

"You have had a severe shock, Miss. As a physician, it is my duty to see that you arrive home safely. I have already engaged a cab. Come."

He took the woman by the arm, and in spite of her objections raised her from the couch.

Suddenly her opposition vanished. She seemed to be glad of his assistance and, leaning on his arm, made her way from the theatre. Duvall was in high spirits. He fully believed that his plan had succeeded, that the woman at his side was the one who was responsible for the threats which had made Ruth Morton so wretched for the last few days.

The cab that he had engaged stood waiting at the door. He put the woman inside. She seemed very weak and helpless.

"Drive to the —— Hotel," Duvall called to the chauffeur, then entered the cab and seated himself at the woman's side. He saw Mr. Baker standing upon the sidewalk, and nodded. Then they drove off.

The woman lay in a state of apparent collapse, in one corner of the cab, her face pale, her eyes closed. Duvall, inspecting her as well as he could in the faint light, began to feel grave doubts as to whether after all he had been successful in his ruse. She seemed so little the type of woman he would have associated with the brutal campaign of terror that had been directed against Miss Morton.

She clutched a black leather satchel tightly in one hand. Duvall regarded it with interest. If he was right in his assumption that this was the woman that he sought it seemed highly probable that within that satchel lay evidence that might convict her. At least there would be some clue as to who she was, and that in itself would be valuable.

The woman seemed to grow weaker and weaker. Her closed eyes, her slow but regular breathing, indicated that the drug he had given her had begun to take effect. Stealthily Duvall's hand reached toward the small black satchel. With eager fingers he pressed the catch and as the bag opened began to draw out its contents.

The woman, however, seemed far less helpless than he had supposed. She pulled the satchel toward her, her fingers seeking to close it. Duvall discontinued his efforts at once. It would be time enough he felt, when they had reached the hotel, and the woman had been safely conducted to a room there. He had made his plans carefully in advance and arranged matters with the hotel manager. There was nothing to do now, but wait.

Presently, the woman, who had been regarding him unnoticed from beneath lowered lids, uttered a groan, as though in great pain, and clutched her breast. Duvall turned to her at once, speaking in a soothing voice and assuming a professional manner.

"Is anything wrong, Miss? I had hoped you were feeling better."

"No, doctor. I'm not. I feel terrible—terrible."

"In what way?"

"My—my heart. It is in awful shape. I need some stimulant. The —the medicine you gave me made me feel very ill."

Her words surprised Duvall. He had given her a simple drug, the effect of which should have been to make her drowsy, to quiet her nerves. That she had not taken it, he of course did not know. His greatest fear had been that she would refuse to enter the cab with him. Now that she had done so, he was prepared to use even force if necessary to retain her in his custody until he had either obtained the evidence he desired or had forced from her a confession. What he particularly hoped to find was the seal with which the death's head impression had been made. He felt certain that, if this was the woman he sought, she would have this seal somewhere about her person. It was far too significant a bit of evidence to be left lying about at home.

But there was always the chance that this woman, who had been so instantly affected by the ghastly apparition on the screen, the significant words beneath it, might not, after all, be the right one, the one he sought. There was always the possibility that the real criminal, although present in the audience, had made no sign, and that this companion in the cab might be entirely innocent. As he had told Baker, it was a chance—a long chance, yet something seemed to say to him that he had made no mistake in taking it.

Now, however, a new situation had arisen to upset his plans. His prisoner, instead of having been quieted by the drug he had administered, was apparently becoming more and more irritated and nervous every minute. Her groans, as she lay huddled up in the corner of the cab, puzzled him, filled him with vague alarm. Was it possible that she had a weak heart? Had the sedative he had given her, harmless as he knew the dose would be to a normal person, affected her in so unfavourable a way? He took her wrist in his hand, and felt her pulse. It was quick, indicative of nervous excitement, but certainly not weak.

"Oh—doctor, doctor, won't you please give me something to make me feel a little better?" the woman gasped. "It's my heart, I tell you. I—I can't breathe. I'm suffoating. I must have something at once— some aromatic spirits of ammonia—some brandy — anything, to make me feel a little better."

Her earnestness, her trembling voice, her excited manner, all served to convince Duvall that his companion was really in need of a stimulant of some kind. He decided to humor her. A dose of aromatic spirits, he reflected, could do no harm, and would doubtless serve to lessen her excitement. He leaned out, and directed the driver of the cab to stop at the nearest drug store.

"Oh—thank you— thank you," the woman gasped. "Tell him to hurry please." Then collapsing in the corner of the seat, she closed her eyes and sat so silent that Duvall began to wonder whether she had lost consciousness.

The taxicab, meanwhile, had drawn up in front of a drug store on Sixth Avenue. Duvall took a look at the apparently unconscious woman, then spoke quickly to the chauffeur.

"Stay here until I return," he said. "Don't go away under any circumstances. I shall be gone but a moment."

The man nodded.

"I'll stay, sir," he said. "Don't worry."

Duvall went quickly into the store. Going up to the soda counter, he instructed the clerk to prepare him a dose of aromatic spirits of ammonia as quickly as possible. While waiting for it, he watched the cab through the store window.

The preparation of the dose required but a few moments. Then, explaining matters to the clerk, Duvall took the glass in his hand and went back to the cab. He smiled to himself at his anxiety as he passed through the door. The woman was far too ill, he reflected to entertain any thoughts of escape.

"Here," the detective said, opening the door of the cab, "Drink this."

There was no response. Duvall stuck his head into the vehicle with some misgivings. Then he experienced a sudden and most mortifying shock. There was no fainting woman huddled against the cushions in the far corner. There was no woman at all. The cab was empty.

CHAPTER XI.

Richard Duvall had had charge of many unusual and intricate cases, in the past, and he prided himself upon the fact that he had handled them with skill and discretion, and that the results which had followed had been both quick and decisive. But in all his career he had not, so far as he could remember, ever felt quite so chagrined, as he did when he threw open the door of the cab and found that the woman he had left had disappeared.

The fault was his, he knew that well—entirely and unmistakably his. This woman was evidently far more clever, more subtle than he had imagined. He realized now that she had in all probability not taken the drug he had given her in the dressing room of the theatre, that she had seen his effort to examine the contents of her handbag, that her weakness, her call for a stimulant of some sort had been but clever acting, and that she had purposely sent him into the drug store in order that she might escape. He blamed himself, utterly and completely, for his amazing stupidity in not realizing that the woman, instead of ordering the cabman to drive away, had only to slip out through the door on the opposite side of the vehicle, and vanish in the darkness.

TIRED, NERVOUS HOUSEWIFE TOOK VINOL

Now She is Strong and Well

Berkeley, Cal.—"I was nervous, irritable, no appetite, could not sleep, and was always tired, so my housework was a great effort. After many other medicines had failed Vinol built me up and made me strong. I have a good appetite and sleep well. Every nervous, weak, ailing woman should try it."—Mrs. N. Edmunds, 2107 Dwight Way, Berkeley, Cal.

We ask every nervous, weak, rundown, ailing woman in this town to try this cod liver and iron tonic on our guarantee to return their money if it fails to help them.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

To the Electors of East Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have the honour to accept the unanimous nomination of the Liberal Party to contest the election as a candidate to represent the people of East Peterborough in the House of Commons.

Now is the time in the history of this country when we should be guided by true Liberal principles and stand by the masses as against the classes; stand by the people who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow and against the classes who exact unjust profits and extortionate tolls out of even the very necessities of life.

The profits made by War Profiteers should be investigated. The profiteer should be made to disgorge his excessive profits to be used to increase the pay of our soldiers, their mothers, wives, sisters and dependents. None of them should ever be subjected to the indignity of cold charity by this grateful Nation on whose behalf they have suffered or died.

I have no confidence whatever in Sir Robert Borden who supplied our troops for many months with the Ross rifle and defective ammunition, which he must have known would jam and become a useless weapon after our Canadian boys had nobly entered the battle. The Ross rifle was used by our troops in six battles. In each battle the rifle jammed, and many a Canadian soldier was needlessly killed of wounded, and some of them languish to-day in German prisons justly cursing the Borden Gobernment without a chance of voting against it.

We must destroy the parasite, the profiteer, the grafter and the camp follower, who are our worst enemies, and fight our common foe with all the resources at our command.

I appeal to the women of this Riding, who are casting their vote for the first time, to act on the pure impulse of their hearts alone, and vote according to the dictates of their own conscience. My heart goes out in sympathy for them in these anxious times.

Let us unite our people in this Great War as the armies of Great Britain and France are united, marching and fighting side by side—the parents and guardians of Freedom and Justice.

With firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, I appeal to you fellow electors to press on to a finish the great war in which we are engaged; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle and his widow and orphan; to do all which we may achieve, and to cherish a just and lasting peace with all nations.

For these reasons I appeal to you my fellow electors for your vote and influence in the pending election on Monday, December 17th next.

Your Obedient Servant,

W. H. Johnston.

David and Goliath

By SARAH BAXTER

Did you never hear of the Gila monster? No? Well, the Gila looks something like a young alligator. When attacked it feigns to be dead. Its bite is frightfully poisonous. The victim lingers a long while in great agony, then dies.

There is—or rather there was—out on the plains west of the Missouri river a human monster as much to be dreaded as the Gila. This was the desperado who finds his prowling grounds in new countries. When America was being occupied by a civilized people the human Gila was the renegade white. He lived with the Indians and fought with them against their enemies, including those of his own color. When the savages wished to draw the whites into an ambush they would use the renegade for the purpose, and he was not ashamed to serve them.

This human monster in another form was the terror of the plains when they were passing from lawlessness to civilization. He delighted in cruelty. There was no law in the country on which he had obtruded himself to prevent his murders or punish him therefor except the revolver, and since that was his especial implement he was so skilful with it that he had every advantage.

Mark Rogers, an Indiana farmer, having a sickly wife, sold his farm and took her with their children to a region in the southwest then being taken up by white settlers. There he "squatted" and raised what crops he could while his wife was regaining her strength. A hamlet grew up in the vicinity, consisting of four dwellings, a store, a blacksmith shop and a saloon. One day Rogers was passing through the hamlet when a man known as Texas Bill came out of the saloon firing his revolver about him as a boy celebrating the Fourth of July. Seeing Rogers, he put a bullet into his left breast, in the region of the heart. He had nothing whatever against Rogers. He fired at him as he would at a tree or any other mark.

His victim fell and lay in the road till some persons took him up and carried him home. There was little or no hope that he would survive, and at his death his invalid widow and her children would be in a destitute condition. He lingered along, however, and one day his wife heard him muttering to himself that when he recovered the man who had shot him would have a chance to shoot him again or die.

This boded no good for the Rogers family. Texas Bill would have every advantage in a fight, and since it was to be expected that if Rogers recovered one of the two would die every one knew that Bill would be on the watch for his enemy, in case he got out again. There were no courts to punish the crime or prevent a subsequent murder. If the husband and father did not die of his wound he would subsequently be killed.

It remained for a weak woman to solve the problem. As soon as she could be spared from attendance on her husband Mrs. Rogers took a bag and went out on the plain. When she returned it was evident that she had something in the bag, but what it was no one knew and no one cared. She took it into the cellar and left it there, locking the door. Every day after that she would go into the cellar, take the bag and go down into the hamlet, where she would spend some time answering questions as to her husband's condition, but it was noticed that she was always looking about her and had an eye especially on the saloon.

One morning while she was thus engaged Texas Bill came out of the saloon, smoking a long black cigar. His trousers were tucked in his boots, his flannel shirt was open, exposing his hairy breast, and his face was flushed with liquor. A revolver was slung to each hip, and a long knife was in his belt. Mrs. Rogers left her friends and advanced toward him.

There was something about her movement to tell the others that she had some intent concerning her husband's enemy—a certain resolute look in her eye, a quickness in her walk. She seemed like a David advancing to attack a Goliath. Was the bag she carried a sling containing a stone?

Texas Bill stood for a moment on the porch of the saloon looking out on the desolate scene, then staggered down the steps and walked away from the group of which Mrs. Rogers had formed a part. She followed him. While doing so she raised the skirt of her dress and from about her waist uncoiled a rope. When she came to within a few yards of Bill she threw a noose in the rope over his shoulders and when it fell to his elbows gave it a sudden jerk, pinioning his arms.

From this moment she moved with lightning-like rapidity, holding the lasso in her left hand, while with her right she turned the bag over on Bill's shoulders. A loathsome thing fastened itself on to his back. Giving a mighty yell, he freed his arms and grasped what clung to him, but it was too late to save himself from its bite. Wrenching it off, he saw the deadly Gila.

Fortunately for the woman he was too intently engaged with the monster to pay any heed to her or he might have served her as he had served her husband. He went howling down the road, and his cries were heard till death relieved him of his agony.

Rogers recovered, and his wife was ever after known as the woman who had beaten Texas Bill.

Nerves of the Stomach

Were Weak and Inactive as Result of Nervous Prostration — Lost Twenty Pounds — Had to Take Sleeping Powders to Get Any Rest.

St. Catharines, Ont., November 19.—Many people never realise that the movement and action of every organ of the human body is dependent on the energy supplied by the nervous system.

When the nervous system gets run down there is weakness throughout the entire body. You feel tired and languid and your stomach and other digestive organs are similarly affected. Appetite fails, digestion is poor, you do not get the good of what you eat and gradually grow weaker and weaker.

This process can only be stopped by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which goes directly to create new nerve force and thereby to invigorate the whole human body.

Mrs. Geo. S. Elise, 46 Davidson Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "My husband had an attack of nervous prostration, and although he doctored for some time and tried different other medicines, he could not get relief. He had to resort to sleeping powders given him by the doctor to make him sleep. The greater part of the trouble seemed to be with the nerves of the stomach. He began to lose weight, and kept on going down until he had lost twenty pounds. We had read advertisements in the newspapers for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and noticed that it seemed to be doing a lot of good for people troubled with nervousness, so my husband decided to try it. He found benefit almost from the start, and continued this treatment until he had taken about twelve or thirteen boxes. The results were most satisfactory. He is now enjoying good health, sleeps well and has gained back nearly all the weight he had lost. He also uses Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally, and thinks them an excellent remedy. I have also used this latter medicine for dizzy spells and liver trouble, and was completely cured of these complaints. We think a great deal of Dr. Chase's medicines, and cannot speak too highly of them."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Help the Sailors!

The strong, right arm of human civilization—the unconquerable sailor of the British Navy and Mercantile Marine—

He stands before you and asks your help on Sailors' Day, December 8th. Why does he do this?

Because millions have been given to the Army by public and private subscriptions—worthily so—but practically nothing to the Navy and Mercantile Marine.

Think of the superb bravery of the men who defy the perils of mine-sown, submarine infested seas and, with songs on their lips, cheerfully give up their lives for the Great Cause.

So that the great arteries of the Empire—the High Seas—may be kept alive with British traffic—carrying food, munitions, aeroplanes, artillery and the thousand things our boys need at the front to fight the barbarous Hun.

What happens—think you—to those poor fellows, maimed at their calling, or to their humble loved ones when the breadwinner is killed or drowned?

No pensions—no "allowances"—cold charity and little of that.

Is this fair—is it just—is it RIGHT?

Let your answer be expressed in a generous contribution on SAILORS' DAY, DECEMBER 8th, through the Daughters of the Empire who are seeking to increase Canada's contribution last year of $700,000 "for the relief of British and Canadian Sailors and their dependents, for Sailors' Homes, Institutes and Hospitals in Canada and throughout the Empire" and for the full work of the Navy League. Won't you be generous on

MUSIC IN THE HOME

LOSING ONE'S GRIP MUSICALLY.

It is an unpardonable sin to have a musical instrument in the house and allow it to fall into disuse through carelessness. Some people purchase an instrument, use it assiduously for a few months, and then gradually let other occupations and other pleasures crowd out the enjoyment of the music until the source of the pleasure becomes a mere article of furnishing in the home.

Perhaps the parents start their child taking music lessons. When the novelty of the practice gives way to the realization that faithful and persistent practice is necessary, the child naturally commences a series of schemes to avoid the irksome grind. The parents take the path of least resistance by giving way to the objector and the lessons are discontinued.

Again it may be the member of a choir drumming over the hymns and anthems during the week until he or she gets the run of the music for the Thursday night practice. This choir member makes steady headway. The leader notices the improvement, ascertains the reason for it, is greatly encouraged, and thinks he has the makings of a future soloist. But the home preparation stops, the steady improvement drops off, and there is a slipping back.

May be it is a mother who manages to spend a few minutes at the piano every day. The children hear some music regularly and they are beginning to see the beauties of certain tunes, beginning to show a love for their mother's playing and singing, when the mother lets a few days slip by without touching the piano; then a fortnight goes by between times, then a month, until the hour of music is a rare occurrence.

To thus lose one's grip on music is a poor policy. This principle is well illustrated by our Canadian Army at the Front. The boys shave every morning. It freshens a man, helps him sustain his pride and self-respect. Permit soldiers to grow careless and you will soon have them downhearted. Have them shave every day and they buck up.

The same idea is back of everything in their organization. One would naturally suppose that cleaning harness and washing muddied waggons after a night's work was sheer waste of effort, when the same harness and waggons were due to work the next night in the same mud. But the Canadians don't look at it in that light; they know that if you ever let down you begin to slip.

We are told of the transport lines of one brigade close to Vimy Ridge. It had been raining for days—and mud was everywhere. Waggons and horses had been out the night before, carrying stuff to the Front, and they returned plastered with mud. Yet by nine o'clock next morning every buckle and wheel was gleaming. They cleaned and oiled the leather, made the waggons fit for a review, groomed the horses until their coats shone. And they were billed for another night in the rain and mud! You can't beat that spirit.

The same is true in music—exactly. If you ever let down you begin to slip. So it is good to guard against going any length of time without having some music. Don't let the musical instrument in your home fall into disuse.

CONSTRUCTION OF UKELELE SUGGESTS OTHER THOUGHTS OF INTEREST

The lack of sonority in that pretty toy, the ukelele is due to the fact that an excessively tight stringing is impossible. The strings are fastened to a bar merely glued to the belly of the instrument. For this reason the ukelele may claim the old lute as one of its forbears. Many a musician of the olden days, many a troubadour, in the pianoforte. The only new, or rather novel, instrument of our time is the saxophone, a genial cross-breed—a missing link between the reed clarinet and the baritone brass horn or euphonium. Only military bands of the larger sort admit a choir of saxophones. The standard orchestra has no place for them. Yet they have much fluency of utterance and an individualistic and pleasing tone-colour.

THANK FORTUNE NO FOOD CONTROLLER ATTEMPTS TO CURTAIL OUR MUSICAL FOOD SUPPLY.

The great masses of people the world over are music hungry and that hunger has increased with the privations and unrest caused by war conditions. Music nourishes and soothes in a way that mere food cannot; yet there are those who say the practice of real economy excludes expenditures for music.

By a vote of 30 to 12, it has been carried to continue the work of the municipal orchestra at Brighton, England. The existence of this orchestra has been threatened on more than one occasion by those members of the council whose one object is to reduce the tax rate. It is therefore a cause of satisfaction to learn that the majority see that there is a seeming economy which is false economy, for to strangle any of the all too few influences at work satisfying the musical hunger among the masses would be a poor policy any way it is looked at.

In this respect Russia was not so far behind the times. Gabrilowitsch says: "Music itself in Russia has been supported not by the nobility but by the masses for fifty years, therefore as the country grows more and more democratized, still larger masses hitherto shut off from spiritual pleasures will be able to take part in them."

In Canada the demand for more and more music by the masses is becoming intensified. In the cities the present opportunities for hearing music are leavening the whole population until we are earning the right to be called a musical people. In the country districts the hunger is there. With the increased prosperity of our rural citizens there is a greater purchasing of music and all kinds of musical instruments. It would be curious to see the goodly proportion of talking machine and record sales that are made to those living on farms or in small towns, and this is having its effect educationally. Only the other day a young woman in a letter in the "readers' corner" of a weekly newspaper spoke of the loneliness of the winter in Muskoka where she lived, and wrote "I would be pleased if some one would advise me if it is possible for one who knows something of music to learn to play the violin without a teacher. I am very fond of music and would like to take up the study of the violin."

The persistent demand for more and better music by the masses, is confirmation of Herbert Spencer's assertion that music is the fine art which were than any other ministers to the human welfare.

HOW TO LIVE LONG.

Many ailments and their beginning is a torpid sluggish condition of liver, kidneys and bowels. As a matter of fact you can add years to the length of your life by as well as comfort and happiness by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to keep these organs regular and active.

TROUBLED FOR YEARS WITH BRONCHITIS

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup GAVE INSTANT RELIEF

Bronchitis is a disease which is very prevalent during the late winter and early spring, when there are sudden atmospheric changes. It is a condition of inflammation of the bronchial tubes, which produces mucous that irritates the throat and causes you to cough in order to get rid of it. The cough may be tight or loose according as to whether this mucous is sticky and hard to remove, or thin and easily expelled.

Bronchitis is not really dangerous, but the complications which are liable to follow makes it necessary to get rid of it at the first sign. This can be done by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for over 25 years. John D. McFarlane, Jr., S.W. Margaree, N.S., writes: "I was troubled for years with bronchitis, and could not find any relief. I was especially bad on a damp day. I went to a druggist and asked him for something to stop the constant tickling in my throat. He gave me a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which at once gave me instant relief. It is the best remedy for bronchitis I know of, and I now take care that I always have a bottle of it on hand." See that you get "Dr. Wood's". Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A day of prayer was observed here in the Methodist church by the Women's Missionary Societies of Hastings, Norwood and Dartford. A good programme was given after which refreshments were served in the basement.

Lieut. Reg. Runnels arrived home on Saturday on a three months leave from England where he has been in the hospital for some time, and has also been in France for some two or three years. His many friends are glad to see him looking so well.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hore of Campbellford spent Tuesday with friends.

Among the more or less strange devices on the banners borne aloft in the suffrage parade last Saturday was one which said: "The hand that rocks the cradle would never rock the boat." As it passed by a young man standing on the curb was observed by a lady spectator to grin broadly.

Well, said the lady.

Well, said the young man. You see, when I was on my vacation I took out on the lake a dear, good woman, the mother of two babies, and one who had certainly rocked a cradle. We both had to swim ashore. She did rock the boat. — New York Evening Post.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble

Terrific Explosion Near Halifax

SCORES OF PEOPLE HAVE BEEN KILLED

GREAT DAMAGE IN HALIFAX FOLLOWING TERRIFIC EXPLOSION

American Munition Ship is Rammed by Another Vessel and Tremendous Explosion Results, Killing the Crews of Both Ships and Destroying Hundreds of Buildings--Telegraphic and Telephone Communications Interrupted --Nova Scotia Cities Rush Relief.

ONE REPORT SAYS BOMB WAS CAUSE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TRURO, N.S., December 6.—Communication with Halifax was established by the Canadian Pacific Telegraph Company this afternoon. It was learned that nearly one-half of the north end of the city is flat, that a great fire is raging, that the dead are lying thick in the streets, and that all the hospitals are full to overflowing. So many are injured that many people are compelled to walk about untreated.

TRIED TO SINK SHIP.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Exzminer.)

TRURO, N.S., December 6.—Twenty-five corpses of railway employees were found between Deep Water and Richmond to-day, following the explosion of the American munition ship in Halifax Harbour, George Graham, manager of the Dominion Atlantic Railway reported to-day. Latest reports received here placed the total dead at three hundred. According to advices here the munitions ship caught fire after the collision and its crew remained bravely at work making strenuous attempts to sink her before the explosion.

FIRST ESTIMATE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TRURO, N.S., December 6.—It is reported here that the first estimate of the lose of life in the explosion in Halifax Harbour this morning places it at fifty. While the number injured is correspondingly great, cables from Halifax via Havana, say that hundreds were killed and thousands hurt in this morning's catastrophe there. The north end of the city is in flames. One report says an area of nearly a mile square is a mass of wreckage, while several square miles more or less are affected. The Canadian Government forces used by the C.P.R. is utterly crushed, while the repairing plant at Willow Park is wrecked.

TRIED TO SINK BOAT.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, December 6.—Authentic official advices as to the loss of life and the extent of the damage done at Halifax were still lacking at the Capital up to 12:30 to-day. One message states that the boat was backing out of the dock when she was rammed by a boat coming in. Officials of the Naval Department were trying to get into touch with Halifax by wireless after the first news of the disaster was received, but no further details had been obtained up to noon. It was said at the department that the wireless stations are situated at some distance from the city itself, and the difficulty was in establishing communication between them and Halifax. Advices of the disaster were also received at the Military Department, but they contained nothing in addition to the meagre details obtained by the newspapers. The opinion was expressed in telegraphic circles that the early reports of the explosion were much exaggerated.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, December 6.—From advices received at midday to-day there were no Canadian military units for embarkation purposes in Halifax to-day neither, it is believed, were there any on transport. Certain signalling units which left recently are believed to have already sailed, while an Ottawa and Kingston unit which was xpected to be in Halifax, is still at Windsor, N.S. Advices received here from the C.P.R. Telegraph sources at Montreal are to the effect that reports of casualties are exaggrated. It is stated the C.P.R. Telegraph Co. office was badly shaken and many of the employees cut with glass. The military authorities, however, have taken charge and order, it is believed, is being maintained.

MAY REACH FOUR HUNDRED LIVES.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONCTON, N.B., December 6.—Latest reports reaching here say the death toll of the terrific explosion at Halifax will probably reach more than four hundred at the least.

MASS OF WRECKAGE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, December 6.—"The north end of the town is one mass of wreckage and dead bodies," says a private despatch to the Department of Railways and Canals from officials of the Intercolonial Railway received shortly after the disaster occurred. The despatch states that every building north of the Queen's Hotel is wrecked. The I.C.R. station at North street is wrecked as well as the station at Willow Point. Most of the buildings and also the Queen's Hotel, half way up the harbour front are destroyed. There is much loss of life which it is impossible to estimate at present. The information received by the Railway Department from Assistant-General-Manager Brown of the I.C.R., came from Moncton, N.B., where he happened to be. He stated in his telegram that he had received word at 9:30 o'clock that he was proceeding at once to Halifax and that he would communicate the full facts as son as he reachedthere. Mr. Brown states that an effort was made to sink the vessel before she exploded, but this effort failed. Special trains are being filled with doctors and nurses wherever they can be picked up, says Mr. Brown, and are being rushed to Halifax. A private wire from Montreal at 11 o'clock stated that reports received there were to the effect that practically all the telegraph operators in Halifax had either been killed or wounded. The great Northwestern Telegraph Company offices are opposite the Queen's Hotel, and are about four miles from Rockingham. If operators have been killed in this district it would indicate that the loss of life has been catastrophal.

SCORES KILLED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMHERST, N.S., December 6.—Scores of people have been killed, hundreds of buildings destroyed, and a portion of Halifax set on fire by an explosion which occurred following the collision of an American ammunition ship and another vessel at Rockingham, according to telephone messages reaching here this morning.

The explosion was so terrific that it destroyed the installation in the telegraph and telephone offices for thirty miles around Halifax, while it was heard at Truro, sixty-one miles distant.

It is reported that an American munition steamer was moving out from her pier and was rammed broadside by another vessel. Instantly there was a tremendous explosion which practically destroyed the two ships and killed all their crews.

The concussion resulting caused the roof of the railway deport at North street to collapse, while all the warehouses on the waterfront for a mile and a half were damaged. The premises affected in many places caught fire. The force of the concussion was so great that freight cars were blown off railway tracks.

Messages asking for fire engines and fire fighting apparatus, doctors and nurses, hospital supplies, etc., were received by a number of localities in Nova Scotia from Halifax. Special trains were made up with everything required that could be secured. At Truro, Windsor and this city the councils met this morning and decided to take immediate steps to render aid to the afflicted people of Halifax. It is understood that large quantities of food were destroyed, and the citizens of Halifax may soon be in danger of starving. It was decided that car loads of food must be despatched at once.

A BIG NIGHT AT VICTORIA HALL

The meeting in Victoria Hall to-morrow night, to which the public is cordially invited, promises to be one of great interest. Mrs. M. K. Douglas, the Peterborough nurse who has just returned from many months' service overseas, will give an address, and Mrs. John Allan will also speak. In addition, there will be solos by Mrs. H. W. Nicholls and Mr. Douglas Carlisle, with Mrs. Buchanan as accompanist, and comic songs by Mr. Charles Coleman.

A report will be given from the committee in regard to the Veterans' Club Roos, and the formation of a Ladies' Auxiliary of the Great War Veterans' Association will be completed. It will be an interesting night, and the hall should be crowded.

GERMANS MADE EFFORT FOR PEACE IN AUGUST LAST

Secret Diplomatic Archives Made Public by the Bolsheviki Show That An Attempt Was Made With Spain as the Medium

BALFOUR'S RESPONSE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Dec. 6. — Germany made a formal effort to obtain peace last August through Spain, according to revelations in the latest chapter of "secret diplomatic archives," made public to-day by the Bolsheviki foreign minister, Trotsky. The evidence consisted of a telegram from M. Nabokoff, Russian Charge d' Affaires at London to Provisional Foreign Minister Tereschenko, dated in August, 1917, and notifying Russia that British Foreign Minister Balfour had called a special meeting of the Ambassadors of France and Italy, United States and Japan. To this assembly, he said, he had received information from Madrid that "a high personage in Berlin had informed the Spanish Ambassador that Germany wished to negotiate."

Balfour said, according to Nabokoff's message, that Britain was ready to receive any German communication regarding peace, and to consider it in conjunction with the allies.

Whether there was any reply from Germany to this non-committal statement was not indicated in to-day's revelations. A number of newspapers, under special permission from Trotsky, have been publishing secret State papers covering all the period of the war. Trotsky made them public on the ground that the Bolsheviki plan was to give the people all information of diplomatic dealings.

SIR SAM HUGHES AND MILITARY SERVICE ACT

Mr. R. R. Hall Quotes Telling Extracts From the Speech of the Former Minister of Militia in Regard to Unjust Administration of the Measure--Splendid Meetings in North Monaghan.

Mr. R. R. Hall addressed the electors of North Monaghan at the Town Hall in the afternoon, and at the Union Sunday School Hall near Brealey's in the evening.

Mr. Hall in his address drew attention to the fact that Sir Sam Hughes appeared on the same platform in Peterborough with Sir Robert Borden and Mr. Burnham.

Sir Sam Hughes is well aware of the fact that the Military Service Act is being most unjustly administered. He knows that exemptions are being granted by the wholesale in the Province of Quebec and that exemptions are being refused by the wholesale in the Province of Ontario on the same state of facts.

Sir Sam Hughes knows that the Military Service Act as enforced in the Province of Quebec, will not take 5,000 men from the Province of Quebec, and that the remainder of the 100,000 men must come from English speaking Canada.

Sir Sam Hughes knows very well that if Justice were done between the Province of Ontario and the Province of Quebec that 70,000 men should be taken from the Province of Quebec before one single man should be called to the colours in Ontario.

While Sir Sam Hughes was speaking on the platform in the City of Peterborough he dramatically turned to Sir Robert Borden and told him to his face: "I want to tell Sir Robert Borden that it is a matter of importance that Quebec should do her part and came up to an even status with the English speaking provinces, but the industries, farms and other places in Ontario are depleted in order to make up drafts for the front. There should be some even handed justice to compel those gentlemen in Quebec to go to the front."

Tied to the Nationalists.

"And yet," said Mr. Hall, "Sir Sam Hughes knows, and so does Mr. Burnham, that Sir Robert Borden is now, and has been for six years, tied neck and heels to the Quebec Nationalists in the Province of Quebec, and that the administration of the Military Service Act in the Province of Quebec is really left and will be left in the hands of Borden's Quebec Nationalists.

"This in itself," said Mr. Hall, "ought to be enough to shake the confidence of the electors of Peterborough and Victoria in Mr. Burnham and his supporter, Sir Sam Hughes."

"Both these gentlemen know that rank injustice is being done to the Province of Ontario and both of them are the supporters of the Prime Minister who perpetrates this rank injustice on English speaking Canada.

"I notice," said Mr. Hall, "in the Daily Warder of October 16th, 1917, this interview with Sir Sam Hughes:

"But Laurier held up proceedings for the successful carrying on of the war?"

Sir Sam Hughes answered:

"Nonsense, Laurier had nothing to do with it. It was Sir Thomas White, Sir Joseph Flavelle, Sir George Perley, Baron Shaughnessy, and possible dread of the Nationalist party in Quebec under Bourassa."

"But Laurier forced this war time election."

Sir Sam Hughes answered.

"I do not see how. On three different occasions the Government itself planned an election in war time, once immediately after the session of 1914, again about the time of the sinking of the Lusitania, third after Mr. Rogers made his famous and inspired Montreal address. It is understood there was still another occasion.

It is evident from this interview that Sir Robert Borden and Sir Sam Hughes were as much concerned about the winning of the election as they were about winning the war.

In this same interview in the Warder, Sir Sam was asked the question:

"What do you think of the new Union government?"

Answer: "It is a splendid triumph for the plans long ago laid by Sir Joseph Flavelle and Sir Thomas White. It is now more than a year since the movement to form a National or a "National Trust" Government as it is sometimes termed, was proposed by Sir Joseph Flavelle and his friends."

Sir Sam was further asked the question:

"You seem to think there was no present need for coalition?

Answer: "None whatever, that is, had the Government done its full share during this last year."

Sir Sam therefore charges that the Government of Sir Robert Borden did not do its duty, and so does Mr. Burnham, and both of them ask the electors to vote for them and support Sir Robert Borden whom they knew did not do his duty by this country at a time when mistakes and blunders might result in national disaster to Canadian arms.

Mr. Hall stated that Sir Sam Hughes in his interview, in speaking of Union Government, said its works "could not be worse than it has been in the last two years with Perley holding up everything in England and White (Finance Minister) lining up everything for the benefit of the institutions with which he and Flavelle are allied. One would almost be led to believe that the desire was to prolong the war for the benefit of certain people and institutions in Canada.

"That is putting it pretty strong," Sir Sam was asked, and he answered:

"I am merely speaking of the effect of their actions. I do not know what their motives were. Their intentions may have been good, but good intentions constitute a pavement to nether regions."

And yet this is the Government that both Sir Sam Hughes and Mr. Burnham ask you to support to guide Canada through a life and death struggle.

Sir Sam Hughes knows full well, said Mr. Hall, and it is not necessary to repeat the well known charges of grafting, proved on sworn testimony from the months of unwilling witnesses, respecting the purchase of motors, horses, binoculars, bandages, drugs, boots, shells, guaze, fuse and implements of war and that these unseemly transactions took place under his own eye and under the nose of Sir Robert Borden who now seeks to stifle and conceal further investigation with the hollow pretence of so-called Union Government.

Indeed, said Mr. Hall, Sir Sam Hughes himself in his letter to Sir Robert Borden on May 13th, 1915, declared that the Government were listening to the grafter and the parasite to such an extent that "the contract branch has been very much hampered and practically blockaded; delays have been very prolonged; the cost has been greatly enhanced and the goods supplied have been in many cases inferior. Indeed the most ardent agents of the German Government could scarcely have been more successful in holding up the proper equipment of our forces had they been in control. It tends, not only to the injury and inefficiency of our soldiers; thus jeopardizing the success of British arms, but it must seriously reflect upon the Government."

And yet this is the weak and vacilliating Prime Minister that both Sir Sam and Mr. Burnham ask you to vote for, to keep in office and jeopardize the future freedom of Canada and the Great British Empire of which we are so proud to form a part.

SUCCESS FOR LOCAL BOY

His many friends in Peterborough who have followed the progress that he has made in his profession, will be interested in learning that Dr. Elmer S. WIN-THE-WAR LADIES' LIBERAL CLUB FORMED Enthusiastic Meeting Held in the Conservatory of Music Hall Last Night—Organization Has Already Opened Committee Rooms and Commenced Their Campaign.

MR. GORDON'S ADDRESS

The foundation of what promises to be a strong and far-reaching Club was formed last night in the Conservatory of Music Hall, when a large, representative body of ladies of the city met, to form the Win-the-War Ladies' Liberal Club, in the interests of Mr. R. R. Hall.

Mrs. George Suckling occupied the chair, and Miss Hamilton was appointed Secretary.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, who addressed the meeting, outlined the foundation of the restricted franchise for women, which dated from Mrs. L. A. Hamilton's visit to Parliament, after which the vote was restricted to the wives, mothers, daughters and sisters of soldiers overseas, and returned, thereby disfranchising women who by the laws of all provinces, but one in the Dominion, have the right to vote. Also aliens who have not been naturalised fourteen years were disfranchised. The last was in keeping with Paul Kruger's measure, in South Africa, where his disfranchisement of British subjects of less than 15 years residence was the beginning of the Boer war, and now this franchise limits the vote to a few women only.

The women decided to organise a "Win the War Ladies' Liberal Club" to look deeper into the rights of women to the franchise. In it we have three sets of rights; the Dominion, Provincial and Municipal vote.

All women should have the sacred right to vote, and to utilize this right they should thoroughly understand the policy of the parties and the responsibilities which have been placed upon their shoulders and prepare for the time which is near at hand, when all women will be allowed to use the right.

The Win-the-War Ladies' Club has been organized for the purpose of defending the glorious Dominion from great and powerful interests and to spread the gospel of universal franchise. It has been organized to see that all women, irrespective of their political persuasion, Conservative or Liberal, shall have the sacred right of voting. Conscientiously, it is easier to steal a man's name and property than to steal a woman's sacred right to vote and yet this and, in many cases, soldiers' next-of-kin had lost their right to vote by reason of the carelessness or worse of enumerators.

Mr. Gordon urged that the women should cast political convictions aside and work honestly so every woman may use her right to vote, was Mr. Gordon's advice to the ladies who were appointed to canvass the five wards of the city to make sure of honest enumeration.

Mr. Gordon outlined the policy of the Liberal party: "To win the war is the object of every party, but the suggestion of conscripting every man and every dollar sounds well, but cannot be done. Food producers, actually engaged as such, should be exempted. Take a farm which produces 2,000 bushels of cereals, operated by a father and the son, should this be left. The country must produce food and not leave at the front to starve, and

LONDON RAIDED

Twenty five aeroplanes attack England two of the raiders being brought down

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 6.— About twenty-five airplanes raided England to-day, it is announced officially. Of these six reached London. Two of the raiders were brought down, the crew of three men on each machine being captured.

It is believed the casualties in the raid ar few. The first group of enemy machines appeared shortly after 1 a. m. over the Kent coast and other groups reached London at 3 a.m. One or two explosions and a large number of incendiary bombs were dropped in various districts about five a.m. A number of fires occurred in London, but all were speedily got under control by the Metropolitan fire brigade. A number of our own airplanes went up. They all landed safely.

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, Dec. 6.—(Official.)—Our batteries shelled the enemy lines, causing great damage. Enemy efforts at all points were repulsed.

BENNETT TO HANG

Is Convicted of the Murder of Bruce Leitch Last July

Canadian Press Despatch:

PEMBROKE, Dec. 6.—Satisfied that he was quite sane, the jury last night returned a verdict of guilty in the case of William Bennett, aged 20, of Montreal, who shot and killed Bruce Leitch, who had just married the girl Bennett loved, at Sand Point, in July last. Bennett also seriously wounded the girl and destroyed his own eyesight in attempting suicide.

When Justice Latchford asked the prisoner if he had anything to say he replied:

"No, sir, I will die like a man."

He was then sentenced to be hanged April 17th.

Bennett's aged father and mother were in court.

VICTORY LOAN CAMPAIGNERS MEET

Valedictory Dinner Was Held Last Evening

The Victory Loan campaigners met last evening in Hooper's Palm Parlours, where the final report of the campaign was presented and adopted. The grand total for Peterborough City and County is $1,746,600.

Each of the team captains in the respective wards of the city gave a short address which was followed by a presentation to Mr. Felix Brownscombe, secretary of the Victory Loan organisation.

The presentation took the form of a $50 Victory Bond, with one year's interest added.

Mr. Brownscombe made a suitable reply, and incidentally presented a report covering the operations of the district. The high team was represented by Mr. T. W. Robinson and Mr. G. Ruth, while the second high team was represented by Mr. P. Campbell and Mr. W. F. Johnston.

Mr. Blewett, of Hall's Bridge, referred to the work accomplished in his district, and modestly disclaimed all credit for what he had done.

The work of Mr. R. L. Warren, organiser for this district, was eulogistically commented upon, and also that of Mr. W. H. Bradburn, who headed he organisation.

WE WISH AGAIN

To emphasize the fact that we can prove to you entire satisfaction, that you either need glasses or don't. We will tell you frankly if you do not need them, and make no charge for the information. See Dr. Lacey, 410 George street. Open Wednesday evening.

Frank Jenns says:

The old slogan "Do your Christmas shopping early," is as important this year as ever. Not only have you a better opportunity to choose your gifs while the ranges of Christmas goods are complete, but also an opportunity to choose carefully and leisurely. No last-minute rush. "Come to me."

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

.THURSDAY, DEC. 6, 1917

BETWEEN THE DEVIL AND THE DEEP SEA.

Hon. Mr. Rowell must sit up o' nights "thinking up things" to say in favour of conscription and the Union government. He tried to frighten the people of Midland by saying that "Canadian industrial concerns would possibly be forced to close down if this country (Canada) failed to continue carrying on the war."

Who in Canada contemplates Canada contemplates the retirement of Canada from the war, except a Quebec faction which Mr. Rowell's leader, Sir Robert Borden, by his alliance with the Nationalists, permitted and encouraged to debauch patriotic sentiment in that province?

Mr. Rowell should be above using such clap-trap; but his new political associations are evidently becoming too much for the exLiberal, leader of Ontario, and making him an illustration of the proverb—"evil communications corrupt good manners" as well as logic.

The greatest danger to industrial interests lies in the strict enforcement of conscription. If farmers are to be exempted wholesale, where are we to get the 100,000 conscripts, unless we make up the deficiency by taking men from our factories and workshops?

The men eligible for fighting, in towns and cities, are nearly all connected with industrial work—especially in Peterborough. Where shall we get the 100,000 men needed if we exempt the other great source of supply, the rural districts, unless we take the men from the factories?

If we do that, where will the farmers who are favoured get their ploughs, their harrows, their reapers, to work the farms, if the factory workers are sent overseas?

Conscription doesn't seem to be the easy thing to work, especially when it is compelled to do double duty — get soldiers by fair means, and help win an election by foul means.

The Borden Franchise Act and election machinery, is a matter of "heads I win; tails you lose."

EATING THE CAKE AND HAVING IT.

The frantic appeals of the advocates of the union government to regard conscription as the paramount thing have held the stage for a long time; but the necessity of modifying the application of conscription to avoid antagonising voters has become a new obsession. Farmers must be exempted, it being suddenly discovered that their work on the farm is indispensable, as is very much the case.

So great is the necessity of defeating the objects of the Military Service Act, in the interest of saving votes that, following his leader's cue, the Union candidate of West Peterborough has been frantically shooting wires to Ottawa, and in answer to "your fourth wire" received a telegram from the Deputy Minister of Agriculture announcing official interference with the operation of conscription. The Warden of the County is appointed to round up farmers' sons who escaped exemption, and report their cases to Military Headquarters, Kingston, with a view of having them "relieved from military service."

There is no doubt that there is necessity of maintaining the forces of food production; but Sir Robert Borden did not recognise that when he declared publicly, repeatedly and officially that the Military Service Act was to be enforced to the hilt. He only saw the necessity of farm labour when it was discovered that a fair application of the Act would probably cost the Union Government a good many votes.

The Borden Government, in its new form, is more grasping than when it was sailing under the "Jolly Roger" of the spirit of Hon. 'Bob.' Rogers, the expert at winning elections."

The Borden Government, under the flag of "Union," is not satisfied with the partizan advantages of a despicably dishonest and disfranchising franchise act and an adjustable voters' list, but it must even bend to the work of vote getting the Military Service Act, whose prompt and unbending enforcement is absolutely essential to winning the war, and—giving the Borden Government another lease of office.

Borden is more under "French domination than Laurier. Borden was ordered to take three flag-shooting Nationalists into his Cabinet and he did it.

OUR DEBT TO THE SAILORS OF THE BRITISH NAVY.

The Ontario branch of the Navy League of Canada is conducting a campaign in the interests of the fund "for the relief of British and Canadian sailors and their dependents, Sailors' Homes, etc., etc."

This is something that appeals strongly to Canada's sense of gratitude and duty. Helping this fund is the only way in which Canada can repay an infinicstimal fraction of the debt we owe to the British navy. It has kept the sea paths safe so that four hundred thousand Canadian soldiers have, without mishap or hindrance, been transported over three thousan miles of danger strewn seas, unharmed — been harmlessly guided and shielded through the deadly submarine zones.

Not only in this special and direct way is Canaad a debtor to the unsleeping vigilance of the British navy. On all the seven seas it has kept sleepless watch and ward—day and night in storm and stress—watching over the lives, the liberties and the welfare of the world. We owe it to the splendid work of the British navy that the shores of the Mother Land, the shores of Canada, are safe from the Tueton invader—that Britain and Canada have escaped the fate of ravaged Belgium. True, much has been done by British and Canadian armies in France and Flanders to stem the tide of invasion. But they never would have been there; would never have been fed, kept supplied and kept fighting fit, without the British Navy. The background of our safety, our security, has been, and still is, the British Navy, and we owe much to the sailors who have fallen, wounded or overwrought in their tremendous task. Canada's share of debt is great.

Canada is specially called upon to respond; for this country in all its history, in its days of dependence as in its days of incipient nationhood, has never shared Great Britain's work of naval defence of Canada, and the empire. We have strengthened the British army with legions of the best fighting soldiers in the world; but to the British navy we have never added a ship. We have been pensioners upon British naval bounty.

We have not furnished ships and sailors to the navy—to the ships and sailors—that have sheltered us; we have rather made the work harder by not doing our share. Therefore, a big responsibility rests upon us to contribute to the funds for the relief of the sailors of th British Navy.

Canada, bravely tried to wipe out the disgrace of being a pauper dependent for naval protection upon Great Britain. Sir Wilfrid Laurier passed an act to build a Canadian navy. But Sir Robert Borden got orders from Bourassa to "scrap" it, and Sir Robert Borden obeyed.

Labour Men Will Follow Up Ward System Resolution

The Trades and Labour Council decided last night to follow up the City Council's resolution to present a by-law to the ratepayers in January for the abolition of the ward system of aldermanic election. It will be necessary to advertise the by-law which City Solicitor Gordon prepares, eighteen days before election day, January 8th, and the Labour men are anxious that a special meeting of the City Council be held shortly in order that the by-law may be passed. They will also ask the members of the Council who supported the resolution to attend the special meeting to ensure the passing of the by-law.

RUSH FOR HOLIDAY WHISKY.

Prospect of End of Selling Forces Its Price Up.

GLASGOW, Dec. 6. — There is a great rush for whisky in this town and despite the very high prices now ruling there have been long lines of women in the Clyde working districts waiting outside shops to buy as many bottles as possible for the Christmas festivities.

Scotch distillers express the belief that the sale of whiskey will cease in a few weeks and this has increased the urgency of the demand. Publicans have decided to curtail their selling hours, and prices in the bars have risen to ten pence a glass in the poorer districts, and to fourteen pence in the higher class saloons. These are the highest prices ever known in Scotland, but, in consequence of the big wages now being earned, there is no slackening in the demand.

BORDEN'S FLAT FAILURE TO REGULATE FOOD PRICES

Appeals from many angles are being made in the present campaign and Mr. Rowell's reference the other evening about the recent regulating of the packing houses, recalls one of the most important phases of administration in which Borden failed lamentably, that is in regard to the cost of living.

That he and his chief supporters, who are still at the head of a Union Government, have made no real attempt to curb the steady increase in the price of foodstuffs, the necessaries of life, is a self-evident fact. True a Food Controller was appointed and he is certainly worth all the salary Mr. Rowell said he was drawing. At all events, not very many have control; on the contrary, it is a fact that food prices have actually increased. Just sit down and take an inventory of your latest purchases and this fact will be thrust home to you.

The June issue of the Labour Gazette, which is issued by the Department of Labour at Ottawa, states:

"In retail prices (June, 1917) the cost of a family budget of some 30 staple foods averaged $11.82 in 60 cities as compared with $10.77 in April and $8.37 in May, 1916.

"In wholesale prices the Department's index number stood at 240.0 for May, as compared with 228.7 for April and 183.3 in May, 1916."

The October issue of the Gazette shows the retail weekly average of $11.65 at the middle of the month. The decrease was due to a considerable fall in potatoes, but spuds have once again rebounded away up again. Pork products and dairy prices, the index number stood 243.2, as compared with 245.0 in August, 183.4 September, 1916, and 134.4 in September, 1913. Thus it will be seen how much the Borden Administration has accomplished in reducing the cost of living. You have not felt any reduction. Have you, Mr. Workingman? Oh, no. Nor are you likely to with Mr. Borden at the head.

Some of the prices quoted may give you an interesting comparison, dealing with Stratford:

	1915	1917
Sirloin steak	25c	30c
Veal, forequarter	18c	28c
Bacon, breakfast	29c	40c
Pork, roast	22c	36c
Lard	16c	30c
Milk	7c
Bread	4c	11c
Flour	3c	6.3c
Rolled Oats	4 1-2c	6c
Sugar	7 9-13c	10c
Tea	35c	45c
Potatoes, 1 1-2 bus.	$1.50	$2.35
Coal, anthracite	$7.00	$9.00
Bituminous	$6.00	$8.50

These are merely a few picked at random, but they serve to show how inactive the Government has been, and mark you, these figures are from the Department of Labour Reports.

Take potatoes, for example. Everyone grew potatoes last summer, and the vacant lot committee estimated the increased production in the city at $20,000. This would be largely potatoes. Farmers raised plenty of potatoes and the suffering consumer was assured that lower prices were in store. True the price did come down from its $5 mark of last year, but present indications are that with the country stocked with spuds, the price is aiming straight at the $5 mark again, absolutely no effort to stop it. The fact of the matter is that the Food Controller is not alive to the fact that speculators are in control of the potato market, have stored the supply and are only letting out a limited supply. Cheap potatoes were assured during the summer, there were plenty it was said, and the price was sure to go down. On the contrary, it has steadily mounted from $1.25 a bag until now $2.25 has to be parted with to secure a bag of potatoes. Food control forsooth.

Sir Robert Borden, in an address at London recently, made a lame attempt to place the blame for failure to cope with the high cost of living on the Motherland. But it won't go down. Sir Robert Borden has been tried and found wanting on this most vital issue. Once again the big interests were predominant to the common people. The time to remedy conditions is 17th December. Be sure you are on the lists.—Stratford Beacon.

Music & Drama

"THE PRINCESS PAT,"

"The Princess Pat," Victor Herbert's tuneful musical comedy, came back to the Grand Opera House last night after an absence of two years, and scored an even bigger hit than on the occasion of its first presentation in this city. Last night's company was equal, if not superior, to the former cast, and made the most of Herbert's lilting melodies and of the humour of Blossom's lines. No better singing or dancing company has been seen here for some time. Principals and chorus exhibited splendid voices and the result was a performance that was altogether delightful. Few of Victor Herbert's comic operas contain as many song hits as "The Princess Pats." "Make Him Guess," "For Better or For Worse," "I'd Like to Be a Quitter But I Find It Hard to Quit," "I Wish I Was an Island in an Ocean of Girls," "The Shoes of Husband Number One as Worn by Husband Number Two," "All For You," and "The Neapolitan Love Song," all scored heavily and encores were frequent.

Annette Ford was altogether charming in the title role, showing marked histrionic ability, as well as a clear, powerful, and well controlled soprano voice. Neil Moore was smooth and effective in his comedy methods as Bob Darrow. Will H. Sloan made the part of James O'Brien, Sr., a thoroughly funny one, and Wilbur Cox was responsible for gales of laughter as Si Perkins, the village "constable." Stephie Anderson, assisted by Edwin Stanley, contributed some delightful dancing, and the singing of John Reinhard was a noteworthy feature.

The other parts were in good hands and the whole production was an artistic success. It was beautifully staged. "The Princess Pat" made a unique record of coming back after two years with a production as good if not better than the company originally seen here.

NO TOBOGGANING AND SKATING AT JACKSON PARK THIS WINTER

There will be no toboggan slide or skating rink at Jackson Park this winter, according to information from the Street Railway men. It is stated that conditions prevent the re-opening of the slide, and because it was felt the rink might not of itself prove a sufficient attraction to make its operation profitable, both the rink and toboggan slide will be idle this winter.

The recipe for Fish Kedgeree, mentioned above, is as follows:

Fish Kedgeree—
1 1-2 cups flaked cooked fish
1 egg
4 tabelspoons rice
1 teaspoon chopped onion
Salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons dripping

Put the rice into fast-boiling water, with a teaspoon of salt, and boil fast until tender (about twenty minutes.) Drain well, and dry in a colander. Boil the egg hard, cool it in cold water, and chop it coarsely. Melt the fat in a saucepan, stir in the cooked rice, add the fish and seasoning. Make it very hot, then add the chopped egg, and serve at once.

NURSING SISTER DOUGLAS GAVE AN ADDRESS

Graduate Nurses Meet in Regular Monthly Session

The monthly meeting of the Peterborough Chapter of the Graduate Nurses' Association of Ontario was held yesterday afternoon in the Public Library. There was a good attendance of nurses to welcome home Nursing Sister M. K. Douglas, who gave a very interesting address on her experiences while at the front. After the meeting a hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Douglas and the meeting concluded.

THE DEATH OF 4 ALFRED WINSLOW

MILLBROOK, Dec. 6.—The death of Alfred Winslow, son of the late George Blaney Winslow, Cavan, took place at Peterborough Hospital on Thursday, Nov. 29, 1917, at the age of twenty-nine years. Deceased had been ailing for a long time, but had been able to work, and was employed by the Bell Telephone Company until a few weks ago, when he was taken seriously ill. He went to the hospital where an operation was performed, but his strength was not sufficient and he passed away a couple of days after the operation. He was a young man of sterling qualities and was highly respected. His many friends will regret to learn of his death. In religion he was a Methodist. The funeral, on Saturday, from the residence of his brother, Mr. Frederick Winslow, Cavan, to Gardiner's Cemetery, was under the direction of the Bailieboro Orange Lodge of which deceased was a faithful member, and was largely attended the lodges of Bailieboro, Manvers, Fallis Line, Carmel and Millbrook were all well represented. The Church burial services were conducted by Rev. W. Higgs and those of the Orange Order by Harry Gainer, W. M., and Harry Kerr, Chaplain. At the grave the Orangemen made a circle around the grave and gave the Order's honours, and each member dropped his bit of Orange ribbon on the casket Those left to mourn his loss are four brothers—Percy, Fred, Marvin and George, and eight sisters: Mrs. Louis Wedlock, Mrs. Wm. Tait, and Misses Clara and Eva Winslow, Toronto, Mrs. Stanley Stewart, Lemrie, Sask., Mrs. Emery Fallis, Grassy Lake, Mrs. Albert Benson, Regina, Sask., and Miss Jennie Winslow, of Millbrook.

TIMBER CASE IN SUPREME COURT

LINDSAY, Dec. 5.—The executors and trustees of the McDonald Estate and Thomas Henderson, of Sommerville, are the plaintiffs and defendant respectively, in an action in the Supreme Court at Lindsay, which opened yesterday.

The plaintiffs ask damages and an injunction restraining the defendant from entering upon and cutting pine timber in certain lands in the Township of Galway. The defendant in his statement of defence claims that he has the patent rights to the lands.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, Peterborough, is counsel for the plaintiffs, and Gordon, Widdifield & O'Brien, Peterborough, for the defence.

NEW WINNIPEG TRAIN

Travel between Eastern and Western Canada is always heavy in the winter months, particularly during December, with its holiday season. To meet the requirements of the public, therefore, a Special Daily Service between Toronto and Winnipeg is announced by the Canadian Northern Railway: Westbound, December 3rd to January 2nd, 1918, only: Eastbound, December 1st to January 5th, 1918, only. Thereafter regular tri-weekly service will be resumed. A Tourist Sleeping Car will also be operated daily between Toronto and Calgary as part of the above special service, and connection will be made with regular daily trains between Winnipeg and Edmonton. Service between Toronto and Vancouver remains tri-weekly, leaving Toronto on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, as at present. RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

SILVER THIMBLE AND TRINKET DAY FOR BOYS AT THE FRONT

The Ontario W.C.T.U. is endeavouring to raise a fund of $25,000 for free tea, cocoa, coffee, and lemonade.

The National Y.M.C.A., whom the Ontario W.C.T.U. is aiding, will need $50,000 to cover their free drinkables.

The W.C.T.U. has already sent to France, mainly for this purpose, about $11,000; but the need grows more insistent.

In addition to the free drinkables the Ontario W.C.T.U. has become responsible for the cost of printing a weekly leaflet of cheer and spiritual help, which is being sent through the mails to all the soldiers in the forward trenches, who express a desire to receive it. The appreciation of the men for this bit of comfort can be judged by the fact that in one division alone, and within one month after the issue began, 15,000 soldiers asked that their names be entered on the "Pay Book Leaflet" list—the leaflets being so named from the fact that they are designed to fit into the soldiers' pay book.

To aid in raising the necessary funds the W.C.T.U. of this city will shortly hold a Silver Thimble and Trinket Day, when they will ask every citizen to look through their possessions for broken, useless, unwanted bits of gold and silver trinkets, discarded jewellery or table silver, solid or triple-plated.

Any of the following articles will be thankfully received and the proceeds of their sale used for the above purposes.

Old gold or silver thimbles, bracelets, brooches, rings, chains or links of chains, silver match boxes, scarf pins, old gold or silver watches, odd cuff links, studs, gold or silver tops of canes or umbrellas, watch charms, broken spoons, forks, or toilet articles in sterling silver or triple-plate, coins in gold or silver, which have been monogrammed or punched.

All these articles will be melted down and the proceeds used to flood the forward trenches with the harmless drinks our boys so need.

Articles that would bring more money if sold, than as "scrap," will be sold.

Fuller particulars will be given later.

PRESENTATION TO MR. G. H. LOGIE

The members of the Peterborough Clearing House presented, on behalf of the Clearing House, Mr. G. H. Logie, of the Bank of Nova Scotia, with a handsome case of silver and a box of cigars. Mr. V. Eastwood, manager of the Royal Bank, also read an address in eulogy of Mr. Logie's useful and capable membership with the Clearing House, and expressed the fullest measure of esteem and respect for their companion member, who leaves at the end of the week to assume the management of the Bank of Nova Scotia in Edmonton.

Suffered Great Agony

FROM PAIN IN STOMACH FOR OVER 5 YEARS

Most of the misery and ill-health that humanity is burdened with arises from disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. If you are feeling out of sorts, have pains in the stomach, especially after eating, bilious spells, headaches, sour stomach, coated tongue, sallow or muddy complexion, specks floating before the eyes, you should take a few doses of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and note the change.

Miss Ida Hogan, Dunrobin, Ont., writes: "For over five years I have suffered great agony from pains in the stomach. I tried several remedies but got no relief until a friend advised me to take Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I started with two vials and before I had one quite used, I found much relief. I continued until I used four vials, and they have completely cured me. That was fourteen months ago and I have not had the slightest return since. The best praise I could give them is not enough."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—The display of hypocrisy that is so evident at present brings to my mind those lines:

"When the devil was sick the devil
a monk would be;
When the devil was well, the devil
a monk was he."

If the common people are not fed up while not admiring their taste, we must have some regard for their capacity.

Are there not grounds for suspicion when we see members of the Prohibition party lined up with the greatest enemy of the Ontario Temperance Act? Is it for Union Government graft and to save the dividends of the big interests that they patronise this enemy without a protest? I refer to the advertisements that appear in their local organ that are helping to keep up the booze festivals that are taking place too frequently of late.

Thousands of dollars are going into the pockets of the Nationalists of Quebec from these advertisements, and we are told that they are traitors If some others that I know were guilty of this, they soon would be told that they were trading with the enemy.

The notorious Lavergne, who is a candidate against the Laurier candidate in Montmagny, is the legal representative of the liquor interests. Bourassa and all the prominent Nationalists will soon have enough of our money to demand a baronetcy. This would only be history repeating itself—the Dewar, Bass and Guinness families, with others, from the peerage of Britain.

How long are the working class and the producer going to play into the hands of the classes? Some misguided wage earners will tell us that they will not vote at an election. I know of twenty who were supposed to mark their ballots for labour, but when the votes were counted only six ballots were spoiled, four of them were marked wrong. Canvassers are reporting this kind of voter harmless.

The working man never had a better opportunity of gettingg in on the ground floor, because all leaders in politics who put the interest of the classes first are in the one party.—Yours truly,

One of the Common People.

CHERNIAVSKY TRIO.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—I have been asked repeatedly if it is I who am bringing the above trio again to our city. I wish to state that I am not responsible in any way for their coming. Last year, at their urgent request, I undertook to manage their concert, and both my pupils and myself worked hard to make it a financial success, as they had lost money on their previous visits. We managed to accomplish this, but to my great regret I was obliged to inform the assembled audience in the Conservatory Hall that they could not fulfil their engagement. I did not receive one cent from them for all my work in connection with the concert, but on the contrary experienced the doubtful pleasure of being out of pocket over the refunding of the ticket money, in addition to the regret I felt, for the first time in my experience failing to keep faith with the public.

Therefore, when they wired me from Chicago on 15th of last month, asking me to again manage their concert on 11th of this month "on same terms as before," I very naturally wired back declining.

I feel this explanation is due both myself and the musical public.

Yours faithfully, John Allan.

Peterborough, 5th Dec. 1917.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—The Review says "Mr. Hall turns the laugh on himself by charging that 'General Currie is a Borden pet,' and says that the Commander-in-Chief of the Canadian Army is a life-long Liberal and not a Conservative Ward Heeler."

Mr. Hall did not say that General Currie was either a Liberal or Conservative, but he did say that he was relieved of his command. General Currie may have been a Liberal of the same stripe as Sir Thomas White and Millionaire Ballantyne.

The Review comments: "Mr. Hall "says that the casualties among the "Canadian soldiers have been higher "than among the French and British. "He is probably right. The records "show that too often the Canadian "boys have been valorous without "being discreet. That is to their "credit, the highest compliment that "can be paid them. They hesitate "at nothing, pause at no danger."

But what is to be said of the Commander-in-Chief who permits them to needlessly sacrifice their lives? What is to be said for General Currie who permitted these boys to bravely march on to an untimely death that could have been avoided by good generalship? That is why General Currie was relieved of his command.—Yours, Reader.

Peterborough, 5th Dec, 1917.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Will you kindly allow me to make use of your columns to say something about the 93rd Battalion band instruments.

As you know, the G.W.V.A. announced their intention some time ago of organising a Veterans' Band and also of applying to the city for the use of the 93rd instruments. At our meeting on Monday night Lieut.-Col. Mills, the commanding officer of the 57th Regiment, waited on us and informed us that he was applying to the City Council to have the 93rd instruments loaned to the 57th Regiment. We discussed the matter later on, and after expressing the unanimous opinion that our Association was entitled to the use of these instruments, we appointed a committee to handle the affair. Much to our surprise we read in the daily papers that the Council had decided to loan the instruments to the 57th.

The G.W.V.A. feel that they have first claim on the band instruments. In the first place, the instruments were raised by popular subscription, aided by the efforts of the bandsmen themselves, and were for the use of overseas men. Secondly, a number of the men for whom the instruments were intended have returned from overseas and are now members of the G.W.V.A., and ready to assist in organising a Veterans' Band. In the third place, we may expect to find these 93rd bandsmen returning from time to time and assisting in the work. Fourth, nearly one hundred former members of the 93rd Battalion, who themselves subscribed to the band instruments, are members of the G.W.V.A.

For these and other reasons we feel justified in asking the City Council to reconsider their decision. Bandmaster Walter Hughes, under whose leadership the 93rd Battalion Band developed into one of the finest C.E.F. musical organisations that has left Canada during the war, is a member of the Great War Veterans' Association, and has consented to take over the leadership of the Veterans' Band. Among our members we have the nucleus of a creditable band, and we propose to organise and commence work at once.

We cannot see any reason, under the circumstances, why the 57th Regiment Band, which disappointed the citizens last summer and is a notoriously difficult aggregation to get into action when the demand for a band arises, unless the financial line is sufficiently heavy, should be granted these instruments?

Yours faithfully,

Sidney Whatley,

Secretary, Peterborough Branch, Great War Veterans' Association.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—May I ask your kind indulgence for a few remarks with regard to a little matter mentioned in your columns in the issue dated the 4th inst.

I note that more intelligent and honest Councils have prevailed to some extent with our city government, and it was decided to allow Mr. Steinberg to handle the fish which the Council are arranging to have supplied to the city.

This, of course, is only an act of common justice, as the man who handles this article fifty-two weeks in the year should have first consideration.

But, seeing that the fish are not to be delivered by the other dealers handling it, I still fail to understand how it is in the public interest, or in what way it will increase the use of this valuable food, by compelling people to travel, in many instances, considerable distances to obtain it, or in what way it will conduce to low prices by limiting the competition. Perhaps a successful business man like Mr. Dobbin may be able to explain this to an unenlightened public.

Asking your consideration of this, and thanking you for the same, I remain,

Yours truly

Rev. Robt. Pogue's Services Appreciated

Congregation of St. Paul's Church Vote Their Pastor an Increase in Salary of $500 a Year as a Mark of Their Appreciation.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY

Yesterday, December 5, marked the tenth anniversary of the Rev. Robert Pogue's induction into the pulpit of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, and last evening the members of the congregation gave a tangible evidence of their appreciation of the splendid work he has accomplished, by voting him an increase in salary of $500 a year. The motion was moved by Mr H. O. Fisk, a member of the Session, who referred to the exceptionally fine results in spiritual matters that had been accomplished by Rev. Mr. Pogue during his ministry, as evidenced in the large number of conversions and additions to the church membership The motion was seconded by Mr. W H. Hill, who also spoke appreciatively and at some length of Rev. Mr Pogue as a man and of his work for the people of St. Paul's. Mr. Hill felt that the congregation of St. Paul's should show their appreciation in a tangible way and that the tenth anniversary of his ministry was a suitable occasion on which to do so. A considerable number of speeches were made to the same effect by Mr. Wm Madill, Major Dr. Eastwood, Messrs J. C. Smith, J. A. Johnson, H. B Cowan, James Dutton, J. H. Connal and P. A. Ferguson.

Mr. Wm. Scott was favourable to the making of a substantial present as a token of esteem, but the majority favoured an increase in salary being given and this plan was finally determined upon. Last year and this year over $1,000 has been paid off each year on the mortgage on the Manse, the church being free from incumbrance of any kind, This year important improvements have been made in the church and have been paid for out of the current revenue. The finances of the congregation are considered to be in a satisfactory condition, thus bearing testimony to the excellent work that has been accomplished under Rev. Mr. Pogue's ministry.

Striking evidence of the splendid work Rev. Mr. Pogue has accomplished was given when it was stated that during the ten years of his ministry over one thousand members have been added to the congregation, a high percentage of which were on profession of conversion. Appreciative reference was made to the fact that Rev. Mr. Pogue has staunchly upheld the inspiration of the Scriptures, and to the excellent evangelical work he has done.

Arts and Crafts Column

HUGHSON JOHNSTONE, painter and decorator, 416 Water street, will answer in this column each Wednesday for Examiner readers, questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paper-hanging, kalsomining, furniture polishing, decorating, etc., for the benefit of those who might like doing their own work. Questions sent to the Examiner will receive attention in due course.

Mrs. Jas. McD., Peterborough: Through your "Arts and Crafts" column, will you please answer the following questions—(1) What is the easiest way to take old paper off the walls? (2) Should the cracks be filled and how? (3) What is the best method of hanging wall paper? (4) What is the best way to make paste?

Answer.—(1) Soak the paper thoroughly with warm water (use an ordinary whitewash brush to apply the water); then scrape off with a painter's wall scraper. (2) Fill all holes and cracks with plaster of paris, after first scraping out the loose plaster, and thoroughly soaking the holes or cracks with water; mix the plaster of paris with vinegar. (3) Space will not permit us to go into the details of hanging wallpaper. However, the outline is, cut the paper in strips the length required, making each strip match the other, paste the reverse side, fold inwards, cut off both selvidges, open the strip, and place it against the wall, and brush the face side with a soft brush to smooth out the wrinkles, and repeat. (4) Make a smooth batter of rye flour and water, then pour in boiling water, stirring continually until it changes colour and thickens; then thin with cold water to the consistency of thick cream. The addition of a teaspoonful of alum will help preserve it.

J. T., George Street: What will take scratches out of plate glass?

Answer.—Nothing short of re-polishing.

"Waxing Girl": Please explain the exact method of waxing hardwood floors, and oblige.

Answer.—First see that the floors are thoroughly clean, then apply the wax according to directions on the can, polishing crosswise first, then finishing with the grain of the wood.

Bayard Veiller's Greatest Success

The tremendous success that has been scored by "The Thirteenth Chair," the famous 'melodrama of mystery' which will be shown here at "The Grand" theatre on Thursday next, Dec. 13th, makes Bayard Veiller, the author, easily one of the most interesting figures in the world of letters to-day

"Within the Law," which was the first great success written by Mr. Veiller, established no end of records in the theatrical world. It set a record for a continuous run at one theatre; it set a record for the number of companies that could successfully tour the number of companies that could successfully tour the company in the same play; it set a record for the amount of money one play could earn for its producers.

Now comes "The Thirteenth Chair," and it is the unanimous verdict of critics and those who are interested in the managerial end of the theatrical business that with it, Mr. Veiller has scored an even greater success than he did with "Within the Law." And in this connection it might be said in pasing that now, when the oft-used expression, "greater than 'Within the Law'" might in truth be employed, the author is practically forbidden to use it because it was used so often undeservedly, that what ever value such a claim might have has been utterly nullified.

However, the fact remains that to Mr. Veiller himself has fallen the pleasant task of outdoing himself. Were it in athletic circles, he might well be described as a champion who has outdone himself—who has broken all his own records.

And in the same connection it is interesting to note that occasionally in the theatrical world, lightning does strike twice in the same place. Not that one playwright has not in the past and will not in the future write two or more successes, but it is rare, indeed, for the same author to write two plays that stand out from among all the successes of the respective seasons in which they are produced as the greatest plays of that year.

As was the case in "Within the Law" this new play from the pen of Mr. Veiller makes a tremendous appeal to the emotions, and it has that which the other lacked an element of mystery that makes it quite the most remarkable theatrical offering of the year.

"Within the Law" placed Mr. Veiller in the foremost ranks of American playwrights. "The Thirteenth Chair" places him at the very pinnacle of the playwriting profession.

INSTRUCTION CAR IN PETERBOROUGH

The Ontario Department of Agriculture, including the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, and the Grand Trunk Railway are co-operating in running demonstration cars over the Grand Trunk lines in Eastern Ontario. The work will begin November 27th and continue until December 21. A whole day will be spent at each of the twenty-two places to be visited.

EQUIPMENT OF CARS.

Two comfortably heated baggage cars will be devoted to exhibits illustrating selection and testing of seeds; under-drainage and soil moisture control; water supply and sewage disposal; the use of fertilizers and lime; production of corn, cereals, roots, potatoes and vegetables, with samples of the best types; commercial feeds with their camparative valnes at present prices; dairying, including dairy herd improvement by the use of the Babcock tester and scales, cooling apparatus and sanitary dairy equipment; insect pests and plant diseases and their control; the proper method of preparing wool for market, with samples of standard market grades; poultry house equipment and desirable types of utility breeds; poultry feed, etc. Bulletins and leaflets on agricultural topics will be distributed.

THE CARS WILL BE OPEN FROM 10 a.m. until 5.30 p.m. each day. Competent demonstrators and lecturers in charge of the exhibits will be ready and willing to answer all questions asked and will give all assistance possible to those requiring help with special problems.

SCHOOL CHILDREN INVITED

A special effort is being made to reach the school children. Trustees and teachers are requested to allow all children of the higher grades in the public schols and all the students in the High Schools to visit the cars. Particular attention will be devoted to the children from 10 a.m. until 12 a.m. noon, each day.

The car will be in Peterborough on Thursday, December 13th.

Ald. Dobbin Assures Trades and Labour Council that City is Making Every Effort to Get Coal

In an address before the Trades and Labour Council last night, Ald. Dobbin explained the coal situation, the operations of the Municipal Fuel Depot, and incidentally emphasized the feature of service the Patriotic Fund provides for the dependents of soldiers, which would not be possible under the impersonal system by which the separation allowance and assigned pay are transmitted to them.

Ald. Dobbin discussed first the general conditions that have combined to decrease the visible supply of coal. When the United States declared war on Germany her obligations as an ally demanded that Italy's serious shortage of fuel be supplied from American mines. The U. S. navy, under war conditions, consumed great quantities of coal, and the ocean liners had to fill their bunkers on this side of the Atlantic for both the outward and return voyages. The huge munitions plants across the border further depleted the regular supply. Added to the problem of increased demand were new labour difficulties the mine owners had to face. Many of their best miners went to the munitions plants where they received higher wages, and in turn this necessitated increased wages in the mines. The decreased coal production was accentuated by the effect of the price restrictions until the scarcity reached the present acute stage.

Peterborough's coal venture opened promisingly Ald. Dobbin continued, but with the scarcity becoming more manifest as winter approached, the lines were gradually tightened, and the Fuel Controllers tied them in a knot. Peterborough has ten cars of coal across the border awaiting shipment into Canada, but the Ontario Controller has asserted that if they are brought in he will distribute them, and this city might secure only one car. Mayor Duffus went to Ottawa on Wednesday and one of the requests he will present to the Dominion Fuel Controller will be the city's right to obtain the cars it had ordered through the initiative of the local coal depot.

Supplied Soldiers' Dependents.

Ald. Dobbin related the details of a plan he carried through by which $4,000 worth of coal was imported and distributed to the dependents of soldiers. Early in the summer he suggested to them that they deposit sums of money with him to pay for the coal he proposed to secure for them, thus relieving them of the worry of obtaining their supplies. The majority of the women responded eagerly and this forehanded scheme was quietly effected apart from the city depot.

Ald. Dobbin stated that the coal retailers had been very helpful to the committee. Ald. Weir had given them the benefit of his experience, and Mr. Hicks had devoted two weeks to the delivery of the coal for the homes of the soldiers' wives practically to the exclusion of his regular business during that time after he had arranged to supply the coal at a price advantageous to the soldiers' families. Mr. Dobbin asserted that he did not believe there was any combine among the local dealers. They had to depend upon their regular companies for shipments and some of them had been unable to secure even their usual allotments. But among the companies and the miners there seemed to be concerted but invisible discouragement of municipalities entering the business even in the present emergency.

May Commandeer Private Supplies.

Among the questions the Mayor will present to the Fuel Controller is that of the details by which coal may be commandeered from private homes that may have large supplies. This recourse will not be employed unless the situation becomes critical.

In the meantime, Ald. Dobbin assured the Trades and Labour Council, the city is doing everything possible to bring in coal for the people. It should be necessary to increase the price this step will not be undertaken without the assent of the people.

HALIFAX ON FIRE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Ont., December 6.—A private despatch received at one p.m. from G. T. Bell of the G.T.R. in Montreal, says: "Two hundred dead bodies have been located north of the station." .....

Hon. J. D. Reid, Minister of Railways, who is in Toronto, received the following message this morning from Mr. Hayes, Divisionala Superintendent of the I.C.R. at Moncton: "Halifax City is on fire. Fire is spreading. We are sending special trains out of Moncton, and every city with fire apparatus is also being used. We are also picking up fire apparatus between Moncton and Sydney and rushing it to Halifax.. The situation is bad."

On receipt of the news, Dr. J. D. Reid, sent a message to Mr. Hayes to give every possible assistance that might be required in succoring the people. He acted on behalf of the Government.

LATER ESTIMATE IS THREE HUNDRED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TRURO, N.S., December 6.—This afternoon word from Halifax gave the number of dead from munition ship explosion at three hundred.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TRURO, N.S., December 6.—It is stated here that the ship which collided and sunk with the munition boat was a Red Cross liner.

Bourlon Described As Pocket of Hall

(By William Philip Simms.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, December 6.—Bourlon is a pocket of hell to-day. The trees of Bourlon Heights are splintered away. The ground is evilly pockmarked by the dread disease of war. Pools of slimy, suggestively red water, stretch everywhere. Corpses are scattered about thickly. The defenders are too busy to bury them. A horrible stench from those torn and mangled remains rises to mingle with the fumes of exploding shells and with the Prussian gas. Overhead Boche shrapnel bursts in an everlasting barrage. Gas shells monotonously heaved over spread their deadly vapors about. The defenders must wear their masks practically every minute of the day and night.. Scurrying around in the horrors of the wood, they fit into the picture exactly. They look like some Dantesque fiends of inferno in their goggling masks. All roads in this hell spot are badly cut up.

The German artillery is doing its best to concentrate on the British engineers, who are working day and night to keep the line of communications open. Bourlon's hill top is difficult of access. The enemy retains the high ground on both sides. He dominates Anneux and Graincourt Valleys. The situation in this particular section is certainly not easy.

Bourlon's "pocket" comes from a sharp curve around the wood, from a point on the Bapaume-Cambrai Road between the Nord Canal and the southwest corner of the woods, and thence west to Fontaine Notre Dame. Enemy machine guns in Folie Wood have forced back the British line north of Cantaing, further accentuating the salient.

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The British have advanced their line south-west of Lavacquerie on the Cambrai front, it is announced officially.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHEN ITALY, Dec. 6. —Heavy fighting around Asiago has developed rapidly, Enemy assaults began with intense artillery preparation, followed by liquid gas and waves of infantry. Fighting continued throughout yesterday and last night along heights back of Asiago, marked by the zone between the heights of Monte Sisemol and Monte Lalotta. This line extends nearly ten miles. Attack and counter attacks are going on, leaving the final outcome still open.

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 6.—British Admiralty report British machines raided various German military posts in Belgium yesterday, doing immense damage. All the machines returned safely.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By John H. Hearley.)

ROME, De -Italy is overjoyed that America is to declare war on Austria. A nation-wide demonstration of gratitude for America was being planned to-day. News of President Wilson's recommendation to Congress, transmitted immediately to the Italian soldiers at the front, has been rent by them to the enemy. Great signs were enacted in the trenches so that the Austrians opposing might read. Italian aviators dropped hastily printed messages by the thousands over the Austrian lines, informing them of America's decision. It has already been decided here to serenade American Ambassador Page.

W. H. Lytle Tells How Business Was Managed

In the Preliminary Hearing of J. S. Knapman on Charge of Theft

Charged with stealing $2,489.43 from W. H. Lytle, carter, by whom he was employed as office manager, J. S. Knapman declined to elect or plead in police court this morning.

Mr. G. W. Hatton, Crown Attorney, appeared for the prosecution and Mr. G. N. Gordon for the plaintiff.

Wm. H. Lytle, first witness, said he carried on business under the name of William Lytle Co. "I am the manager and sole owner. Knapman came to work for me in Oct., 1916 and remained until July, 1917. He was engaged as book-keeper and general office manager. He had full charge of the office. His duties were to take over the books and to continue the system of the former book-keeper. He was not engaged permanently, but came on to get out the accounts, which were piling up, as the result of the illness of Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine, who had been book-keeper. He was paid $12.50 for that period, but after a short time he was taken on for the winter and his wages raised to $15. At the time of the Quaker Oats fire he was allowed $20 a week."

Knapman said he was capable of carrying on the system of book-keeping and was eager to go to work. The understanding was that I would have nothing to do with the books. Mr. Knapman had charge of the cash which he was supposed to deposit in the bank."

Mr. Lytle stated that he was appointed last summer issuer of automobile licenses in Peterborough county. "We missed 1200 licenses at $11 each, which amounted to $11,000 or $12,000."

Mr. Lyt'e was bonded for $300 with the Department of Public Highways."

"Do you know why your bond was so low when you handled such large sums," Mr. Hatton asked.

Yes. We had to remit the receipts weekly and deposit each day's in a separate bank account, sending the week's receipts to the Department each Monday. By this means there would never be more than $300 here at one time.

"Do you say Knapman received all this money?"

Mr. Lytle replied that all the automobile license fees were received by Knapman or himself. "All the licenses went through Knapman's hands for he booked them.

"Did you give Knapman any instructions personally?"

"I told him the instructions of the Department were to be carried out and the money deposited in the Royal Bank, where I opened the new account. He deposited all the money. Mr. Knapman was supposed to make out a daily report for the Department, showing the number of licenses issued and the money on hand.

Have all these monies been remitted to the Department?

"They have not. Early in July the Department claimed a deficiency of some $2,400. That was when he left on July 6, 1917.

"Did you have a discussion with Knapman about this shortage?" Mr. Hatton asked.

Yes, when Mr. J. P. Bickell, chief clerk of the motor vehicles branch came down from Toronto and interviewed Knapman and me. Mr. Bickell told me that two letters had been sent to me, one of them registered, and Knapman withheld the registered letter until Mr. Bickell arrived.

Mr. Bickell complained of the non-receipt of money and reports and I told him he would have to take it up with Knapman. I asked Knapman to make out the reports and give Mr. Pickell the information he demanded. There were reports there that should have been forwarded and money that should have been forwarded.

Mr. Knapman made an evasive explanation to Mr. Bickell who went away apparently satisfied. The bank book showed $1,100 at that time and there was quite a lot of money in the safe. I thought there was enough to cover the shortage. Mr. Bickell got the reports that brought them up to date. Mr. Knapman told him there was not enough money in the bank, but he expected to forward the required sum that week.

"Run In" Over Deficiency.

After Bickell had gone Knapman and I had our first run on the license money. I asked him why there wasn't enough money in the bank and how much there was in the safe. He said "about $600." I didn't ask him why he didn't have it in the bank. I told him that if there was only $600 in the bank we couldn't meet the obligation. He said he knew it, that he had dreaded the coming of Mr. Bickell and hadn't slept for three weeks.

I said, "where does this shortage exist? Is this statement of Bickell's correct and if it's correct where's the money. Knapman said he didn't know, he couldn't understand it. He said "you knew there was some money used in the cartage business." I said, "You are the book-keeper. Is it in the books and how much is it?"

He said he couldn't tell.

I asked him to get a statement of what money had been put in the cartage business from the license money. I said I never knew of any money having been diverted to the cartage business, and if he did it his books would show it. I said I would have Mr. Fortye come to the office and investigate for me.

The reports Bickell took away called for $3,300 or $3,400 I understand."

Mr. Lytle said he saw the money in the safe. There appeared to be about $600 and Knapman told him there was that amount.

"What have you to say about the $600?" Mr. Hatton asked.

"It never materialized. The next I learned was that Knapman had only $90."

A bank book was produced showing no deposits around the 6th of July On the 12th $90 was deposited.

Mr. Dumble—What did you say to Knapman about the money.

"I asked him where the rest of the $600 was. He said he didn't know.

Did you take any of that $600 for your own use?

Mr. Lytle—No; I did not.

The cartage business Dominion bank book showed deposits up to July 12th of $143.49, the largest deposit being $123.49.

Reverting to the registered letter from the Department which Mr. Knapman produced when Mr. Bickell arrived. "I said I hadn't seen the letter up to that time, and Mr. Knapman didn't deny it."

Did you ever divert any of the license monies to your business?"

No, and I didn't instruct Knapman to do it.

Did you know that he did it?

No, I always had enough money to run my business before Knapman came and since he left. The deficit in the business occurred only when Knapman was there."

The hearing is proceeding this afternoon.

a famine in the Old Country. But all other men fit for military duty should be conscripted and go. Mr. Gordon felt that many of Class 2 men should go before the last son at home, where that home was already represented by children at the front.

The two great parties have adopted policies, both of which are win-the-war policies. One says men are more urgent than food; the other is, food is equally as important as men, and until the British Government says how many men we should send or what our food production should be, we are dependent upon individual opinion as to what should be done.

Two things must be carried out—the production of food and the obtaining of men to prosecute the war to a successful issue.

Labour represents seven-eighths of men in the firing line. These figures exclude professional and clerical men. The men who have gone are to a great extent, young men who left in the most critical and impressionable time of their lives, and when they return it is the bounden duty of every woman in the country to give every consideration to the men who represented the honour of the country.

Mr. Gordon urged all women to vote as it was their duty to do, for one candidate or the other, having in mind the great crisis overhanging us in these perilous times.

Mr. Gordon said he believed in conscription with fair and reasonable exemption of those producing food, but there must be real conscription of war profiteers' profits to the same rigid extent men were being conscripted.

The meeting closed with a few words from the chairman and the singing of God Save the King.

Hello Bill, Where You'se Going?

Aw, cut it; youse know I'm goin' same place as youse, down to Paskins' for some fish.

Come on, then, else there'll be such a crowd, we'll not get near.

Gosh! I come by there this morning, and he was opening up the cases and you oughter seen the supply.

What kinds did he have this time?

Oh, everythink! Fresh Cod, Fresh Haddock, Fresh Herrings, Halibut, Mackerel, Red Salmon, Pink Salmon, Trout, Salt Cod, Finnan Haddie, Fillets, Kippers—oh, can't tell you all and the prices are from 7c a lb.

Gee! Let's call him on the 'phone and tell him to save some for us.

Righto! What's the number?

ITALY DEAREST PLACE TO LIVE

Has Passed From One of Cheapest Countries Before War to One of the Dearest.

ROME, Dec. 6.— Italy this winter has passed from the position of one of the cheapest to one of the dearest war countries as regards cost of living. Speculation in food and clothing and heating material is generally held responsible for the very high prices, in many respects 50 per cent. higher than in France. Woollen goods that last summer were sold at $2.50 to $4.00 a yard are now being re-invoiced and sold in the same stores at $5 and $10 a yard. Women's clothes have been doubled or trebled in price, according to the whim of the storekeeper.

"If you don't buy now, you either won't get the chance at all later in the winter, or else you will have to pay more money," purchasers are informed.

Second-hand furniture of the most ordinary quality, particularly beds, mattresses, carpets, chairs and tables, sells for the price of new furniture. Single woollen mattresses that last spring sold for $10 each, this winter sell for $20. The price of a cotton bed sheet is $3.

The cost of housekeeping has doubled since last winter. Eggs that formerly sold at 3 cents each, now sell for seven to nine cents. Fresh vegetables are sold almost at meat prices. Butter is 75 cents a pound. Sugar retails at 34 cents a pound, while coffee has gone to 80 cents a pound. Ham and bacon have disappeared entirely from the market as being too dear for anybody to buy. Oatmeal sells at 30 cents a pound.

Despite the fact that all of Italy is being denuded of forest timber to turn into fire wood, and that wood has been one of the principal freight products on the railways all the past summer, coal sells at $70 a ton. Wood sells at 10 cents a pound. Electric light globes worth 15 cents sell at 70 cents.

Hotel pri7ces have reached $5 to $8 a day in the better hotels of the larger cities, prices that would have seemed fabulous in Italy before the war.

"It's war time," is the inevitable and final answer to all objections regarding high prices.

OLEOMARGARINE ON SALE TUESDAY.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6. —The Food Controller announces that oleomargarine should be on sale to consumers in all parts of Canada by Tuesday of next week. Licenses have been issued from the office of the Veterinary Director-General to 300 applicants for permission to import oleomargarine, and these will become operative on Monday next, December 10. Entry will not be permitted until Monday morning, but as consignments are already reported to be lying in bond at some points, chiefly from United States' manufacturing concerns, the expectation is that these will be on sale to household consumers by Tuesday. The date on which licenses become operative has been so arranged as to be the same for every Province.

SLACKERS, ATTENTION!

Ye slackers in the billiard room
Whose weapon is a cue,
Who give no thought nor care a jot
For those who fight for you,
Awaken from your slumber, boys,
Your country is at war,
Go, join the fight for law and right
On battlefields afar.

Ye slackers who refuse to fight
Except as captains bold,
Who would not share a private's fare,
No, not for untold gold,
That garb of glory would you don
Forget your pride I say
And play the man while yet you can,
Get in the ranks and stay.

Ye slackers who are songsters sweet,
And who will not enlist
Because, forsooth, and this is truth,
Your lessons would be missed!
Who loudly sing, you won't be slaves,
Your country calls again,
And in the fight 'gainst German might
Would you be less than men.

Ye slackers on the hockey teams,
Remember pals away
On fields of fame, they play the game
In nobler, sterner fray.
In far off France they fight the foe
'Midst mud and fiendish din,
Redeem your name, get in the game
And help your chums to win.

Ye slackers who at dances trip
The light fantastic toe,
Ye slackers gay who races play
And squander all your dough,
Your King and country need you now
This is no time to shirk,
Forsake the dance and go to France
And do some useful work.

Ye slackers who at movies gaze
And battles on the screen,
Who yell and cheer in safety here
At every thrilling scene,
Do our boys die in foreign lands
That you may sit at shows?
Don't be such cads—go help the lads
To fight your country's foes.

Ye slackers miscellaneous
Who cumber all this land,
Who've not been white enough to fight,
Just make another stand.
Our bravest and our best have gone,
Three years they've fought for you,
Must they your share of war still bear?
Come boys and help them—Do!

Heavy Fighting

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Dec. 6.—Crown Prince Rupprecht continued his everlasting pressure on Gen. Byng's salient to-day. Heavy fighting was occurring on the northern and southern sides of the British "bulge" in the German lines. The weather is exceptionally clear. The cold, however, is covering the pools in shell craters with ice.

Polson Iron Works Partly Destroyed By Fire

Vessels in the Course of Construction Were Slightly Damaged--Cause of Fire is a Mystery

TORONTO, Dec. 7.—The Polson Iron Works were partly destroyed by fire last night which started in the carpenter shop. Vessels in the course of construction were slightly damaged. The loss is between two and three thousand dollars. The cause of the fire is a mystery.

GERMAN AGENT PREDICTED THE FIRE AT OTTAWA

CONCORD, N.C., Dec. 6— Testifying in his own defence to-day at his trial for the murder of Mrs. Maude A. King, Gaston B. Means told the story of his activities as a "German agent," and declared that it was he who had discovered and reported to the government the German plan to burn the "Capitol" at Ottawa, restore Huerta to a dictatorship in Mexico, bring on war between Mexico and the United States, and at the same time start a peace propaganda.

This information Means testified, he gathered while working for a private detective agency's German clients, but under the express stipulation that he would report any information of value to the United States Government.

Means said he told Secretary Daniels that the munition plant destruction plot involved men who were willing because of their loyalty to Germany to walk into and blow up plants, giving their lives in the act, and numbers of explosions had thus occurred.

He told Secretary Daniels, he said, of the plot to burn the "Capitol" at Ottawa four weeks before it occurred, and told him just how it was to be done. It was carried out as he had forecast, Means declared.

FRANCE NOT EXHAUSTED.

Has an Army of 2,700,000 in the Field.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Speaking at a dinner given by the Association of National Advertisers, M. Stephane Lauzanne, editor of Le Matin, a guest of honour, said: "Some people are saying that France is exhausted and bled white, but France is not exhausted. In September, 1914, at the Marne, she had an army of 1,500,000 in the field; to-day her army numbers 2,700,000. That is how France is exhausted."

Death Toll In The Halifax Disaster Now Placed At Two Thousand

Twenty-five Teams Already Loaded With Bodies Have Arrived at the Morgues—Fire Engine Exploded, Killing Fire Chief and His Deputy—Forty Were Killed on One Ship Alone—No Soldiers Injured.

INVESTIGATION ORDERED

HALIFAX, Dec. 7.— The estimated dead by the police is two thousand and one thousand injured. The crews of both vessels escaped and have been detained awaiting an investigation into the cause of the accident. Twenty-five teams already loaded with bodies arrived at the morgues. Forty were killed on one ship alone. A fire engine exploded, killing the Fire Chief and his Deputy. Many children were killed in the schools. No soldiers were killed or injured. All returned soldiers had left the city. The property damage is enormous. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries has ordered a searching investigation of the collision between the two vessels.

NAVAL EXPERT FORETELLS TITANIC NAVAL STRUGGLE IF LAND ATTACKS FAIL

It Will Be a Terrific Fight and the German Fleet Will Be Sunk and Most of British—Allies Overcoming Submarine Evil—Germany Suffers.

Foretelling the likelihood of a colossal naval engagement, in which submarines, Zeppelins, and aircraft will play an important part, Mr. Arthur Pollen, the British naval expert, said that the question rested largely with the armies on the western front.

"There is no case in history that I know of where a power with a large fleet has been content to lose a war without employing it," said Mr. Pollen. "If defeat looks probable to the land forces Germany may make a desperate attempt with the fleet to relieve the situation. It will be a terrific fight, and I expect all the German fleet will be sunk and most of the British. It will be a new type of action, never seen by the world before. Up till now the defeat of the Germans at sea has been absolute."

Mr. Pollen stated that no naval action had yet been affected by the use of aircraft, but the long-range torpedo was playing an important part.

Imprison the Subs.

"Since the beginning of the campaign in 1915 we have really been content to meet it by purely defensive means. Recently we have developed the convoy system, and we have brought aeroplanes into play. They search great areas and attack submarines which are near the surface by means of depth charges. We have also developed the interesting phase of chasing submarines with other submarines. The invisibility of one submarine is used to ensure the attack on another submarine. The chances of a submarine catching sight of a submarine are small, but if this does happen the chances are greatly in favour of a victorious encounter.

What we want is a large, bold counter-campaign to make it impossible for a submarine to get out in the open ocean at all. A submarine cannot go through a mine field, and this could be accomplished if it were possible to stretch a mine belt across the English Channel and the North Sea and maintain that belt in spite of bad weather. In the last few years methods of under water detection have been improved greatly. Supplement the mine fields with numerous detection stations, and the second method of attacking the submarine will start.

Special Fleet.

A vast fleet of special craft will also be necessary to carry on the campaign to completeness. I have great hope that the preparations are well on their way and can be brought into effect before many months are over. If these hopes are well founded the second stage in the submarine campaign will begin. The defensive campaign has already brought the rate of ships lost below the danger level.

From February to June, ships were lost at such a pace that it meant if we were unable to stop it, the Allies would be unable to carry on the war after February, 1919. The United States would be unable to send to and maintain in France a land force adequate to beat Germany.

Changed Aspect.

The Allies depend on sea connections. In the last three months the whole aspect has changed.

We have shipping to maintain the strength of our forces, and this will be increased by the trained men the U.S. can raise. In six (or certainly in nine) months we ought to be able to replace shipping faster than it is now going, and by this time next year we will be building at twice the rate. But if the general offensive agains submarines can be brought into operation before February the position will be vastly better still.

Importance of Ships.

It is quite impossible to over-rate the importance of the shipping question. Notwithstanding the loss of Russia as an active ally, the military strength of the Allies to-day, and military capacity to draw on reserves is quite equal to the Central Powers, in numbers and greatly superior in morale. When the United States puther true strength into the field we will be superior in numbers, as well as in armaments and munitions.

Rests With Civilians.

The question of decisive victory is purely one of civil morale. The Allies must keep up their resolution to endure privations and face sacrifices. Civil morale is largely a question of food, clothing, and heat, and these depend upon sea supply.

Germany Suffers.

The losses submarines have inflicted necessarily affect the civil morale, but no Allied country is suffering like Germany.

The civilians there are kept in necessary obedience by threats of violence. They are simply shot if they don't obey. We can't do this under the British flag. On our side these sacrifices have to be borne voluntarily. The issue of the war depends upon whether we can bear them or not.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

At first he saw nothing. Then, as his eyes became more accustomed to the brilliant glare of the electric torch, he observed a bit of white cardboard lying on the floor. It looked like a visiting card, and he snatched it up, devoutly hoping that it had fallen from the woman's bag during the attempt he had made to rifle it.

Under the light of his pocket lamp he made a quick examination of his find. It proved a lamentable disappointment. It was in fact a visiting card, or to be more correct, the torn half of one, but what was engraved upon it afforded him not the least clue to either the identity or the address of the woman he sought. On the first line were the words, "Miss Mar" —then came the torn edge of the card. On the second line there was but the figure 1, and then the break.

Was the name so tantalizingly suggested by the letter before him "Miss Mary" something or other? Or "Miss Margaret?" Or was it "Miss Martin," or "Miss Marvin," or "Miss Marbury," or any one of a score of other names beginning with the letters "Mar?" And what was the missing address? What numbers followed the figure 1, on that part of the card that had been torn off? And what was the name of the street? He realized at once that while what he had found might, under certain circumstances, act as a suggestion, it would not serve to get him very far, unless reinforced by other and more definite evidence. He thought for a moment of securing from Mr. Baker a list of the women employees of the studio. It was true, he remembered, that his prisoner had not been seated in that particular section of the house reserved for the company's employees, but that might have readily come from the fact that the section was fully occupied when she arrived. Then, as more names beginning with "Mar" occurred to him, the futility of the idea became apparent. Apart from any possible number of Marys, and Margarets there were Martha, Maria, Marcia, Marian, Marcella —others perhaps. Of course he would be able to recognize the woman, if he saw her, but she would be too clever to return to her place in the studio the following day, if by any chance she worked there, knowing, as she must inevitably know, that she would be identfied at once.

Still, there was of course the chance that Mr. Baker might have recognized her. He presumably knew all the employees of his company by sight. Duvall got into the cab with a mortifying sense of having made a very foolish blunder, and directed the cabman to drive him back to the Grand Theatre.

Mr. Baker was waiting in the lobby when the detective arrived, and at a nod from the latter, the two men retired to the dressing room in which they had had their previous consultation. The moving picture man's face was eager, expectant, as he waited for Duvall to speak, and the latter felt his chagrin increase by the moment.

When he had at last finished his account of the affair, Mr. Baker looked exceedingly grave.

"Too bad—too bad," he muttered, "to have had her in our hands like that, and then, to lose her."

"Did you ever see the women before?" Duvall questioned.

"No. Of course she might be in our employ, but I doubt it, although I could not be expected to know by sight every girl who works in the plant. There are stenographers, film cutters and pasters, dozens of others, that I do not engage directly, and never see. Let me look at the card."

Duvall handed the torn bit of pasteboard to him.

"Not much to go on," he said, quietly.

"No. Not much."

"Of course," the detective went on, "the evening has not been entirely wasted. We know the woman by sight, and that is a great deal. As for her name, I have made a careful study of his card, and assuming it to have been of the usual length in comparison to its width, the name following the 'Miss,' if it was a first name, points to a very short one, such as Mary, and not along one, such as Margaret."

"How do you make that out?"

"Simply enough. The entire name would of course have been placed in the centre of the card, which was, it appears, torn almost exactly in half. On the left-hand side, which we have in our possession, there are, in the word 'Miss,' four letters, and in 'Mar' three, or seven in all. We should correspondingly expect to find seven letters on the right or missing half of the card. But were the first name Margaret, or Marcella, which each contain eight letters, or five to be added to the 'Mar' we already have, it would leave but two letters for the woman's last name, and names of that length, or rather shortness, are so rare as to be negligible. It is far more probable that we have but to add a 'y' to the 'Mar,' or one letter, leaving six for the last name. This would give us 'Miss Mar-y Gordon,' with the name evenly divided by the tear. Or, if by chance, the first name is such a one as Marian, containing six letters, we need add but the 'ian,' or three letters, to the left-hand side of our card, leaving us four letters for the last name. Thus, Miss Marian Kent. The full name on the card should have just fourteen letters, provided the card is, as I conclude, torn exactly in half."

"Why do you conclude that?"

"Because visiting cards of this sort are usually made in standard sizes. I happen to have a woman's card—Miss Morton's, in fact, in my pocket. Its width is the same as that of the torn card, and if the latter was of the same length, you can readily see that it was torn exactly in half." He took a card from his wallet and laid the torn bit of pasteboard upon it. Their widths were identical. The whole card was just twice the length of the torn one.

That is a most interesting deduction," Baker exclaimed. "What use can we make of it?"

"I will tell you. You have your car here, have you not?"

"Yes."

"Then I suggest that we run down to the studio at once, get your list of employees, examine the name of every woman upon it, and see if we cannot find one of fourteen letters, including the 'Miss,' of which the first name begins with 'Mar.' The chances are that we will be able to locate the name immediately."

"Yes," Mr. Baker exclaimed, rising in some excitement, "but, as you have said, the woman, if she works for us, will not dare to appear in the morning, for fear that she will be recognized at once."

And this she had quite evidently done. The door of the cab opposite him stood open. No doubt she had purposely refrained from closing it, fearing that the click of the lock might attract the driver's attention. The latter with his eyes following Duvall, as the detective entered the store, had remained serenely unconscious of his passenger's movements, her clever escape.

At least three or four minutes had elapsed. Duvall glanced up and down the street, but no sight of the vanished woman greeted his anxious gaze. She had had ample time to reach the next corner, and disappear in the darkness. Thoughts of pursuit entered his mind, but he realized at once the fruitlessness of such an attempt. His captive might have fled east or west, at either of the streets north or south of where he stood. Or she might have entered some restaurant, some motion picture house, or other convenient doorway along the Avenue. She might even have boarded a Sixth Avenue car, or hailed a passing cab. He looked up at the chauffeur, who still sat at his steering wheel, totally unaware of the flight of one of his passengers.

"The woman has gone," Duvall exclaimed, nodding toward the vacant cab.

The man turned in complete surprise. He seemed scarcely able to credit the evidence of his senses.

"I—why sir—she was here just a moment ago, sir," he gasped, gazing into the interior of the cab as though he expected its recent occupant to suddenly materialize in the flesh.

"She got out on the other side, while I was in the store," Duvall remarked, shortly, then taking an electric searchlight from his pocket, made a thorough examination of the interior of the cab. He scarcely expected to find anything, although it flashed through his mind that the woman, in her hurry to escape, might have left her bag, her gloves, or something that might afford him a clue to her identity.

"That is true, but you will no doubt have on your books her home address. If we hurry, we can get there and back by midnight ,and we may be able to place our hands on the woman before she can have time to escape."

Mr. Baker reached the door in two steps.

"Come along," he said. "We'll burn up the roads."

The two men said little, during their long ride. When they reached the entrance to the dark and silent building, only the night watchman appeared to greet them.

Inside the building, however, there were more signs of life. Some stage carpenters were busy, working overtime on a piece of scenery. In the developing and drying departments were also signs of activity. Mr. Baker led the way to his office.

"It happens," he said, "that as I am obliged to O. K. the payroll each week, I have a list of our employees in my desk." As he spoke, he took his keys, opened a drawer, and drew out a small red book.

"Here is the list, with the home addresses," he said. "How shall we go to work?"

"Read me all the women's names, in which the first name begins with 'Mar,' Duvall said. I will put them down on a sheet of paper." He drew a pad toward him, took out his pencil, and the two set to work.

When they had at last reached the end of the book, both Duvall and Mr. Baker were surprised to find that the names they had picked out were so few. In all there were but eight, as follows:

Miss Mary Sollenberger,
Miss Mary Green,
Miss Margaret Schwartz,
Miss Maria Rosenheim,
Miss Martha Simmons,
Miss Marcia Ford,
Miss Marian Greenberg,
Miss Mary King.

Duvall ran his pencil down the list of names.

"There is but one that fulfills the requirements," he announced. "The sixth name, that of Miss Marcia Ford, contains in all fourteen letters. None of the other do. Two, those of Miss King and Miss Green, come the nearest. Miss King's full name contains twelve letters, Miss Green's, thirteen. Any one of the three might be the one we seek."

"I can answer for Miss King at once," said Mr. Baker. "She is my stenographer, and most certainly not the woman who was in the theatre tonight."

"That leaves then, Miss Green and Miss Ford. What do they do, and what are their addresses?"

Mr. Baker referred to his book.

"Miss Green is a telephone operator. Her address is given here as 310 Gold Street, Brooklyn. Miss Ford is a film cutter, and lives at 122 West 9th Street, New York."

"Neither sounds particularly promising," Duvall remarked, with a frown.

"No. But of course we are assuming that the woman in questions works in the studio. If she does not, our whole fabric falls to pieces."

Duvall took the torn piece of card from his pocket and glanced at it.

"The address given here begins with the number 1," he said, significantly. It may be that Miss Marcia Ford, of 122 West Ninth Street, is the woman we are looking for, although I confess I should have suspected some rival motion picture star, rather than a film cutter."

"By George, I forgot the fact that the card had an address on it," Baker exclaimed. "I think we had better look up Miss Ford at once."

"I agree with you," Duvall said. A few moments later they were driving at top speed back toward New York.

It was five minutes to twelve when they reached the corner of Fifth Avenue and Ninth Street and turned west. Duvall realized that they were following a very slim clue, but it seemed for the moment the only promising one they had.

The house, No. 122, proved to be a typical high stooped, brown-stone boarding house of this section of the city. It was for the most part dark, although one or two of the upper windows showed lights.

NINE BOILS

Kept Coming On Neck One After the Other

Anyone who has ever suffered from boils, knows how sick and miserable they make you feel.

When you think you are about cured of one, another seems ready to take its place and prolong your wretchedness. All the poulticing and lancing you may do will not cure them and stop more coming.

Boils are simply bad blood bursting out, and the bad blood bug be made pure before the boils disappear.

Burdock Blood Bitters is the greatest blood purifier known. It cleanses the system and removes every particle of foul material from the blood, then never another boil comes and the cure is permanent.

Mr. Geo. Ayers, 302 Gloucester St., Ottawa, Ont., writes: "I wish to tell you what I know about your wonderful Burdock Blood Bitters. In the spring I suppose my system needed cleaning out, for I had nine boils come on my neck one after the other. I quickly got a bottle of B.B.B., and before it was half finished I felt a great change, and it certainly put an end to my boils, otherwise I might have had a lot more. I recommend B.B.B. to all I can, for I know it to be a great remedy."

WHILE AT WAR

Women Suffer at Home

Toronto, Ont.—"I consider Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription the very best of woman's tonics. I suffered a severe nervous breakdown. I could not sleep, was weak and tired all the time. I took the 'Prescription' and just a few bottles completely built me up and relieved me of my nervous condition. It is a good medicine and I am glad to recommend it.—Mrs. Alfred Sheppard, 250 Seaton St.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—"I can safely say that 'Favorite Prescription' did me a lot of good. I at one time developed woman's trouble; my nerves were completely shattered, and I became weak. I had severe backache and pains in my side, extending down into my limbs. I doctored, but did not get relieved of my ailment and was down and out when I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and it so completely cured me and restored me to health and strength that I was able to do all my own work and others besides. I do recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to weak and ailing women; they cannot get a better medicine."—Mrs. John Lockhart, 26 Terrace Ave.

Favorite Prescription is an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine and a positive remedy for the chronic weaknesses peculiar to women.

This old prescription of Dr. Pierce's is extracted from roots and herbs by means of pure glycerine and is a temperance remedy of 50 years' good standing. Send 10c for trial pkg. of tablets to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or Bridgeburg, Ont.

CHASE & SANBORN, MONTREAL.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

A Woman's Problem

How to Feel Well During Middle Life Told by Three Women Who Learned from Experience.

The Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Read these letters:—

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I started the Change of Life five years ago. I always had a headache and backache with bearing down pains and I would have heat flashes very bad at times with dizzy spells and nervous feelings. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new person and am in better health and no more troubled with the aches and pains I had before I took your wonderful remedy. I recommend it to my friends for I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. Margaret Grassman, 759 N. Ringgold St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Beverly, Mass.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for nervousness and dyspepsia, when I was going through the Change of Life. I found it very helpful and I have always spoken of it to other women who suffer as I did and have had them try it and they also have received good results from it."—Mrs. George A. Dunbar, 17 Roundy St., Beverly, Mass.

Erie, Pa.—"I was in poor health when the Change of Life started with me and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or I think I should not have got over it as easy as I did. Even now if I do not feel good I take the Compound and it restores me in a short time. I will praise your remedies to every woman for it may help them as it has me."—Mrs. E. Kissling, 951 East 24th St., Erie, Pa.

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Such letters are received and answered by women only and held in strict confidence.

Peculiar Antipathies.

A case is related of a monk who would faint on seeing a rose and who never quitted his cell at the monastery while that flow was blooming. Another authority tells us of how Vincent, the great painter, would swoon upon going suddenly into a room where roses were blooming.

Valtaid tells us of an army officer who was frequently thrown into violent convulsions by coming in contact with the little flower known as the pink, while the same authority tells of the case of a lady who, if present when linseed was being boiled for any purpose, would be seized with violent fits of coughing, swelling of the face, and partial loss of reason for the ensuing twenty-four hours.

Writing of these peculiar antipathies and aversions, Montague remarks that he has known men of undoubted courage who would much rather face a shower of cannon balls than look at an apple. In Zimmermann's writings there is an account of a lady who could not bear to touch either silk or satin, and would almost faint if by accident she should happen to touch the velvety skin of a peach.—Tit-Bits.

Your pity for these

The chubby babies—the hard-working wives—the feeble old folk of the British or Canadian sailor—what can he do for them when he himself is broken or maimed, drowned or blown up, at his perilous calling?

Nothing. His wage is pitifully meagre. His life hard. There are no pensions or "allowances" as in the army.

One hundred and forty five British ships sunk without a trace—"spurlos versenkt" is the infamous phrase—and thousands of other sunken ships have taken their toll of brave sailor men—

Yet never a British sailor has refused to sign on for another ship. They know of the thousands and thousands of tons of supplies that must be kept moving to the boys at the front. They know that cessation of British sea traffic would be the cutting of the jugular vein of our war.

We who sleep safely at night from the Hun because of the heroic work of the Sailor amidst hidden mines and slinking murderous submarines—will we not be generous on

A DOUBLE OBJECT.

It is perhaps a little too much to ask, or demand consistency from a Liberal newspaper, which has for the moment, at least, shed its Liberal skin, and become an out and out partizan and supporter of the Borden Government, under the disguise of Union Government, with its black record of war waste and graft.

The Brantford Expositor, an admirably conducted paper, is one of the journalistic "converts," and it shows the zeal of a convert.

It even goes out of its way to get votes for the Borden Government, and tries in the interests of the Union Government to get votes from opposing interests.

It approves of the illegal tampering with the Conscription Act in order to exempt farmers, so that "those farmers who have been attacking the Union Government" may cease their attacks, vote for the Borden Government, and give it a new lease of power.

At the same time it perpetrates the inconsistency of attacking the Laurier pledge of duty-free agricultural implements in the interests of the farmers—because that would throw Canadian workmen out of employment, no matter how greatly it would help the farmers.

The farmers are to get wholesale exemption from the operations of the Conscription Act, so that their votes may go to the Union Government, though in the process of wholesale exemption of farmers a larger number of working men will necessarily have to be drafted.

The working man's interests are to be protected by a high tariff, and this is designed to secure his vote and meek submission to the conscription that must necessarily fall more heavily upon the working men in towns and cities, if farmers are generally exempted.

One would think the Brantford zealot would be satisfied with the infamous advantage given the Union Government by an outrageously unfair Franchise Act, "conceived in sin and born in iniquity," and an adjustable voters' list, without counselling illegal and unfair interference with the Conscription Act.

The vast majority of he women of Canada have done and are still doing their full duty—helping war work, without conscription, and their reward is to deprive them of the vote.

THE CAUSES OF IT.

If the people of Canada under the stress and disturbing direction of a counterfeit Union Government are not losing their souls, they are losing their senses.

Never in our history have evil passions been so thoroughly aroused, the decencies of life, the freedom of speech, been so outraged as under the egis and inspiration of a discredited Government, making appeal to the electorate—or a part of it—under the disguise of a Union Government.

In past times we have had our occasional, hiccoughy heckler at political meetings. Now we have organised disturbances of political gatherings. For reasons to be directly attributed to the Borden Government, these disturbances are mos numerous in the Province of Quebec.

Why? For the past eight or ten years, the people of Quebec have been poisoned with the vicious doctrine of hostility to Canada helping Britain in her wars. The people's nerves hive been set on edge by the preachments of Bourassa and his kind. Instead of putting Bourassa and his lieutenants in jail, the Borden Government, now on trial before the people and claiming a monopoly of loyalty and of the spirit of Imperial service—the Borden Government did not put these seditionmongers in jail, but made them Ministers of the Crown in the government of a British Dominion.

Since Confederation, a jingo and sectarian section of Ontario has nagged Quebec, insulting the religion of the majority and assailing the loyalty of the French-Canadians to British institutions.

The Ontario persecutors prepared the fuel in the excitable French mind and it only needed the match of Nationalist treason to set things ablaze.

The Borden Government and its party had set Quebec apart, ostracised her, except the Naionalist element, which the Government and party encouraged because Nationalism was recognised as a fine means to kill Laurier, no matter what the cost in corrupting the popular French Canadian mind; and lo, the result!

The political disturbances in Quebec are directly the result of anti-British Nationalism, and that owes its establishment and power for evil to the patronage, support and reward of the Borden Government and its party.

This excuses and accounts for, though it does not justify, the election rowdyism of Quebec,

But the rest of Canada can't throw stones at Quebec. We have disturbances of political meetings in ex-Quebec Canada. They began in this very city of Peterborough when a meeting called to select a Union candidate was broken up by mob methods; we had war veterans breaking up a meeting in Vancouver; and only a night or two ago a crowd of returned-soldiers carried in Government trucks visited and broke up a political meeting near Toronto.

Of course, these things are not done by the better sort, but they are done, and the blame in this province, as well as in Quebec, rests on the Government. The Government, in disregard of military tradition, has thrust the returned soldier and the soldiers on service into the game of party politics, and if the Government sets the example of high-handed political methods, the returned soldiers—some of them—are not slow to follow.

Canada has fallen on evil days. Her deluded soldiers in the trenches think they are fighting for democracy, fair play, and the square deal. At home they find a so-called Union Government sacrificing all these—in its autocratic methods.

The Borden Government in its past encouragement of treason, the Borden Government under the name of "Union," by its methods, its impudent usurpation of supreme power and of the right to disfranchise the people, and of the power to balk the application of a compulsory service law, has turned things topsy-turvy in Canada, poisoned patriotism with politics, and aroused passions that find their expression in acts of violence, that deny the principle and spirit of democratic institutions.

Some slanderers assert that The Globe has been bought by the "big interests" and the political interests behind the Union Government. We nor anybody else do not believe that, but on the other hand, we shall find before it gets through with "Union" Government entanglements that The Globe has been "sold."

A DEFENCE OF SIR WILFRID.

A correspondent sent the following to the Globe:

To the Editor of The Globe: In this morning's Montreal Gazette there is this heading. "French-Canadian Domination in Canada if Laurier Wins, ex-Mayor Urquhart Says."

Mr. Urquhart says he has been a Liberal for nearly forty years; evidently he has a much shorter memory.

At the time of the Boer War who was Premier of Canada? Laurier.

Who was it that sent a Canadian contingent to the war against the wishes of his French supporters? Laurier.

Who was it that settled the Manitoba school question in a manner not satisfactory to his Church or to his French supporters? Laurier.

Who was it that passed the naval bill against the wishes of the French Nationalists? Laurier.

Who was driven from power by the same Nationalists, because he would not promise to repeal the naval bill? Laurier?

Who was it that became Premier of Canada because those same Nationalists deserted Laurier? Borden.

Who supported Borden because his followers from this Province joined the Nationalists and promised them the repeal of the naval bill? The Nationalists.

Who broke his promise in this respect, thereby causing the resignation of his only English-speaking Cabinet member from this Province, the late Honourable F. D. Monk? Borden.

Who selected only Nationalists as the French members of his Cabinet when he came into power? Borden.

Which of these two Premiers seems to have been "dominated by the French"? Borden.

May I ask ex-Mayor Urquhart one question? Will he put his finger on any one public act of Laurier's, during his long time as Premier, which he will take the responsibility of saying was done because he was "dominated by the French"?

A Quebec English-speaking Liberal.
Montreal, November 30.

HOW CANADIAN GOVERNMENT BONUSSED GERMAN SHIPS

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I think the publication of the following article, which was printed in the Toronto Star of Oct. 27th, and re-published in the official journal of the Marine Engineers of Canada, recently, will be of considerable interest and information to the public.—W. H. White, Simcoe street.

The first "foreign invasion" of Canada's coastwise and inland waters and trade, under orders built, owned, manned, provisioned and outfitted in Germany were, before the war, permitted free of duty and taxes to Canada's valuable port-to-port trades, or in other words these German ships were bonussed by the Government of Canada 25 per cent on their value, that is if a Canadian used the same German ship in his own coastwise trade he must first put her under a Canadian register, and the British flag, after he paid the 25 per cent. duty on the value of the ship to the Canadian Government. If the German ship was worth $150,000 the Canadian paid a duty of $37,500. But as a German ship, manned by Germans, she went scott free, taking all her earnings home to Germany, while the Canadian after paying duty on the German ship, had to pay taxes each year in Canada—while the German ship owners and crews paid their taxes in Germany. The German was also bonussed from 10 to 50 per cent on his provisions and outfits by these Orders-in-Council, while the Canadian had to pay the 10 to 50 per cent in duties on the same. This was not competition for the Canadian, but extermination. No doubt these concessions secured by Germany from our government were only part of her many plans of preparation for world conquest and power. As in the past thirty-four years, Germany built 5,000,000 tons of merchant shipping, that Canada should have built and owned in the same time. This "foreign invasion" permitted by Orders-in-Council, completely swept our flag and ships from the "seven seas" and made the moss and grass grow over our shipyards. The Maritime Provinces, thirty-four years ago, built, owned and manned over a million tons of merchant shipping—more than the total tonnage of all Canada to-day—while to-day they only control 200,604 tons.

The second "foreign invasion" was in 1916, when the Government of Canada secured permission from the British government to build merchant ships in Canadian yards for neutrals, to replace ships sunk by German submarines. After permission was secured from the British government, two Orders-in-Council was passed by our government at Ottawa bonussing these neutral ships at the rate of abont $80,000 on an 8,000 ton ship, $40,000 on a 4,000 ton ship, $28,000 on a 2,800 ton ship. But if a Canadian built the same ship in the self-same yards, with the same material and same workmen, and for his own Canadian coastwise or foreign trade, he had to pay the government of Canada in advance, the $80,000, $40,000 or $28,000 as well as taxes each year afterwards on his ships,, as well as the war tax of 7 1-2 per cent., while the neutral shipowner took his ships home and the $80,000, $40,000, or $28,000 jingbng in his pockets, and then paid his taxes in his home country. This was not competition for the Canadian when you consider that in addition these neutral ships were nearly all being constructed in Canadian shipyards sidized as "dry docks."

Happily for Canada, the British government commandeered these twenty-two neutral ships in March, 1917.

SUPPLIES FOR U. S. ARMY.

One of the Problems Tackled by Allied Conference.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—It is understood that the important feature of the Paris conference has been the question to what extent it would be advisable to supply the American army in Europe from the allied factories and furnaces in Great Britain and France. It is estimated that, with many supplies drawn from this side, America could furnish its troops on the fighting line with almost double the promptness that otherwise could be obtained.

A chance to buy Royal Oak Tires

"Tougher than Oak"

at bargain prices !

Sale will last from Saturday, December 8th, to Saturday, December 15th, both days inclusive

You are not going to have the opportunity much longer of buying Royal Oak Tires or any tires at present prices.

The continuous demand of the allied nations for rubber goods is reflected in sharply advancing prices. With raw materials going up, a scarcity of labor, and higher wages, the tire manufacturer finds the pressure too much for him.

Prices of tires in Canada are going to advance soon all along the line.

Prices of tires in the United States have already been advanced from 10% to 15%.

The prudent auto owner, however, is not going to wait until higher prices overtake him: he is going to buy now and put the difference in his pocket.

Why the Reduction?

"Well, if prices are going up, why are you lowering the price of Royal Oak Tires; is there anything the matter with them?"

That's a fair question and demands a fair answer.

There is only one reason why the prices are being lowered at all on Royal Oak Tires and that is because, we want to introduce them quickly; to make them better known without the delay which usually attends the growth in demand for a new article. Another reason is we want to get as many orders as we can NOW so that we can continue steady shipments all winter, avoiding in some measure the confusion, excitement, and waiting that result when orders are held over until the Spring.

So far as quality goes, Royal Oak Tires are A1 value in any way you take them.

The Value is There

The highest grade of rubber is what they are made of—you can't beat that—welded by hand into a tough wear-resisting fabric that endures like solid oak.

We know this because we have proved it—proved it by actual road tests and we stand ready to prove it again.

So there can be no doubt as to the standard of Royal Oak Tires: they yield all the wear and stand all the rough service that you would naturally expect from a tire that has so many natural advantages to start with.

But remember—

The low prices we are quoting on Royal Oak Tires are for A FEW DAYS ONLY!

That means just what it says, the sale will be for seven days only, commencing Saturday, December 8th, and ending Saturday, December 15th. There will positively be no sales at these prices later.

This information is not for the man who knows tire values; he won't have to be told that he's getting a bargain; but it is for the benefit of the man who has purchased his car within the last few months, and who has his tire experience before him.

A man only needs to read our prices and compare them with what he has been accustomed to pay for first-class tires to realize absolutely the truth of the assertion: that through this special offer the buyer is getting the biggest bargain that he has been offered this year in tires.

By ordering Royal Oak Tires next week, therefore, you not only get a bonus of several dollars (far in excess of what you could get by leaving the money in the bank), but you make sure of getting the best tires obtainable and just when you want them.

Delay Means Increased Prices

Make no mistake about it; rubber supplies are growing scarcer, prices are going up—they have already been increased substantially on the other side, and if you wait till Spring you not only stand a chance of being disappointed in delivery; but what is even more important, perhaps, you most assuredly will have to pay much bigger prices than these quoted for this special sale.

The sale will last from the 8th to the 15th of December, both days inclusive, after that—on the morning of the 17th—prices will go back to normal. Such are our instructions from the manufacturers, the Oak Tire and Rubber Company, Limited, Toronto, and we will not be permitted to change them.

Those who can recognize a real bargain when they see one will not lose any time in profiting by this opportunity to save money.

AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

EASED BY SECOND DOSE OF Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

One of the first danger signals announcing something wrong with the heart is the irregular beat or violent throb. Often there is only a fluttering sensation, or an "all-gone" sinking feeling, or, again you may experience a smothering sensation, gasp for breath and feel as though about to die.

In such cases the action of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills in quieting the heart, restoring its normal beat and imparting tone to the nerve centres, is, beyond question, marvellous.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N.B., writes: "I have awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better, I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At present my sister is taking them for nervousness, and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A "PARSON'E AMBULANCE."

Bishop of London Offers Men For Front Line Service.

The offer of what he termed a "Parson's Ambulance Corps" for the front was announced by the Bishop of London recently. Referring to his experience of being drilled as a stretcher-bearer, Dr. Ingram said that a number of those who had trained with him had died most gloriously and bravely in the battle. One instance had not yet been published. His own chaplain, whom he gave to the army two years ago, was concerned in it and had won the Military Cross. Twelve men had lain out for three days and three nights, and the rescuing of them was so dangerous a task that the colonel was not prepared to give the order. He, however, permitted volunteers to go, and the Bishop's own chaplain, a young lieutenant, went out with a party of fifty. They were gathered together in a sunken road, and prayer was offered up. They then went out in a heavy barrage for 4 1-2 hours, and they brought in safely the men they went to fetch, and not one of the fifty rescuers was hit.

"Well," said the Bishop, "I have a bit of a project in my own mind. I have offered the army a Parson's Ambulance Corps for front line service, though this is not because we have too many clergy. Those at home now are terribly hard worked. We have already had 59 chaplains killed and 70 wounded. So we are taking our part in the thickest of the battle. In fact, one of the party has been wounded three times, and has had a 'crump' almost on top of his helmet. At the same time I feel that there are numbers of our clergy who are longing to go and take their part in the line of battle, for stretcher bearers in the front line are in the position of combatants. I hope my offer will be accepted."

Pains Over Left Kidney

Warned This Captain That the Kidneys Were Responsible for His Pains and Aches—Freed of Pain and Suffering by a Well-known Medicine.

Hereford, Que., Nov. 20.— Captain Peabody is well known all through this section, and his cure by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills has aroused great interest in this great medicine.

The Captain had been suffering for a long time, and could never get any treatment to afford lasting relief until he began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Captain A. Peabody, Hereford, Que., writes: "For years I suffered from indigestion, rheumatism and neuralgia. Lightninglike pains would shoot all through my body, and I also had severe pains over my left kidney and through the hips. I doctored for years and tried all kinds of remedies, but the only result was money spent without relief. At last I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac of his Kidney-Liver Pills and decided to try them. One box made such a change that I sent for five more. Before I had finished them the pains in my kidneys and hips had disappeared, and I was clear of those sharp, shooting pains through the body. I still take these Pills occasionally to keep my bowels regular, and would not be without them, as I have them to thank for my cure.

"I can also speak highly of Dr Chase's Catarrh Powder and Linseed and Turpentine. The former cured me of catarrh in the head, which caused frequent headaches. I am completely cured of this now, and breathe freely as when a boy. The Linseed and Turpentine proved of great benefit for a bad cough which bothered me continually for three winters. Last winter I took one bottle of the Linseed and Turpentine, and have not been bothered with a cough since."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Don't be talked into accepting anything said to be just as good. Imitations and substitutes only disappoint.

BOVRIL

Repels Colds, Chills, and Influenza

Scene from "LILAC TIME," which plays at "The Grand" to-day and to-morrow, December 7th and 8th.

Speaking of the play, which appeared at The Russell Theatre, Ottawa, on Saturday last, the Ottawa Journal says in part:

As a war play, full of virile situations and genuine heart interest, "Lilac Time," presented at the Russell on Saturday evening, left little to be desired. It is a strong, stirring play, full of action, and realistically portraying a typical "Somewhere in France." Most of the characters wear khaki.

Altogether it would be hard to find a war play with more success and accuracy.

East and West.

A trifle of a trinket for his women folk is the only saving as an insurance for the poor against famine and starvation for a rainless day, a native writes in the Times of India. Kipling was right. East is east and west is west.—London Punch.

Its Chief Merit.

Clara—I don't see why you liked that group picture of our society. It wasn't particularly good of you, Isabelle—I know it, but it was so perfectly horrid of that conceited Miss Gushing.

Many Barred Zones.

Naturally, war efforts at protection should be kept a secret, but it is necessary to give peaceful traffic an idea of their whereabouts in order to avoid accident. The double purpose is accomplished by declaring barred zones of considerable extent. Everyone knows that somewhere in these zones the deadly explosives are hidden and traffic is limited to certain hours. Thus, for example, the approach to the capital by way of the Potomac is defended by a barred zone which includes the government proving grounds, where the big guns are tested.

Voice of The People

CIVIC ELECTIONS.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Let us not forget the approaching civic elections although we may have our minds on perhaps a more important election.

Our most earnest anxiety is to win the war together with loyalty to our brave boys at the front, and reinforcing and providing for them, are two very essential matters.

No greater recognition for their services, and nothing would be more appreciated by them, than to carry out our promises to them—that their dear ones be properly and kindly looked after; that is, the mothers and sisters of the boys at the front.

You are all aware, that to depend on subscriptions is not in any way secure, nor is it the correct way to provide. We owe those people as good a living and better than we enjoy ourselves. The separation allowances and supplementary assistance from the Canadian Patriotic Fund has amounted to $45.00 per month, and can anyone argue that with the prices of everything so high to-day that any lady can keep and feed a family on such an amount. Those of us at home can as a labourer, earn $81.90 per month, and if so desired can earn from four to seven dollars per day making munitions for the Allied Armies, whilst others of us are so situated that luxury is amply at our disposal.

Better provision can be made and those who have been living scantily on such sums as provided, should have a voice in placing at the head of our local affairs representatives responsible, in so far as those who so richly deserve such provision are concerned, and the only course to pursue to bring weight to such representation is to place the vote in the hands of those who have dear ones fighting our battles at the front.

The project would involve no further expenditure, and, as a result must appear feasible when the same lists that are now to be used for the Dominion Elections should in all fairness to those people be used at the Civic elections.

No stated amount of increase should be referred to prior to the elections, lest it would look like a bribe, and such would insult the dignity of such proposed voters, but the matter should find weight in the way the vote would be recorded and then after elections a proper and reasonable amount appropriated for such purpose thereby averting all such inconveniences as many of those have been subjected to the last two years.

Such action would be very cheering to the boys at the front for the welfare of their dear ones is their supreme object in making the great sacrifice that some will have to do.

I would bespeak the assistance of my brother citizens, who have so energetically assisted us in carrying on the present campaign.

The lady organizations will, I trust, not get disorganized, but will duplicate their energies on behalf of their anxious sisters who have dear ones engaged in the great World War.

True, the local provision has exceeded the provision made by the Government and although just recently they have been made the same, namely $25.00, separation allowance, and $25, local provision, per month.

Now, as stated before, is it anything like adequate to meet the high cost of living. Let us not have any motive other than a conscientious one, and be up and up, and I am sure we will hear from the rest of us male citizens also who have taken such a loyal stand in the present campaign, and stood by the ladies that are to exercise their franchise, and were so interested in the comprehensiveness and completeness of the enumerators' work. Surely we will not raise their just ambitions and use them to further the interests of doings at Ottawa, and shut them coldly out of what is going on at home. Fifty dollars a month is, I say, like charity extended, scarcely enough to keep soul and body together.

Let us rise to the situation. This is part of our duty. Those people are in a position that cannot be denied; we owe it to them—it is their's and they should voice local representation and have legislation locally, not charity handed out from an official not employed by the city, but paid out of the fund, itself. Business is business, and when the taxes are collected by the Collector, the Treasurer of the City will pay to those to whom the law says, without any remarks to the ladies.

Then, as is the custom, in all business and public systems of doing business, a cheque can be issued regularly, and sent to the address of the properly entitled party, without she having to go down to an official, not officially employed, and almost beg for what is her just rights.

Having provided for such vote, then assurance in representation would do away with cramped circumstances of those whose dear boys and brothers are so nobly fighting for the City of Peterborough in France, and the lonesomeness will not be accompanied with appeals to non-civic servants for the small pittance heretofore doled out after questions were asked in many cases.

No doubt the matter will be taken up by a number of our prominent male citizens, now promoting such recognition to those voters for the approaching Dominion election, and have a strong deputation wait upon the City Council to urge provision for such a loyal and just recognition, at the same time be making a step to guarantee those dependents a half decent living.

Those boys are fighting for the security of the property of citizens of the city and their families should, according to present provision by the Dominion, have a say in taxing those properties for their respectable living whilst their bread-winners are otherwise engaged or in other words, spilling their blood protecting such properties; and the good ladies now engaged in this noble work, from a Dominion standpoint, that are not dependents will surely assist and follow the great principle.

Love and loyalty must be exercised at home.

Yours truly,
OLD VOTER.

What are Peps

Peps are the new treatment for coughs, colds and lung troubles. They are little tablets made up from Pine extracts and medicinal essences. When put into the mouth these medicinal ingredients turn into healing vapors, which are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes. The Peps treatment is direct. Swallowing cough mixtures into the stomach, to cure ailments and disorders in throat and lungs, is indirect. Peps are revolutionizing the treatment of colds, as their price is within the reach of all. 50c. box all druggists, or Peps Co., Toronto.

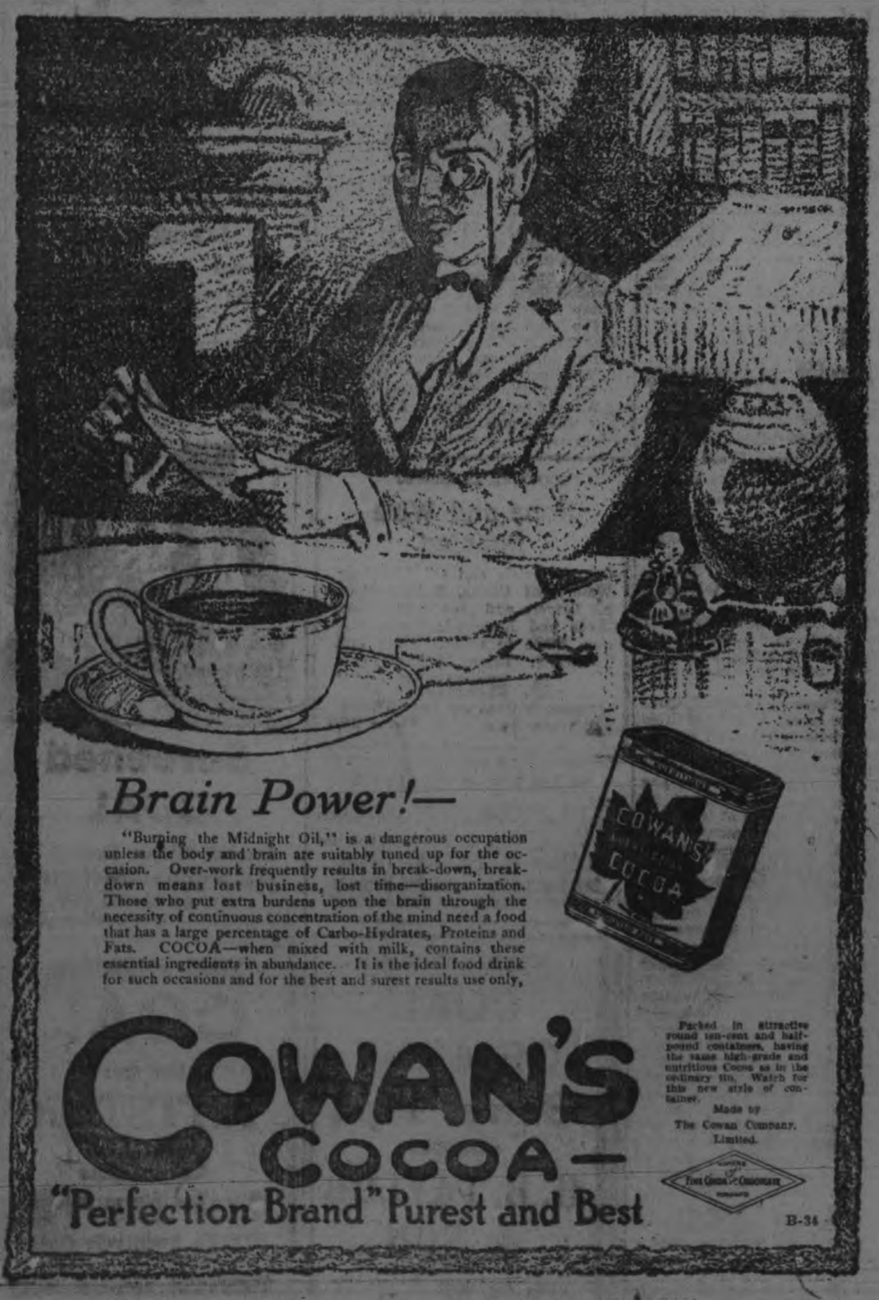
The French Visor.

A revision of primitive methods has been one of the remarkable features of this war. In our school days we learned that soldiers gave up the use of armor because they could fight better without it, and because it afforded no adequate protection after firearms became available. Now we must change our minds all over again, for trench helmets of steel are considered absolutely indispensable and even chain armor is used, according to the Popular Science Monthly. The French were perhaps the first of the warring nations to actually equip their men with bullet-proof headgear, and they are the first to attach a screen-like visor of steel to the helmet for the protection of the eyes. The visor can be raised and lowered and when in the latter position it affords the eyes protection against shell splinters.

Bret Harte and the West.

The west is still an indefinite term and many things have been called western which more strictly were far western. The efflorescence of California in the brilliant satire of Bret Harte, to name him only who was first of the Californians, was an effect of the east in the new conditions of the Pacific slope. It had no root in the soil, and none of the poets who formed the San Francisco school of Harte's day were of California birth, much less culture. They were only western by sojourn.

Harte himself, who was first of them had greater originality in his verse than in his prose, but he was born in and grew up in Albany. The literary atmosphere which he breathed in the west was, as it were, piped from the east, and his ambition was, as the generous expectation of his fellow exiles was for him, to suggest in his prose the literary art of Dr. Holmes.—William Dean Howells in Harper's Magazine.



Brain Power!—

"Burning the Midnight Oil," is a dangerous occupation unless the body and brain are suitably tuned up for the occasion. Over-work frequently results in break-down, breakdown means lost business, lost time—disorganization. Those who put extra burdens upon the brain through the necessity of continuous concentration of the mind need a food that has a large percentage of Carbo-Hydrates, Proteins and Fats. Could Have Saved Thousand Dollars

Brown Sorry He Didn't Know About Tanlac Sooner—Gains 17 Pounds

"I have actually gained seventeen pounds by taking Tanlac, and my recovery has been a surprise to myself as well as all who know of my dreadful condition," said Walter B. Brown, 123 Yorkville Street, Toronto, recently. Mr. Brown, who has been a resident of Toronto all his life, was for many years a travelling salesman, and is now employed by the Robert Simpson Company. He is a member of the Masonic Lodge, also of the Commercial Travellers' Association, and is highly respected by all who know him.

"If I could have had Tanlac five years ago," continued Mr. Brown, "I could have saved myself not only a world of suffering, but more than a thousand dollars, which I paid out for other treatment and medicines that failed to do me any good. I don't believe anyone ever had a worse case of stomach trouble than I had. In fact, I got so bad off I was given up to die by my family and friends, and had lost about all hope myself of ever getting well. Even the most delicate and dainty dishes failed to arouse my appetite, and the least bit of food of any kind caused me intense suffering. I would bloat up terribly with gas, had a mean, agonizing pain in the pit of my stomach, and was never free from headache. No matter what I ate my suffering was awful, and for over nine months at one time was on a light diet. Half the time I couldn't put on my boots or dress myself, because I didn't have the strength, and my desperate condition can be better understood when I say I had fallen off from one hundred and thirty-five pounds to only ninety-six. I was nothing but a frame of skin and bone; was so nervous I could hardly sleep, and felt so irritable and bad I didn't want anyone around me at all. Everything was done for me, it seems, that could be — X-ray photographs of my stomach were made, stomach pumps used and every treatment known, but no one seemed to understand my case, and I kept getting worse. After spending eight months in the hospital here to no avail, I was advised to go to Mt. Sinai hospital in New York, and I spent three months there, but still I didn't improve one bit. I felt that life was hardly worth living, and lost all faith in medicines.

"One day while talking to my brother-in-law he asked me why I didn't take Tanlac, and I said, No; I have taken enough stuff, nothing will do me any good. But he insisted until I bought a bottle, and Providence was surely guiding me that day, for I firm believe that was the move that saved my life. To say it is wonderful the way Tanlac has helped me doesn't half-way express it. I'm already feeling a thousand times better, and am on the road to health after five years of torture. I have already picked up from ninety-six to one hundred and thirteen pounds, and am looking and feeling better than I have in years. My appetite is fine, the gas and pain has all disappeared from my stomach, and I can eat most anything I want without the slightest inconvenience. My friends are simply amazed at my wonderful improvement. I have also told the physicians who did all they could for me what I am taking, and they say they never saw such a change in a man. I believe Tanlac has saved my life, and deserves more than I will ever be able to say for it. I will be glad to write to anyone who wishes to verify this statement, and tell them what Tanlac has done for me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

Letter Writing.

De Quincey advised "all who would read our noble language in its native beauty, racy in its phraseology, delicate yet sinewy in its composition, to steal the mail bags and break open the letters in female handwriting!"

After reading this it was not a surprise to find that credit is given for the invention of letter writing to a woman—a woman of royalty—the Persian princess, Alossa. According to one of the old writers, this invention was a marvelous "casement" to the absent lover and anxious friend.

Southey said, "A letter is like a fresh billet of wood upon the fire, which, if it be not needed for immediate warmth, is always agreeable for its exhilarating effect."

In her "Sonnets From the Portuguese" Mrs. Browning says:

My letters! All dead papers, mute and white,
And yet they seem alive and quivering
Against my tremulous hands which loose the string
And let them drop down on my knees to-night.

Hurled Into Sunshine.

"I was in Petrograd just after the revolution, during the first appraisal of the new assets," writes Isaac F. Marcosson in Everybody's. "Like prisoners long immured in the dark and suddenly hurled into the sunshine, the people blinked in the strange light of their unfamiliar emancipation. The one time bailiwick of the czars was a study in scarlet—animate like an American city during a national convention. Its great thoroughfare—the Nevski Prospekt—once the street of sacrifice, was now the highway of happiness. Never was there such glad reunion. It was like the meeting of lost tribes after much wandering in the wilderness. Exiles streamed in from Siberia under the general amnesty; Jews came forth from their long restraint, for creed lines were down; delegations of troops flocked from the front. Equality was the password that loosed every tongue."

Fighting the Fly.

An excellent remedy for the fly pest is formaldehyde. The correct strength may be secured by adding three teaspoonfuls of the concentrated formaldehyde solution to a pint of water. The solution should be kept in such a way that the flies can drink it. A good way is to take an ordinary thin walled tumbler and fill it partly full of the solution. Place on a saucer or small plate a piece of white blotting paper and cut it to the size of the dish. Then place it over the glass and turn the glass bottom up on the dish. As the solution dries out of the saucer the tumbler should be slightly raised up, so that the liquid will again flow over the entire surface.

Another simple remedy to keep flies out of the house is by means of an odor unpleasant to flies. Any odor pleasing to man is offensive to the fly and will drive them away, as, for instance, oil of lavender, diluted; geranium, mignonette or heliotrope.

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Old Sandy Helps Cause

By Osborn Jones

Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was not until Randolph Yardley had definitely made up his mind to propose to Henriette that he secretly entertained the wish that Henriette was the kind of suffragist that felt it to be woman's privilege to do the proposing as well as the voting. Henriette was a suffragist, of course, but she wasn't that particular kind of suffragist. Randolph had heard her say so. After she had managed to bring the conversation up to the delicate question of proposing Randolph might easily have done the rest. But Randolph didn't realize how easy this would have been till he was alone the evening after the discussion.

The Saturday afternoon after he had definitely decided to propose he unfortunately did not find Henriette alone. His rival in her attention was the old man-of-all-work, Saunders, known more familiarly as Sandy—though any reference that that name might once have borne to his hair and complexion had ceased to be apparent for Sandy was toothless and his sparse hair was white—surely not a very formidable rival. But any third person is a rival when a man wants to propose, and when Randolph entered her bungalow living room Henriette was kneeling on the floor before a packing case with Sandy at the opposite end.

"So sorry, Randolph," she said with a smile so preoccupied that it was worse than no smile at all; "you'll just have to excuse me while I go on with this case. They're things for the suffrage bazaar. It's to be in a week and I've had to take the chairmanship the last thing."

During all the call that afternoon Randolph never once found a turn in the road from which he might have directed his own remarks toward a proposal. The case was soon packed and Sandy shuffled away with it, but Henriette's thoughts were still engrossed with the bazaar. And imagine suddenly skipping from remarks on the fish pond at a suffrage bazaar or fancy tables and lemonade booths to proposals!

Perhaps it was not to be wondered, then, that when Henriette suddenly asked Randolph to promise to "do a certain favor" and to promise before she had told him what it was, he held up his large masculine hand and swore rather foolishly to "do anything in God's world that she wanted him to." What she wanted him to do was to get Mr. Tilden to let the suffragists borrow what was known as the "Tilden mansion," then unoccupied, for their bazaar.

"I'll do what I can, Henriette," Randolph said solemnly, "but it may be very embarrassing for me and for him. You see, he is a client of mine"—Randolph had not been practicing law so long that he did not use this phrasing with some degree of self-satisfaction—"and there is a lawsuit now going on over that house. You see, a year ago, after the Tildens had been out of the house for a year, it was leased by Mr. Hamberger, the brewer. Loads of money, you know, and could perfectly well have paid the rent even though he did decide not to live in the house. Now Tilden is suing Hamberger for the rent and Hamberger makes the claim that the house could never be heated. We tried to settle it out of court, but we couldn't. You wouldn't understand the technicalities, so I shan't bore you with them. But the case is coming up and I'm particularly anxious not to lose out."

Randolph lowered his voice and discussed the case in a way that was not entirely professional. "The fact seems to be that the heating system of the house was all wrong, and you see how it would injure me and Tilden if some 500 or 600 of the most prominent women in town were to go there on a nice cool day, as it is quite likely to be in a week's time, and find out what a barnlike place it is. So, you see, you will be working against my interests if you urge it. Still, I have promised."

"But suppose all those 500 people went there and roasted almost to death? Suppose the temperature there went up to 80 or 90 and all the windows had to be opened—would that help your case?"

Randolph's eyes showed keen interest and for one fleeting moment he forgot that his sole interest in life for the time being was to propose to Henriette. "Why, certainly, that would win the case for me. But—"

"I don't suppose you have taken a good look at the furnace, or that Mr. Tilden has, either," Henriette scolded.

"I can say that we have, little girl.." Randolph had never used those words before in addressing Henriette, or any not altogether easy. "You see, we lawyers don't go about things in just that way."

Henriette snorted an expostulation that indicated contempt for lawyers in general, and Randolph's mind went back to the main consideration.

"If you're not busy tonight, let's go investigate that Tilden mansion. If you start right away you can get the keys from Mr. Tilden and be back by seven."

Randolph had risen from his chair, almost eager to be gone, since it was the prerequisite of a solitary ramble through the old house with Henriette. Surely if he could not manage a proposal under such favorable circumstances he never would be able to do so.

He was just at the door, willing with the bright prospects for the evening vividly before him, to depart with scarcely a word of farewell.

"I'll get Sandy to go along with us," came Henriette's cheerful contralto. "He knows more about furnaces and things than any man we ever had—and you might buy some candles on your way, for the light will be all turned off, I suppose."

Randolph's roseate dreams had faded away. Even an empty house didn't offer favorable background if the ubiquitous Sandy were to be the third party still.

The trip was taken to the Tilden mansion that night in Henriette's little roadster, with Henriette at the wheel. Randolph at her side and the weazened Sandy sitting at Randolph's feet with his own rough-shod feet protruding to the running board, and in the same guise they returned. The hour spent at the mansion was one in which Sandy was master of ceremonies and Randolph found himself chiefly useful in holding lighted candles for the old man or hoisting his light but agile body to peer at pipes and drafts in the rusty, dust-covered heating system that rambled over a good share of the cellar of the old house.

The pipes that conveyed the hot air from the furnace to the upper regions of the house were rusty, but not so much so that drafts in the three main channels for the hot air could not be opened when Sandy applied the sturdy muscles of his thumb and forefinger to that task.

"Now she'll work," Sandy had remarked by way of announcing his triumph. "If yous'll order a couple o' ton of chestnut coal and a bit of kindlin' I think I can have enough heat in the old place to make your ice cream sell like hot cakes in Feb'rary."

* * * * * * *

The day came, and the ice cream did sell like hot cakes, and even after the lemonade had been so diluted that it was almost innocent of any intimacy with the citrus fruit for which it was named, it sold in such abundance that the proceeds of that table were five times what one would have expected from lemonade. Windows were opened and those who came to buy made fans of sheets of paper they could find. It was a sharp, cold day for autumn and so there was no very great irritation in the voices of complaint that were raised against the excessive heat. At any rate every one who attended the bazaar was strongly impressed with the fact that the Tilden house was endowed with a phenomenal heating apparatus, and scarce a person in town failed to hear something about the excessive heat that had prevailed in the old mansion during the two days and two nights of the suffrage bazaar.

A few days after the bazaar Henriette Beauchamp announced her engagement to Randolph Yardley, and those who knew Henriette as well as those who knew her only for the reputation she bore as an up-and-coming young suffragist explained the fact that the engagement occurred just when it did in this wise:

Henriette had set her cap for Randolph; yes, that is just what they said, and no doubt Randolph had taken a fancy to Henriette, but Randolph was not the kind of young man who would ask a girl to marry him unless he had some idea of how he was going to support her. Henriette knew this, and, if the truth must be told, Henriette had the making of the better lawyer of the two. She knew that Mr. Tilden had put a little work in the young lawyer's way and she knew about that case against the brewer, Hamberger. So she worked out the whole scheme, planned the suffrage bazaar and everything and got that man Sandy to make the fire that could prove the house could be heated. And, of course, Hamberger's lawyer saw there was no use continuing the suit, and the affair was settled at once. No one cared, for no one had any great love for the brewer. The result was that Tilden gave the young lawyer a fee amounting to half the year's rent that he had recovered, and for that mansion the rent was enormous. More than that, Tilden put all his legal work into the hands of the young lawyer. His future was assured and—well, after that, how could Mr. Yardley do otherwise than he did?

Should Be Enough.

An exchange prints the following list of words ending in "ough," and adds the pronunciation of the more obscure words, as far as ascertainable from the dictionaries: Messrs. Goff (goff), Hough (Huff) and Clough (cluff). though tough enough, thought through the day that they would visit Mr. Brough (broo), who, having hiccough (hiccup) and a cough, lived in a clough, (cluff or clou), with plenty of dough, and a tame chough (chuff), kept near to a plough in a rough trough, hung to a bough over a lough (loch). A slough (sluf) of the bank into the slough (sloo) injured his thoroughbred's hough (hock).

Loose Clothes Are the Best.

To keep the body healthy clothes should not be tight, declares the National Safety Council, quoted in the Scientific American. In cold weather we should wear lightweight clothes while in the house. Upon going out of doors put on heavy outer clothing.

Do not wear a tight hat. It cuts off the blood from the skin of the head and makes you bald. A soft hat is the best. Do not cripple your feet with tight shoes. Shoes that fit cost no more.

Class "C" Men Exempted.

Thos. Murray, General Delivery.

Few young men appearing for exemptions have made a more favourable impression upon Tribunal 276 than Joseph Ozias Laplante, Westcott street. Of his three brothers, two joined the Canadian forces, one of them, Sergt. Archie Laplante, having been killed in action, and the other is carrying on. The other brother is with the United States army. The applicant stated that he would like to go too, but his father was growing old and had begged him to remain with him. The young man added that under the circumstances he did not think he should leave his father.

Mr. Aylmer stated that the Board could not give him total exemption, that every exemption was conditional, and the tribunal transferred him to the second class. Mr. Laplante stated that he was quite content.

Mr. Daniel Holland of the Campbell Milling Company, applied for the exemption of Willis Bougher, an employee of special physical qualifications that made him almost indispensable to the company. Bougher's work requires him to be able to lift a barrel of flour 196 pounds, for which he is paid $2.75 a day. Mr. Holland pointed out that men were extremely scarce, particularly men like Bougher.

Mr. Aylmer suggested that two men might be obtainable to fill his place. Exemption was disallowed.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Ezra and Nehemiah Teach the Law: Nehemiah 8.

Golden Text: Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path. Ps. 119:105.

1. Verses 1-5. What can be said for or against the churches in the community uniting at least once a year, in a camp meeting, with no other object but to quicken spiritual life and get sinners converted?

2. Where was this great meeting of the Jews held and what was its object?

3. What answer could you make to the statement that it is the duty of the churches in the large centres to have street meetings?

4. Verses 1-5. What results will surely follow when all the people are eager to have the law of God read to them?

5. How long did the first meeting last?

6. There is a general demand for short sermons; what is this a sign of? Is it poor or uninteresting preaching, or a growing lack of spirituality on the part of the preachers, or people, or what?

7. Verses 6, 7. Which is the more becoming and natural in public worship and why, the hushed silence which generally prevails with us, or the hearty and glad responses as in this case?

8. If our public prayers were more of the "and Ezra blessed the Lord" type, our of jubilant hearts; how long would it take to get the people to respond as these worshippers did?

9. Ezra had at least fourteen helpers, besides the Levites, to assist him in explaining the law, each no doubt having a class to himself; what resemblance is this to modern Bible classes?

10. Verses 6, 7. Why is it that there is not the same realized obligation resting upon church members to attend classes where the Bible is studied as to attend the regular church service?

11. Is our present method of oratorical and textual preaching a success as a teaching agency? Give your reasons.

12. Verse 8. What agency other than the Bible school is there in the Christian church of which it can be said, "So they read the book.....and caused them to understand the reading"?

13. Verses 9-11. What made the people weep so much?

14. Why have sinners a reason to weep when the word of God is brought home to them?

15. When we by the grace of God have put ourselves in harmony with God's law is it right for us to weep over our past sins? Why?

16. Why is a duty as well as a privilege for us to rejoice and be glad?

17. Verses 9-11. Is it still right for us and why, to hold feasts and banquets and get joy out of eating and drinking? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by the members of the Club.)

18. Verse 12. What provision is being made to-day for feeding and clothing the poor?

19. Verses 13-18. Is preaching, or singing or praying, or study of the Bible in tents occasionally likely to be more effectual than under usual circumstances?

20. Should it, or not, and why, be the aim to have every religious meeting produce "very great gladness"?

Lesson for Sunday, Dec. 16, 1917. —Nehemiah enforces the Law of the Sabbath. Nehemiah 13 15-22.

MOTTO OF BRITISH TANKS.

"The Corps Expects Every Tank to Do Its Damnedest."

England has gone wild over the tank motto at the battle of Cambrai: "The tank corps this day expects every tank to do its damnedest." A literary expert discovers that the motto first was used by Carlyle. Talking one day to the philosopher, a Scottish clergyman' defined the true aim of man's existence to be "to glorify God and enjoy Him forever. Does not that give a true ideal of the highest life?"

To this Carlyle replied: "No. I should say that the chief end of man is to do his 'damnedest.'"

HALIFAX DISASTER GROWS IN HORROR

DEAD ALONE WILL EXCEED 2500

DEATH TOLL AT HALIFAX IS GROWING STEADILY WORSE

Conservative Estimates Made by City Officials at 9 O'clock This Morning Places the Dead Around the 2,500 Mark---Special Relief Train Arrives From St. John's---Work of Rescuing Bodies is Progressing Slowly--Scenes in the Wrecked City Are Indescribable.

PROPERTY DAMAGE WILL BE ENORMOUS

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

HALIFAX, N.S., December 7.—(By telephone to St. John, N.S.)—The appalling death toll here was steadily increasing early to-day with the work of rescuing bodies progressing slowly.

Conservative estimates made by the city officials at nine o'clock this morning placed the dead close to 2,500.

A special train bringing carloads of food, clothing and other much needed supplies arrived here this morning from St. John. Mayor Hayes and the majority of the surgeons of St. John have arrived also. The scene as the gray dawn broke over the city was indescribable.

AMONG THE SMOKING RUINS.

Here and there about the smoking ruins of what hade been their homes, men and women scantily clad and with bloodshot eyes, clawed at the wreckage frantically with bleeding hands in an effort to find lost relatives. Every hour brings additional rescue workers, nurses and doctors with ambulances and surgical supplies.

There are no words to describe the pitiful scenes in the improvised morgues where long lines of sobbing men and women began early to-day to file past the rows of blanket-covered figures laid close together. Women shrieked as they drew aside a blanket and recognized a loved one. Men sobbed over the bodies of children, while others, white faced and haggard, stunned by the catastrophe, fingered trinkets or bits of clothing on mangled and burned bodies, hoping to establish their identity. The most pitiful of all was the row of little figures that represented the tots who were yesterday struck dead in their schools, on the streets, even while playing on their own door steps. There was one tiny, golden-haired girl of about four years, she showed no surface wounds, and she lay among the others, a dilapidated rag doll by her side. It was found in her hand and kept for help in identification. Early this morning this little body was claimed by a sobbing girl mother. She came wrapped in an old overcoat, and lay and sobbed by the child's body until assisted from the house of death. And that was only one of hundreds of such scenes. In the common are other still forms covered with blankets. Many are burned beyond recognition, and others mangled. Some probably never will be identified.

SMOKE PALL OVER THE CITY.

This morning a slowly rising pall of smoke hung over the devastated suburb of Richmond, and while soldiers and sailors patrol the wrecked streets, the horrible work of digging out the mangled and burned victims is going on. Hundreds of wounded are in hospitals in and near the city. Many are hovering near death. Others covered with white bandages, limping or being carried in automobiles, are going to nearby towns and villages. Of the thousands of homeless many still are too dazed to know what to do. The suddenness of the death that overwhelmed the city has left them dumb in their grief and suffering. The scenes in the wrecked and burned sections of the city when the dead are removed are gruesome. Every available vehicle has been pressed into service, and literally waggon loads of bodies are carried away. Surgeons and nurses are working bravely to alleviate the sufferings of thousands of wounded. The weather continues cold, and the rescuers work with numbed hands, they worked that wayy all night.

FIVE THOUSAND DEAD SAYS THIS REPORT.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, December 7.—Five thousand dead in the Halifax disaster was the unconfirmed estimate a naval commander forwarded to the Navy Department here over night. He had seen and heard the terrible explosion while fifty-two miles at sea, and reaching the harbour learned of the holocaust. He declared the munitions ship crew reached shore safely by abandoning their craft when the fire started.

The Navy Department announce the following had been received from a commander: "While fifty-two miles at sea, the explosion of a munitions ship was seen and heard. On arriving, assistance was offered the authorities and the following learned concerning the circumstances leading up to the explosion: "A Belgian relief ship collided with a French munitions vessel loaded with 3,000 tons of T.N.T. and a large quantity of benzine.

"Due to a collision, the benzine caught fire and as soon as the fire started the crew abandoned the ship, reaching shore before the explosion took place.

"Practically all of North Halifax was destroyed and all windows and doors in Halifax and Dartmouth were demolished.

"To-night, it is believed, that there are 5,000 dead, but these figures cannot be confirmed."

WAR TOUCHES HALIFAX.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

HALIFAX, N.S., December 7.—The war has touched Halifax. Sorrow and anguish are left in its trail. Where only a few hours ago the most prosperous city in Canada stood secure in her own defences, unfraid and almost apathetic, there are now heaps of ruins. No one can yet estimate the loss of life and property, and words fail to describe the mental anguish of those who have lost home and dear ones by one cruel stroke. The busy thriving north end from the sugar refinery to Creighton's Corner is just a mass of broken splintered timbers, of powdered brick and stone and human bodies crushed to pulp or charred and blackened by fire. Although the collision of the ships is believed to be purely accidental, it was nevertheless due to, and caused by condition the war created. The crush came as suddenly and unexpectedly as Zeppelin bombs have fallen upon undefended English towns, and the effect has been the same.

RELIEF FROM BOSTON.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BOSTON, Mass., December 7.—A special train with doctors and nurses, with supplies, to-day was speeding on its way to the stricken City of Halifax. Among the party are Red Cross workers, a number of military medical men and civilians.

The special carrying the party of thirty-one was despatched late last night after Governor McCall send the offer of any possible aid to the devastated city.

In view of the fact that the Navy League has this year intrusted the work of making the annual collection for the wives and children of the sailors of our Empire to the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire throughout Canada, the Regents of the local chapters desire to make a strong appeal to the public for a generous contribution to this cause. The 8th of December has been set apart as "Sailor's Day," and it is hoped that many will remember the dependents of the brave men who are so wonderfully serving the Empire.

Contributions may be left at either the Review or Examiner offices.

COURT OF APPEAL WILL OPEN TO-NIGHT IN COUNCIL CHAMBER

Two Thousand Cases Have Been Entered by Both Sides—Many Names Left Off

THE ENUMERATION

A Court of Appeal will open to-night in the City Council for the purpose of hearing appeals in connection with the newly revised voters' lists. His Honour Judge Huycke will preside. Representatives of the two parties in the field have entered about two thousand appeals and the work of dealing with this large list of cases will occupy the attention of the court for several days.

The large number of appeals serves to indicate the manner in which the enumeration was made. Dead men's names have been placed on the lists, also people who have been in the city for but a few days on a visit. Men who have been away from Peterborough for a year are included in the list of qualified voters, while hundreds of others who are duly qualified to vote have been left off.

REVIEW GIVES GADSBY ANOTHER GO

If H. F. Gadsby has one good press agent it is the Review newspaper. The first part of last month it published a "Gadsby letter," scoring the Borden government to the bone, and its excuse for getting some truthful political matter into its columns was that it published the Gadsby article as a "terrible example."

Last night it printed another "terrible example," in which the Borden government's sins are as fully brought into view, as is possible in the limits of a column article—found elsewhere in this issue.

The Review is as broad in its journalism as in its mis-statements. In November it said that "in the election of 1911 Mr. Gadsby was imported to this city and placed in charge of the editorial department of the Examiner." Mr. Gadsby never wrote a line for the editorial columns of the Examiner. He was brought here for the special reporting of election events. And he did his work so well, and the Review thinks so much of his special style of writing that it repeats his caustic comments on the Borden government to, no doubt, the delight of its Conservative readers. It seems that a little Grit has got into the cogs of the Review journalistic machine.

VOTERS' LIST COURT

The first sittings of the Court for the revision of the Voters' Lists will be held at the City Council Chamber to-night at 7.30.

All enumerators are expected to attend.

How Mr. Burnham Regards The Woes Of The Soldiers' Mother

The Cold Comfort He Deals Out to a Dependent Crippled Widow, With Her Two Soldier Sons Overseas

A Widow in this City wrote to Mr. J. H. Burnham while he was a member of the House of Commons advising him that her only two sons were overseas; that she had lost her leg through malpractice and blundering on the part of others; and that she had been advised that she should sue for damages.

The City Council had come to her assistance and regularly paid her $4.00 per month and supplied her with free fuel for one stove until her last son and supporter enlisted to fight for $1.10 per day.

Then a change was made. Her allowance of $4.00 a month and free fuel for one stove was cut off by the City Council and she was left to shift for herself on the miserable pittance allowed to a soldier's family.

She wrote to Mr. Burnham and complained of her heartless treatment.

Mr. Burnham knew she was so crippled that she was unable even to leave her house to order food or fuel.

He knew all her sons were overseas fighting for their country at $1.10 a day and could not help their old mother inhertroubles.

She asked Mr. Burnham to assist her in her distress but he only laughed at her troubles and made fun of her lost leg.

"You do not believe it!" Well. This is an exact reproduction of the cruel and heartless letter that he wrote in answer to her appeal:

Write to the Minister & tell him you have cut the lost leg.

J. H. Burnham

"WRITE TO THE MINISTER OF MILITIA AND TELL HIM YOUR TROUBLES. CUT OUT THE LOST LEG."
"J. H. BURNHAM."

Mark you; this worthy widow, this mother of two brave lads, is not even honoured by Mr. Burnham with "Dear Madam" and "Yours Truly."

She is told by Mr. Burnham to tell her troubles to a Minister she did not know.

She is advised by Mr. Burnham to "cut out the lost leg," i.e., say nothing to the Minister about her misfortune in the loss of her amputated limb through the fault of others.

How many other widows, mothers, sisters and daughters have received such treatment at the hands of Mr. Burnham?

How many electors are prepared to vote for Mr. Burnham and place the future welfare of the soldier and his family in his hands? Such a reply to such an appeal, under such circumstances, equally disclose the qualities of his head and his heart.

57th Chap. I.O.D.E. Bazaar Great Success

Socially and financially the bazaar and tea held yesterday in the Masonic Hall under the auspices of the 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E. was a great success. From early in the afternoon the rooms, which were artistically decorated, were the centre of attraction socially in the city. Mrs. Gliddon and Mrs. Grier were the hostesses at the tea, Mrs. Park poured tea and was assisted by the Misses F. Gladman, Flora Collins, R. Langford, E. Worth and Mrs. Jamieson, while Mrs. K. G. Lesh acted as treasurer.

The Bazaar.

At the bazaar the Christmas tree, which was a great attraction both to the young and old, was under the direction of Miss Florence Gladman, Miss Munro, Miss Higgins and Mrs. Gilleepie. The fancy work table was run by Mrs. Clegg, Mrs. Eastwood and Miss Meyers, the haiscellaneous table by Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Austin, Mrs. Sharpe, Mrs. W. H. Hill, Mrs. Mac O'Brien and Mrs. W. Sharpe; the home-made pickles and jam, Mrs. Manson Comstock, Mrs. E. M. Mason and Miss Robinson; the home-made cooking table by Mrs. Fiske, Mrs. Schneider, Mrs. Mikels, and the apron table by Miss M. Rogers, Miss Gladman and Mrs. Young.

The Music.

Excellent music was provided, adding to the general success of the afternoon, by the Conservatory Orchestra, under the direction of Miss Gladman, assisted by Miss Logan, Miss Gretchen Gladman, Paul and Otto Gliddon.

Some of the many who attended were: Mrs. A. H. Stratton, Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mrs. Matthews, Mrs. Suckling, Miss Morrow, Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. Paul, Miss A. Paul, Dr. Grier, Dr. Eastwood, Lt.-Col. Mills, Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Carruthers, Mrs. Gamey, Mrs. Aylmer, Mrs. Dunsford, Mrs. Whittaker, Miss Mabel Collins, Mrs. Harry Morgan, Mrs. Clarkson, Miss Ruth Robertson, Mrs. Birks, Mrs. Fordyce Strickland, Miss May Stratton, Miss L. Rush, Miss F. L. Davidson, Miss Belleghem, Mrs. Archer, Mrs. R. J. Soden, Mrs. Killaby, Mrs. Gladman, Mrs. Lundy, Mrs. Harstone, Miss Seabourne Hamilton, Mrs. Pennefather, Miss Eileen Fair, Mrs. Gordon Langley and Miss Walters, Montreal.

Peterboro' Receives Appeal For Help From Halifax

Council Will Hold An Emergency Meeting To-night to Deal With Situation

His Worship Mayor Duffus has received a telegram from Halifax, in which assistance is asked for in the form of glass, tar paper, beaverboard, putty, bedding and blankets. The glass in practically two sides of every building in Halifax and within five miles of the city and Dartmouth has been demolished.

The Mayors of every town in the Province have been communicated with to rush these things to Halifax.

In response to this urgent message, Mayor Duffus has called a special meeting of the City Council this evening at nine o'clock for the purpose of dealing wih the appeal from the stricken city.

JOINT MEETING AT LAKEFIELD LAST NIGHT WAS GREAT SUCCESS

PTE. J. E. WARNER, a Hastings member of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, who has been killed in action.

Electors From Both East and West Peterboro' Hear the Issues of the Day Discussed by Messrs. W. H. Johnston, R. R. Hall and Dr. Munro.

PROFITEERS SCORED

A joint Liberal meeting was held in the Town Hall, Lakefield, last night, presided over by Dr. Smith as chairman.

The large Town Hall was well filled and Liberals from both East and West Peterborough were there in large numbers to hear Mr. W. H. Johnston and Mr R. R. Hall, the two Liberal candidates.

Mr. Johnston's Address.

Mr. Johnston, in his opening remarks, referred to the fact that he had received the unanimous nomination to contest the Riding in the Liberal interest and to champion the rights of the common people who have to pay the taxes against the "big interests," such as the William Davies Co., headed by Sir Joseph Flavelle, who have made a profit out of food stuffs since the war began of upwards of five million dollars, which would be sufficient to purchase the whole townships of Otonabee, Smith, and Douro, and still leave a surplus large enough to purchase the whole of Lakefield as well. This is only one of the big interests, but it shows what a short time it will take to gobble up the whole country.

Mr. Johnston said that he was a farmer, and knew how food production could be increased. He said that you cannot produce food by simply advising the farmers to produce more.

Unless the farmer is furnished with the necessary labour instead of it being taken away from him, the people must expect the quantity of food to become less and less and the price to become greater and greater.

If the people living in our cities and towns want to play into the hands of the grafter and the big interests who are discouraging food production and who are lining their pockets with millions of dollars, then all they have got to do is to vote for the men that have increased the high cost of living.

Injustice of the Act.

In regard to the administration of the Military Service Act, no more rank injustice was ever committed against a free people.

Fancy every farmer and his family in the Province of Quebec being exempted from military service and the farmers from this county being conscripted in large numbers.

Fancy Sir Robert Borden taking 5,000 men from the Province of Quebec and the remaining 95,000 from English-speaking Canada; that is to say, for every one man that is taken from the Province of Quebec, nineteen men are taken from the English-speaking Provinces.

Are you going to vote for a Government that will exempt French-Canadians from military service and then give them the opportunity to come up to the Province of Ontario and receive the big wages that our own British boys are forced to give up?

This is what is actually taking place at the present time, and this is the rank injustice that Mr. Sex-

SURGEONS ARE OVERWHELMED BY NUMBER OF VICTIMS

Not Enough Doctors and Nurses to Handle the Unnumbered Throngs of Wounded—Worse Than Field Dressing Stations

SOLDIERS ARE KILLED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Dec. 7. — Reports from Halifax to-day declared that surgical workers were overwhelmed. There are not enough doctors and nurses to handle unnumbered throngs of maimed. More help is en route and is eagerly awaited.

Some of the surgeons on the ground were themselves injured by the explosion, but have been working without rest for more than 24 hours.

Scenes in first aid dressing stations in the war were outdone by the spectacle in Halifax, when men, women and children, suffering from terrible injuries, some scorched black but still alive, were carried to surgeons.

Heavy damage was done to Canadian military barracks, and a number of soldiers were killed. The military hospitals were first to be pressed into service.

The congestion of wounded in Halifax will be relieved by taking some of the injured to other towns. Some may be removed by boat.

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION CAUSES FIRE

Spontaneous combustion in a mattress rolled up in a clothes closet caused a fire yesterday afternoon, at 4.30, at the residence of Mr. O'Rorke, 223 Euclid Avenue.

Chief Grange arrived to find the closet ablaze, but arrested the progress of the fire, which had already ignited the wall before serious damage was done. The extent of the damage will amount to about $7.

Frank Jenne Says:

You are wondering about that Christmas gift, wishing you knew what to give. Have you thought of neckwear, braces, armlets, fine sox, silk mufflers, wool mufflers, lounge robes, pajamas, house coats, night shirts, fine shirts, fine umbrellas, canes, coat sweaters, underwear, handkerchiefs?

"Come to me."

Editorial matter will be found on page 4, first section, of this issue.

A CHRISTMAS TREAT FOR SOLDIERS' KIDDIES

The Great War Veterans wish to acknowledge the receipt of a cheque for $10.00 from Mayor Duffus for the fund to provide a Christmas treat for the kiddies of Peterborough's soldiers. The Entertainment Committee of the Veterans are making their plans for this big event and upon the generosity of the citizens depends the success of the occasion. Donations will be received by the newspapers and will be turned over to the Veterans. The call is a worthy one and the time is short. Who will be the next to subscribe? Here is the list:

Voice of The People

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—As a ratepayer, I have read with interest the letters referring to the 93rd Band instruments. First, I am in accord with the lady or gentleman who signed themselves "Ratepayer." I think it is a great injustice to he G. W. V.'s, amounting almost to an insult. I have heard numerous remarks from individuals deploring the attitude of our Council in lending the instruments to the 57th Regiment. Who are most entitled to them? Not the 57th Regiment. It is true some of their band are overseas, but are they not Veterans? They will all join this society if they are spared to come back, which we hope they will. I think the Salvation Army are more entitled to them than the 57th Regiment. They did not turn the citizens down flat because the Council did not give them a big enough grant, and they also have done far more for recruiting, besides sending three parts of their band overseas. We must consider that this society will be the largest organisation of any kind in this city. What will the men think when they return to be met by the 57th Regiment, with the same instruments they themselves played, both here and overseas? They will say the officers of the G.W.V.A. must have been a lot of dough-heads. Surely these men have not to go to the 57th Regiment to ask for the loan of their instruments; and as for music, it has been proved without question that the 93rd Band was one of the best ever sent overseas, and these men, if God spares them, will be War Veterans. Why, at the present time, if I understand right, the G.W.V.'s have more qualified musicians than the 57th Regiment.

I will conclude by asking the Council to reconsider this question and give those instruments to the men who have proved worthy of them. By this action the people will know that the men who were prepared to sacrifice all, will not be too mean to spare an hour or two on Friday nights to entertain the people.—Yours,

Another Ratepayer.

Peterborough, 6th Dec., 1917.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Kindly allow me space in your paper to answer "A Woman in East City."

The trend of her whole letter seems to portray what I am glad to say does not exist generally amongst the women of Peterborough—gross ignorance. In addition, she does not seem to realise the great human principle of unselfishness and a desire to help others. If she did, she would surely appreciate the sacrifice our boys have made and are making at the Front, and would not publicly denounce our women for endeavouring to see that our boys get justice, and to see that the fair name of Canada remains as untainted and great as our boys have made it. Many of these women, let me say, have felt only too keenly the horrors of warfare, and would they not be base slackers did they not do all in their power to see that the fight so nobly fought by their dear ones was honourably continued? This is why these women "are going from house to house with their book and pencil"—because they have hearts that go out to Flanders and France, and which are not held in the confines of a selfish, narrow, everyday existence.—Yours truly,

A Peterborough Girl.

Peterborough, 6th Dec., 1917.

Roumanians Agree To The Armistice

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

JASSEY, Dec. 7. — Roumanian troops will associate themselves with Russians in proposed armistices, says an official announcement made here to-day. Hostilities were suspended on the whole front.

FOE LOSES HEAVILY IN NEW ATTACK

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Dec. 7. —At least 2,000 Germans perished in two violent and fruitless attempts to break the British lines around Vial Wood to-day. Twenty-five separate German divisions have been identified as composing the enemy offensive forces in this sector, indicating the Germans have at least 375,000 men massed there. It was the British who were entrenched on the Hindenburg line to-day—the same line that the Germans held so firmly until Byng's smash.

They defended the erstwhile enemy line against several powerful attempts to re-take it. The enemy was stubbornly determined. Along one arm a mass of troops were thrown forward and driven off. Almost immediately a second attacking wave formed.

This second wave, of densely packed masses of men was caught in British artilery storm and wiped out.

Excellent shortcakes may be made with biscuit crust and raspberry jam. Gooseberry jam also is a good filling.

FINAL DECISION BY TRIBUNAL 276 NOW ADJOURNED

Tribunal No. 276, composed of Mr. J. A. Aylmer and Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., adjourned last night until 13th December, when three remaining cases of the present class will be heard. That duty performed, the Tribunal will have completed an arduous and unwelcome task. It will not, however, be disbanded, but will remain intact for future classes.

A prominent military officer recently estimated that both the first and second classes would be insufficient to supply the men required. In that event the Exemption Tribunals may expect to be called upon again before many months pass.

Tribunal No. 276 reported the following decisions in reserved cases

Temporary Exemption.

Willis Bougher, 273 Dalhousie St., until 1st February, 1918.

Transferred to Class II.

Edward Joseph Horatio Vanston, of the Bank of Toronto.

Stanley Roy Nicholls, of the Bank of Toronto.

Robert A. Irwin, of the Union Bank.

Joseph Laplante, 287 Wescott St.

Joseph Meagher, 92 Aylmer Street.

Alphonsus Joseph Kelly, Royal Bank.

Exemptions Disallowed.

Thos. M. Rice, Hunter Street.

Wm. Proux, 213 Charlotte Street, by default.

Attilio Cicchitto, 561 Chamberlain Street, by default.

John J. Murphy, 64 Aberdeen St., by default.

Allan E. Harding, 616 Water St.

Rene Laverdiere, by default.

Ernest Robert Taylor, 580 Bolivar Street.

Class E Men Exempted.

Delmar Douglas, 772 Water Street.

Edward Whaley, 506 Cedar Street.

Edmond Guerin, 86 Park Street.

DISTRIBUTING THE RELIEF IS A HUGE TASK

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

HALIFAX, St. John, Dec. 7.—Out of the chaos of death and destruction heroic workers are gradually working out a system of caring for the dead and injured and the homeless.

While supplies from all the Maritime Provinces and the United States are arriving, and more is on the way, the authorities, with their volunteer workers and soldiers, face the huge task of making an even distribution of food and clothing to the thousands that are in desperate straights. Suffering was increased to-day when the temperature dropped and a snow storm set in. As the snow fell the rescue workers continued their efforts to reach the dead in the wreckage.

Conditions in Dartmouth, which is across the harbour from Halifax proper, are terrible. Lost children—some mere babies—are being gathered from the streets. Most of these tots are suffering from exposure. Many never will see their fathers and mothers again. The indelible stamp of the first overwhelming terror is still on their white faces.

Letter from Mr. Snobbin To Sir Joseph Flathell

Peterboro, Ont., Dec. 7th, 1917.

Dear Sir Joseph,—I received your letter of yesterday's date, and note your remarks. I quite agree with you that it was most disappointing on the part of the government that they did not allow you the control of the fish output. I quite agree with you that the public should not be allowed to get this too cheap or they will start saving money and avoid buying your bacon.

We did our best to prevent them buying too much fish, and to boost the sale of bacon, although the foolish Food Controller advised people to use fish and not bacon.

You see I (or rather we) gave only three dealers permission to sell government fish, and they agreed not to deliver it; so if anybody wanted it they had to fetch it, no matter how far away they lived. Of course if they had to walk a few miles to get it, that was good for their health and gave them a fine appetite; and if they didn't have time to fetch it they could do without eating and save money, or order bacon and spend more.

I know this sounds rather contradictory, but then it's good policy to be vague in what we say, as it gives us a chance to back down when necessary.

Now, as you will see, our intentions were good, but that fellow PASKINS, on the CORNER OF HUNTER AND AYLMER, has spoiled the whole thing. Instead of our men being able to keep the price up and control the output they can hardly sell any, as he is shipping in quantities and cutting our prices, with the result that everybody is going to him and laughing at us. Just to give you an idea, I will quote some of his prices:

Fresh Herrings from 7c a lb.; Fresh Haddock 12c a lb; Steak Cod 13 1-2c a lb.; Pink Salmon 16c lb.; Choice Red Salmon 25c a lb.; Halibut 25c a lb.; kippers 9c a pair; Boneless Salt Cod 15c a lb., and Mackerel Trout Haddie Fillets, Smelts, etc., at the same low prices.

And, worse than that, he is selling bacon, retail, cheaper than you are selling it wholesale. People are coming and phoning from far and near to get the mild-cured family Smoked Rolls, and Sweet Green Pickled Rolls, without bone or skin, which he is selling at 35c and 31c per lb., and Creamery butter at 47c a lb.

He will not leave anybody a chance to make a bit. Even the Candy Men are suffering. He is selling Home-Made Candies at ridiculous prices: Pure Cream Fudge, Cocoanut Toffee, Peanut Taffee, all usually sold at 40c per lb., he is selling at 28c per lb.

Biscuits, the same; Ginger Snaps, 15c per lb.; Jam Jams and Apple Blossom, 20c, or 2 lbs. for 38c.

He is helping people to waste money on Chirstmas fruits that ought to go in your pocket or help increase my salary. Actually offering Mixed Peels at 33c a lb., new Seedless Raisins at 16c or 2 lbs. for 31c; New Seeded Raisins at 2 lbs. for 25c.

This is just a few samples of what he is doing. Really I am in despair, and I can see the lines of worry and decay deepening on my face every day. I am so reduced that I find it quite hard sometimes to yell at the women nuisances who pester me. Can't you arrange some way to get rid of him? If you can't have him electrocuted or hung, send him some of those eggs you have had stored up for years and poison him, or get one of your German friends to put a bomb under his front door. But for goodness sake, get rid of Paskins, and save the life and reason of your

Very humble and Obedient Servant,

SNOBBIN.

ONLY THREE CADETS HURT

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 7.—The Naval Service Department announces officially this morning that of all the naval cadets at the Naval College at Halifax, all but three have escaped unscathed from the disaster. The three injured are Cadets Orde, Penedow and McKenzie and their wounds are not serious, being more in the nature of scratches or contussions from falling glass. The College was not destroyed, but was somewhat damaged, though it is located by the water edge on the Admiralty dock yards. Apparently the Niobe, which is docked before the College, has escaped destruction. Captain George Lindsay has left for Halifax to conduct an investigation on behalf of the Marine Dept. into the cause of the disaster. He will be assisted by W. A. Kendry, K.C., and by officers of the Naval Department at Halifax. It is learned here that three government railway officials, Messrs. Dunbury, Cameron and Cann have lost their families in the disaster. No official news is permitted to escape from government authorities as to ships which were in the harbour. The Olympic was not there, however.

SAID TO BE A DEFAULTER.

Fred Morton Remanded Until Saturday Under Military Service Act.

Fred Morton, a young George street man, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning on a charge of not reporting for service as required by the Military Service Act. His status wasn't clear, indicated for Magistrate Dumble stated that Morton's name had been on the list of exemption claims before Tribunal 275. In that event Morton must have formally reported by claiming exemption, at least that appears to be the only interpretation of the Magistrate's information to Chief Thompson.

REVIEW ARTICLE CALLS GOVERNMENT TIN HORN SPORTS

Says the Borden Administration Stacked the Cards to the Last Minute—Scorching Indictment of Premier and Cabinet Appears in Local Paper That Has Up to the Present Been Supporting Borden.

No more striking indictment of the Borden government has appeared in any paper in Canada than the article reproduced below, which was published on page 7 of The Peterborough Review last evening. The Review has been staunchly supporting the Borden Administration up to the present, and last evening's attack must have been a surprise to it's readers.

The startling article was as follows:

Ottawa, Sept. 29. — The aggregation of tin-horn sports known as the Borden government, continued to stack the cards to the last minute. A notorious example was the amendment to the Wartime Election Act, which Senator Ross of Nova Scotia introduced in the Senate in the dying hours of the session. The amendment was by Senator Ross, but the initiative was from the Borden government, which put its docile follower up to commit this farewell outrage.

The amendment dealt with the revisted lists in Nova Scotia with a view to stuffing them with voters who would vote for the Borden government. The whole machinery of the War-time Election Act had been discussed in the Commons and not a word had been breathed then about monkeying with the Nova Scotia lists, which have been in the same official hands for practically the last hundred years. No, Premier Borden was reserving this new assault on our liberties for his final coup. Just a week or so before he had been writing to the women of Canada to tell them how pure and non-partizan he was, and all the time was revolving how he could debauch the voters' lists of his native province and turn Nova Scotia into a Tory stronghold. He trusted to the hurry to jam it through and get away to go fishing. Friends of Premier Borden explain that it wasn't his fault. It was the Hon. Arthur Meighen who cooked up the job. In short it was a Meighen trick. The end justified the Meighens.

Although the Ross amendment was turned down in the Commons, the Liberal candidates in Nova Scotia will still go into the general election under handicaps that no fair-minded opponent would impose. It remains to be seen whether this last crooked scheme will work out satisfactorily for the Borden government. The scheme to split the West by means of the deft Italian hand of Sir Clifford Sifton, the scheme to split the Liberal party by means of Union government, the scheme to split Quebec via Bourassa and the Military Service Act, have all gone astray. The scheme to split Nova Scotia will probably go the same way as its unfortunate predecessors.

It is understood that the Borden government would have liked to go a great deal further than it did with the WarTime Election Act. They wanted to create an exclusively Tory franchise, with test oaths at the polls, and fines and imprisonment for voters who said that they would vote right and then went in and voted Liberal. Little Arthur Meighen was in favor of having these recreants shot at sunrise. He also advocated a class franchise, consisting exclusively of those who took a bath every day and wore seven clean shirts a week. This would have thrown the franchise into the hands of the vested interests who have time for these luxuries. But some of the government's supporters kicked. They said they didn't want a franchise that would single out Sir Joseph Flavelle for special honors any more than the government was doing already. It is well known at Ottawa that ever since Sir Joseph made ten thousand dollars a year—and that was a long time ago—he has been in the habit of changing his collars once a day and twice on Sunday, when he gets very hot teaching the Bible class.

It is with Sir Joseph in view that the Borden government has enfranchised five hundred thousand soldiers' women folk. They feel confident that these women will be tickled to death to vote for the Borden government, which stands behind Sir Joseph and the other profiteers who make all their money for food. Sir Joseph is now in the hands of a Royal Commission, which is expected to enamel him until he glitters like a Childs' restaurant. There will be no fly specks on Sir Joseph when the royal Commission finishes its work. The Borden government thinks that much of him

It is absolutely necessary that Sir Joseph should stick around and that the Borden government should be at his back until he collects all his accounts, twenty-five million dollars for beef stew for the British government, several more millions from the unhappy Canadian consumer of Sir Joseph's table products, and several more million which make up his share of the $135,000,000 the Toronto looters expect to get out of the infamous C.N.R. deal. No matter where the pork barrel is Sir Joseph is not far away from it. The Borden government can't lose him. They daren't. He helped to put them in, and he's got to get his stake back.

The five hundred thousand women voters who find their dollar shrunk to half its size when they go to market, and all through the efforts of Sir Joseph and his friends in the Borden Government, are no doubt keeping a close eye on the revelations in Toronto. In spite of the best efforts of the Commission some of the facts will crop out. For instance that Sir Joseph makes one million profit on the bacon on this side of the water, as the William Davies Company, and another million on the other side of the water as Sheed, Thompson & Co. Also that he avoids the British war tax by labelling half his overseas profit as "commissions" and the Canadian war tax by soaking half a million of his profits away as "Rest fund." Some finacier, Sir Joseph!—H. P. G.

G. W. V. A. Want The Names Of The Children

Are Arranging For a Big Entertainment For Soldiers' Youngsters

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—It is the desire of the Great War Veterans Association of Peterborough to make this Christmas season a happy one for the children of the men who have proceeded overseas from this city, or who have served or are serving in any branch of the allied army or navy. In order that an estimate might be formed of the number of children to be entertained the Entertainment Committee of the Association request that the names of all children who can and will be present be forwarded to the Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, G. W. V. A., at the Barrie Building, by the 13th of this month.

Yours truly,
W. R. ELLIOTT,
Chairman Entertainment Committee, G.W.V.A., Peterborough.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

MR. F. J. SQUIRE IS ARRESTED ON A PERJURY CHARGE

Admitted to Bail of $2,000 and Remanded Until Dec. 13th—Development of Fire Enquiry Held This Week

F. J. Squire, of Havelock, arrested by Detective Newhall yesterday afternoon, appeared before Magistrate Dumble last night on a charge of perjury, and was remanded until December 13th. He was admitted to bail of $2,000.

This unexpected development of the fire enquiry held in Havelock on Tuesday and Wednesday was no surprise around the Police Department. Since the morning of November 10th, when three fires broke out almost simultaneously in the railway village, Chief Thompson has given this case the closest attention. He went to Havelock on the day of the fires on instructions from Judge Huycke, who had been informed by Mr. Squire of certain alleged aspects of the affair that appeared to have made Mr. Squire the victim of the enforcement of the Military Service Act. One of Havelock's most prominent citizens and a Justice of the Peace, he was chairman of the exemption tribunal, and, it was stated, had received threatening anonymous letters, warning him that his property would suffer.

Walter Varty, a young farmer who was said to be a defaulter under the Military Act, was arrested on a charge of arson, and has been remanded several times in Peterborough. He applied for bail, but was refused and is still held in the jail.

At the enquiry before Deputy Fire Marshall Rogers of Toronto, Mr. Squire stated that he had lost forty tons of coal in the destruction of his warehouse, but one of the men who had delivered the coal, swore they had put there only seven tons. Other features of the evidence and circumstances the police have investigated, may completely alter the trend and character of this case.

There has been strong feeling reported from Havelock since the arrest of Varty and several prominent citizens visiting Peterborough have expressed belief in his innocence of arson.

BATTLE IS CONTINUING SAYS ROME DESPATCH

Canadian Press Despatch:

ROME, Dec. 7.—On the Asiago Plateau the battle is continuing without interruption, says to-day's official report

MR. J. S. KNAPMAN IS COMMITTED FOR TRIAL ON ONE CHARGE

The preliminary hearing of the charge against J. S. Knapman of stealing $2,489.43 from W. H. Lytle dragged along last night until 10.30 o'clock and was unfinished at the noon adjournment to-day. Mr. J. P. Bickell of the Motor Vehicles branch of the Department of Public Highways, who received the reports and the automobile license fees from Mr. Lytle's office, detailed last night his correspondence with the local office, the result of his visit in July and the subsequent action.

Mr. Bickell stated that the local office was indebted to the Department for $3,404.25, after deducting the commissions allowed for issuing the licenses. Mr. Knapman wrote out a cheque and had Mr. Lytle sign it. Mr. Knapman said there was hardly enough money in the bank to cover the cheque but there would be in a day or two.

Mr. Fortye was also called last night and this morning Mr. D. R. Fleming, the present office manager for the Lytle Cartage Co., was called for the defence.

Mr. W. R. Morris.

Mr. W. R. Morris chartered accountant, said he had worked on the Lytle Cartage Company's books at various times from the beginning of August until a week or two ago.

"I found what purported to be a cash book, also ledger cards showing accounts with customers, also books showing accounts for automobile licenses and the usual bank books, a saving account with Royal Bank for automobile deposits and current account book for the Cartage business with Dominion Bank.

The debit side of the cash book showing receipts was fairly complete, but no entries on the credit side showing disbursements. I mean that subsequently a number of entries were found that should have been included there but were not. The cash account was so incomplete that I told Mr. Lytle to have them completed with whatever data was on hand and I would then make a statement from them."

Producing the cash book Mr. Morris stated that it had been most inefficiently kept. "It is incomplete in every particular, errors of omission rather than of commission. Even now it is still incomplete, This is particularly for the cartage business.

"It is all cartage except two payments to help the automobile account of the close. They were for a total of $281 and were made on the 16th and 18th of July after Mr. Knapman had left."

Mr. Morris dipped into the technical phase of the book-keeping. There was no other way of finding out where the money went unless the books showed it. "We looked for every expenditure that appeared of legitimate nature and the disbursements are fairly complete, but it is impossible to say whether the receipts are or not." Mr. Morris stated that he had found receipts that were not entered.

Turning to the automobile license record book Mr. Morris said he would hardly dignify it by calling it a cash book, but it was the only thing that served as a cash book. It showed the number of licenses, the names of licenses, money received, date of permit and details of automobiles.

The entry of the first permit was March 6 and there were no dates after March 27 and the book was completed as far as permits was concerned, by the Department of Highways. Mr. Lytle took the book to Toronto. The only statement of deposits and money paid out is in the bank pass book.

Assuming that all the money received was deposited, the total receipts up to July 9th, were $10,090.00. The actual deposits in the banks up to July 21st were $7,078.07, as shown by the bank pass book. There is an apparent shortage of $3,011.93.

"Can't you find this money?" Magistrate Dumble asked.

"No, your Worship, that's beyond me," Mr. Morris replied.

"In the cartage business from October to the end of February enough money came in to take care of all disbursements, but from March to July there appeared to be more disbursements than receipts. There was a credit balance with the bank at the end of each month during that time, showing that there was no shortage as between the bank and the cartage company."

Asked as to whether there was any evidence of misappropriation, Mr. Morris replied that there were indications that pointed to it.

Apparently the cartage disbursements from October until July exceeded the receipts by $1306.08. The business was apparently self sustaining until February, but the greatest discrepancy in the finances was during the months of May and June. The actual shortage in the auto license business was $3,011.93.

Referring to the $1,306.00 discrepancy in the cartage, Mr. Morris stated to Mr. Gordon in cross examination, that this money must have come from some source, and one of those sources was the auto license business.

"With that system, or rather lack of system, disaster was bound to follow sooner or later."

"Had Mr. Knapman a knowledge of elementary book-keeping?" Mr. Gordon asked.

"It is not shown in the books."

Mr. Gordon—"Would he know the state of the business?"

Mr. Morris—He would never know where he was. A balance sheet would be impossible."

"Something was wrong some place" Mr. Morris said, referring to the discrepant records of the business.

At the conclusion of the case, at noon, Mr. Knapman was committed for trial. Other charges are pending.

CLAIMS 4,000 MORE ITALIANS ARE PRISONERS

Canadian Press Despatch:

BERLIN, Via London, Dec. 7.—Four thousand more Italians have been captured in the new Austro-German offensive on the northern front, bringing up the total to fifteen thousand, according to to-day's official communication. Mont Sisemol was captured by storm, the statement says.

If you add a few thin slices of white soap to the water before putting flowers into it they will keep longer.

"The 13th Chair"

The Most Talked of Play in New York

Theatre-goers who have waited patiently for the coming of "Thirteenth Chair" will be well rewarded on Thursday next, when New York's sensational melodrama will be presented here by William Harris, Jr., in the same elaborate setting in which it was shown at the Forty-Eighth Street Theatre, New York.

To attempt a description of "The Thirteenth Chair" in a few brief sentences would be well nigh impossible. Suffice it to say that from the moment the curtain descended on the last act of the play on its opening night, it was the most talked of play seen in New York in an entire theatrical season. Its continuous run at the Forty-eight street theatre for more than a year bears eloquent testimony to the interest taken in the play by those who love the drama.

"The Thirteenth Chair" is by Edward Veiller, the author of "Within the Law," who is known to theatre-goers the world over as a master hand at writing sensational dramatic plays.

British Expect Supreme Effort From The Germans

British Retirement in Burlon Sector Perfectly Accomplished —Germans Puzzled

(By William Philip Sims)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Dec. 7, 1917.—The British Army expects German's biggest and perhaps its final offensive effort of war shortly. Gen. Byng's retirement from Bourlon was regarded to-day as the first prime precautionary measure for the British to withstand such a shock. As the British see it, Germany is now at the zenith of her military power. With Russia out of the war, Germany is enabled to draw on increased man power, whereto fore held along Russian lines. She is apparently preparing to throw every ounce of her energy into a supreme attempt at a military victory before the arrival of American troops on the fightfng line.

In the Bourlon sector there were only two alternatives open to General Byng. One was to push ahead and the other was to step backward to a more secure footing. With the Russian situation permitting the enemy to mass great forces on the Cambrai line, a backward step seemed the only thing to do.

The withdrawal puts the British into a much better posture for receiving expected attacks. It was carried out perfectly — so perfectly that the Germans looked foolish in their attacks on unoccuped land. The Boches shelled the uninhabited land and the redoubts for hours with a hurricane barrage. Then they attacked with dense masses.

Their storming waves found the forest of Bourlon garrisoned only with dead. The patrols from the enemy lines later cautiously wormed their way to the ruins near by like wary mice approaching a suspicious bit of cheese. One dash of British shrapnel sent them scurrying back. Then came thick waves of more German "shock troops," charging over crest and upon both sides of Bourlon. They were charging positions occupied at that moment only by ground rats. When the Boches go there and were trying to puzzle out the withdrawal the British guns pelted their closely-packed masses with shells.

The British did not leave a single piece of material in the evacuated section, even telephone wires were neatly up and taken away. Every dugout was neatly destroyed.

To-day German airmen were trying in flocks and with all their might to find out what was occurring behind Byng's lines of retirement.

PETERBOROUGH DIVER LOCATED BODY

A sad drowning accident occurred at Coboconck on Monday last, when the six-year-old son of Mr. Simon Plews fell through thin ice on the canal and lost his life.

It appears that the young lad with a playmate were out rollicking on the ice when young Kenneth broke through. He went down without a scream and perished. Attempts were made to locate the body, but without success. It was finally decided to secure the services of a diver, Mr. T. A. Northey of Peterborough, who succeeded in raising the body, which was found resting on the bottom of the

Can Transfer Troops From The Russian Front

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Dec. 7.—Germany is apparently to be permitted under the Russian-German armistice plan to transfer all the troops she desires from the Russian fronts for use against the Allies. The full text of the armistice agreement signed by the 67th Russian and the 31st German infantry divisions, as published here to-day in the newspaper Bravda shows no stipulation that German troops must not be used against the Allies on other fronts. Such a stipulation was specifically pledged by Foreign Minister Trotsky in a recent speech.

Fresh fish have eyes bright and full, gills red and fins that stand up and the flesh is firm to the touch.

"Safety First"

The Story of How Prices Are Cut in Two at M. Fine's Bargain House

While everybody is mixed up in the election excitement, and working for their favourite candidate, Mr. M. Fine of the Big Bargain House, opposite Barrie's, has a few sensible remarks to offer for the benefit of wise shoppers.

"Safety First," he thinks, lies in doing all you can to reduce the high cost of living. Every member of the family—the children as well as the grown-ups—must be provided with good, warm winter clothing. Everyone will agree to this, even if they don't agree about the elections questions.

The next thing is, where can the best clothing at the closest prices be bought?

Well, Mr. Fine has a splendid large stock of men's, women's and children's clothing, bought at prices so low that he can afford to sell many things actually at half the prices asked in the up-town stores.

Come any hour on Saturday and let him prove what he says, and "do your bit" by helping to reduce the high cost of living.

At the holiday season Mr. Fine always has an attractive stock of Christmas gifts, such as ladies' silk bags, neckwear, gloves, fancy linens, etc. These and all such things he will also sell at half prices.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile, and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening, and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble, or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

SOLDIERS OVERHAUL GOVERNMENT TRACTORS

Farm Motors Put Into Shape During Winter by Vocational Classes of M. H. C.

The tractors on the Experimental Farms run by the Government in the various provinces, will be turned over to the vocational training classes of the Military Hospitals Commission for overhauling during the winter months.

In the motor mechanics course, which is without a peer for popularity among the returned soldiers requiring industrial re-education, there is need of motors on which to work and many of the men intending to run farm tractors when their course is finished are eager for a chance to work around a farm motor.

The Government has been spared the expense of buying motor cars for experimental work by the generosity of many firms and individuals who have given their decrepit motors for "vivisection." That the men have restored these relics to fitness and put them into service again speaks for the quality of the instruction and the ability of the men.

In the study of motor contsruction they have dismembered all species from the fliver to the twin-six. Tractors are not so easily obtainable and the action of the government in turning the farm motors over to the classes for overhauling is a boon to men as well as a benefit to Experimental Farms.

Two motors from the Dominion Experimental Farm at Ottawa are to be sent to Mowatt Sanatorium in Kingston to be put into condition by the soldiers for spring work.

DEATH TOLL AT HALIFAX

CONSUL MAY BE VICTIM.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, December 7.—Fears for the safety of American Consul-General Ethelbert Watts of Halifax—a Philadelphian, were voiced at the State Department to-day. Consul Freeman, of Sydney, Nova Scotia, left early to-day to investigate the fate of Americans in the vicinity of the explosion.

THOUGHT IT WAS AIR RAID.

TRURO, N.S., December 7.—There were cries of "aeroplane raid" in Halifax when the explosion spread death and destruction over the city. Refugees arriving here to-day declared many believed the Germans were attacking the Canadian naval base.

They declared that wires working into the city were burdened with hysterical messages addressed to friends and relatives in Halifax. Some buildings which had hastily been prepared to receive bedoes were used as hospitals. The dead were placed in parks and vacant spaces. Scores searched these fields of corpses for missing friends and relatives. They stepped over bodies, peering into the faces, trying to hold lighted matches in the wind long enough to get a glimpse of the features. Here and there lanterns or flashlights flickered. Drug stores freely offered their supplies for the wounded. Many in the city, it was reported here, are wandering dazed, suffering from concussion or shell shock.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, December 7.—American Red Cross officials here today awaited details of the Halifax catastrophe prepared to send additional relief to that despatched by special trains from Boston and New York last night without formal call for assistance from Canada. Word reaching the Navy Department early to-day that the dead might reach five thousand caused efforts to meet the situation to be redoubled.

WRECK AND RUIN EVERYWHERE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

HALIFAX, December 7.—Following in the wake of death and destruction in this city yesterday, a heavy snowstorm set in early this morning adding to the discomfort of the homeless and impeding the work of the rescuers. Fires are still burning in the devastated area, and the Fire Department is still at work. The fall of snow, however, will assist them in subduing the fires in the ruins.

The devastated area extends from north street to Africville on the shores of Bedford Basin, about two miles, and from the water front west to Gottingen street, about three-quarters of a mile. Special trains from Moncton, Truro and Windsor have arrived here bringing doctors, nurses and medical supplies. Special trains with the injured have also been sent to Windsor and other points where there are large hospitals. Business is still suspended and will be for days. All schools and colleges in the city have been closed and will not reopen until after the New Year. There is wreck and ruin on every side. There is not a building in the city that did not suffer from damage. All are without glass, plaster is down, and windows and doors shattered. On every side carpenters and property owners are boarding up their premises to keep out the storm.

All power plants are still idle. No new estimate of the dead and injured was available this morning. Blue jackets from an American warship in port did patrol duty on all streets of the city last night.

EXODUS FROM HALIFAX.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, December 7.—A great exodus from Halifax, the city of horrors, has begun, according to information reaching here to-day. While the police, soldiers, United States sailors and civilian volunteers are digging in the debris of the ruined portions of the city for the dead and maimed, a stream of women, children and some men are flocking from the town. Preparations to care for these refugees have been made in many nearby towns. Most of them are being conveyed by train, others are riding in waggons, but lately used for hauling corpses. Two thousand dead is a conservative estimate, according to the police. When the work of clearing away debris begins, further horrors may be revealed. At present the fire-swept area is sheathed in ice. A number of bodies have been recovered from the bay.

CRACK LINER THERE.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, December 7.—The huge Nieuw Amsterdam, crack ship of the Holland-American line, with from 300 to 400 Americans aboard, may have been in Halifax harbour at the time of the explosion of the Monte Blanc. Officials of the line here to-day expressed fear for her safety. The big liner was the first ship to leave here after the embargo on Dutch ships was raised. She put into Halifax for examination ,and since that time has not been heard from. She carried 1,000 tons of corn for the Belgian War Relief(besides a large passenger list. The Monte Blanc, the steamship which blew up, was of the French line. She was under orders to the British Admiralty, it was stated, and none of the officers could tell anything of her movements. She was a single screw steamer of 3,121 tonnage, and carried a crew of thirty-five. J. Savery was her commander.

The Imo, the Belgian Relief Ship, which collided with the Monte Blaic, was built for the White Star Line, but now is under Norwegian registry. She was formerly known as the Runic, but changed her name when sold a few years ago to the South Pacific Whaling Company.

The Imo, the Belgian Relief ship, which collided with the Monte Blanc, Captain Throm. She was a four-masted iron vessel of 5,643 tons.

No Change In The Estimate of Casualties

Canadian Press Despatch:

HALIFAX, Dec. 7.—Up to noon today there was no change in the police estimate of the number of casualties in yesterday's disaster. There are about two thousand dead and the same number injured, two-thirds of the latter suffering from cuts from the flying glass.

$10,000 From Kitchener

Canadian Press Despatch:

KITCHENER, Ont., Dec. 7. — The City Council at a special meeting this morning, voted ten thousand dollars for the Halifax sufferers.

PETERBOROUGH MEN IN STRICKEN CITY

Mr. C. I. Leonard, American Consul for Peterborough, has received word this morning that his grandson, Kenneth MacKenzie, had been severely wounded in the Halifax explosion. The injured man was a son of the Rev. A. W. MacKenzie of the Grove school, Lakefield, and was in training at Halifax as a naval cadet. He would have graduated this winter, after having completed three years in training. The report stated that Mackenzie was severely cut about the face, but his eyesight was not impaired.

Word has also been received that Quartermaster-Sergeant L. McGuire, of the Canadian Army Dental Corps, came through the explosion safely. McGuire is a Peterborough soldier.

It is feared that the 74th Battery Depot may have been in the stricken city at the time of the explosion, although an Ottawa despatch locates the battery in Windsor, Nova Scotia. Several Peterborough boys are in this unit.

Mr. Frank Pidgeon of the Royal Canadian Volunteer Naval Reserve, is also reported to be in Halifax.

Mr. J. G. M. Wilson, Margaret avenue, has a brother, the pastor of one of the Baptist churches, living in Halifax. No word has been received from him as yet.

HOW THE CREWS ESCAPED DURING HALIFAX EXPLOSION

HALIFAX, December 7.—The escape of the crews of the two ships which, colliding, caused the explosion, was explained to-day. After the crash—due to a mistake in signals—both crews abandoned the ships. The French munitions steamer Mont Blanc was in flames. A deck-load of benzine blazing briskly. The sailors knew an explosion was certain. They rowed for shore and took to their heels. The burning vessel drifted toward the Halifax side and then blew up. The Belgian Relief ship Imo, which backed away from the Mont Blanc, was beached, after being riddled with holes by the exploding ammunition.

Bitter cold added to the sufferings of the homeless victims to-day. Members of families, separated during the panic ,besought the police to find their loved ones. Women were seen digging in the ruins of their houses. Waggons which went about the streets picking up rubbish and trying to open the thoroughfares, occasionally found fragments of human bodies projecting from piles of junk. There were many corpses buried as "unidentified." The present plan is to bury them all in one long grave, like a trench grave on a battlefield. Temporary morgues have been established in various parts of the ruined section. Some are in houses.

In one house the bodies were placed on the shelves of a closet. The cold weather prevents immediate danger of a plague from th great masse of dead. No accurate count of the wounded has yet been attempted.

Hundreds of slightly injured have been attended,

The Boilers Did Not Explode

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The boilers of the Imo, the Belgian relief ship, which collided with the Mont Blac, did not explode, according to word received at an agent's office here. The thirty-four members of her crew were picked up by a British battleship, this message stated. After the collision the Imo succeeded in backing away and beaching before the explosion occurred.

Relief From U. S. Cities

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Washington, Boston, New York and other United centres, continue to ship train loads of medical aid and supplies of all kinds to Halifax. The Mayor of Halifax has been notified that sister cities all over the St[illegible] stand ready to help in all ways possible.

"The Dangerous Tendencies Of Bordenism"

From the Toronto Globe, Sept. 21, 1917

(From The Toronto Globe, September 21, 1917.)

"It is time for Canadians to take stock of the dangerous tendencies in their midst. It is given to Canada so to bear herself in the struggle with Germany as to strengthen her hold on the eternal principles of human progress for which she is sacrificing her blood and her treasure, or to fail so tragically in the search after Truth as to weaken her faith in her destiny as a democratic nation by abandoning the high aims and purposes with which she set out to help in destroying the last citadel of military autocracy. When the guns of War are spiked, when Peace once more hovers over the tented battlefields, when the wearied nations have counted the cost of victory, it will be a poor recompense for all that this nation has sacrificed if, in the final reckoning triumph over Germans arms does not mean for Canada a strengthening of the foundations of national and individual character.

"To one great end the armies of the free democracies of the world are bending all their energies. To them this war is a fight to the death, for without liberty there can be no life. It is a war of conquest, for liberty is imperilled so long as German militarism is in the field. The conquest for which the Allied armies are battling is not military conquest only. It does not aim at the destruction of the German nation or the aggrandizement of territory. The only victory that will count is that which establishes the reign of freedom and democracy in the nations that are at war. Unless Canada can measure her gains in terms of spiritual values the sacrifices of her brave troops will count for naught in the life of the nation. What a travesty all the sacrifice and heroism and unflinching endurance and prodigal outpouring of the country's noblest blood, if in the end Canada fails to seize hold of the essentials of victory, and debases her ideals by turning aside from the highway of national progress on which the emancipated democracies of the world are converging! What a tragedy it would be for this Dominion if, in the end, the downfall of Prussian autocracy, while making for the liberation and the democratization of Germany, left Canada less enthusiastic for the things that really count in this war, and without which her military sacrifices would prove a stale and unprofitable adventure!"

A vote for Union Government is a vote to condone "the dangerous tendencies" of Borden rule

Joint Meeting At Lakefield

smith and Mr. Burnham are trying to force down our throats.

Mr. Sexsmith's Production.

"Mr. Sexsmith," said Mr. Johnston, "came to Havelock last spring and gave the farmers advice to produce potatoes, to grow wheat, and to grow oats and barley, and the farmers did so to the best of their ability. But Mr. Sexsmith, who has a farm of 250 acres of good land, with a fine brick house and a fine barn upon it, let his own farm run idle last year.

He did not produce one pig on his place, nor one calf nor one lamb. His total stock on the farm is one horse, and he did not produce enough on his farm to feed himself and his family and his horse for the winter.

Mr. Sexsmith knows that Great Britain requires food, and by both precept and example he adopts a policy to starve Great Britain out.

Some insulting posters are plastered by Sir Robert Borden upon our boards, headed "Who would the Kaiser vote for?"

The Kaiser would vote for the Prime Minister who placed the Ross rifle in the hands of our Canadian boys, which he knew would jam and become a useless weapon in their hands, and would open a breach five miles wide through which the Germans could march on to Calais.

The Kaiser would vote for the Government that permitted Canadian nickle to find its way into Germany to be used to shoot down our own Canadian boys and to build submarines that could be used to sink British vessels.

The Kaiser would vote for Sir Robert Borden and Sir Joseph Flavelle and the big interests who would force our common people to pay high prices for food stuffs and to live on inferior food stuffs.

Dr. Munro.

Dr. Munro was called on. He said, "I am a Scotsman, and was born on the British Islands. I do not like humbug. Before calling the Liberal convention, I found out that Mr. Sexsmith said he had the endorsation of Sir Robert Borden, and I found out that this so-called Union Government was not a real Union of parties, but was simply a hollow pretence.

Sir Robert Borden has been Prime Minister for six years, and is still the Premier of Canada, and he organized this so-called Union Government to cover up the misdeeds of a moribund Government. Such being the case I approved of our executive calling a convention and placing a straight opponent of Mr. Sexsmith in the field.

Mr. R. R. Hall.

Mr. R. R. Hall also spoke at some length.

"Who is Sir Joseph Flavelle going to vote for in this election?" said Mr. Hall.

"He will vote to keep Sir Robert Borden in power."

Are the farmers and working men going to vote on the same side as Sir Joseph Flavelle or are they going to vote in the opposite way?

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

In a Ten-Pin League fixture at the Water Street alleys last night the High Rollers won all three games from the C.G.E. team. The High Rollers rolled up a three-game total of 2,354, while the C.G.E. totalled 2,192. Solomon had high three games with a 599 count and a single of 234 for his third game. Langley was high man for the C.G.E. with 473.

Horrible Scenes In Stricken Halifax

(Special to the Toronto Star and Peterborough Examiner.)

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 7.—Freezing cold and a heavy snowstorm added to the sufferings of the wounded and shelterless in this blasted city to-day. Fires which were believed extinguished, have broken out again. There is no reliable count of the dead.

Two thousand is a low estimate in the belief of those working among the corpses, now frozen stiff in grotesque and horrible attitudes of death agony. Many injured are dying.

ROUNDING UP CHILDREN.

The police are attempting to round up lost children who are wandering through the appalling wilderness of wreckage, weeping bitterly or calling for their mothers.

Even worse conditions than exist in Halifax have turned North Dartmouth, across the bay, into a place of death and suffering.

The most badly damaged section of Halifax is shut off by guards. The dockyard magazines have been flooded to prevent more explosions. Canadian soldiers and American sailors worked side by side searching for wounded, gathering the dead and preserving order in Halifax.

Immediately after the explosion, while dense clouds of white smoke were rolling over the scene of devastation, the Canadian troops were assembled, each man ready for business. Some of those who formed ranks were bleeding from wounds.

RELIEF WORKERS ARRIVE.

The detachments of the American bluejackets which arrived some time after the blast, were of immense help. American relief workers from New York, Boston, and other points are understood to be en route here. They have not arrived yet.

When surgical help from nearby towns reached here last night, the injured were thronged around the dressing stations, awaiting their turns. More bodies were found today in the debris. Snow is rapidly cloaking some of the more ghastly mounds of shattered wood and stone where the corpses can be seen under the rubbish. A formal inquiry into the cause of the collision between the steamers will be made. One witness believes the Belgian vessel's steering gear broke.

The most badly damaged area of Halifax is from Gottingen Street to the Dockyards. The dry dock is wrecked. St. Joseph's Church is in ruins. Many big buildings were unroofed, as if a tornado had swept over them.

A NOISE LIKE THUNDER.

The explosion gave warning of its coming. It was preceded by a noise like thunder; then came the terrific smash that shook the earth, caved in strong buildings, filled the air with death-dealing fragments, and knocked thousands of people off their feet. Many families are believed to have been annihilated.

The blast played strange freaks; many doors were down open the locks were ripped from their places in the woodwork. Live electric wires lay in the streets. Nobody seemed to know what had happened. Then the fires began spreading. Freight sheds in Richmond were pushed over like houses of cards. Many of the injured were removed by train to Windsor to-day.

The city was in practical darkness all night. School sessions will probably not be resumed for a month. Some wounded people were found today lying where they had been hurled by explosion. Volunteer stretcher bearers gathered them up. Some of those found dead to-day had evidently died of wounds by their postures. It was apparent they made desperate attempts to crawl into the open before losing consciousness.

Notice to the Farmers and Employers of Farm Help in West Peterborough:

By virtue of my appointment by the Government of Canada to consider and make recommendations concerning the appeals of those having or employing farm help against the finding of the tribunals in the said district,

I will be at the Court House, Peterborough, on Wednesday, December 12th, to meet all those who have entered appeals or wish to appeal for exemption of farm help. In order that I may make suitable recommendations as representative of the Government and of the farmers to the authorities, and in order that there shall be no reduction in the production of food or impairment of proper farm conditions at this time, I am empowered to make immediate and suitable recommendations concerning exemptions, and it is desirable that every person having a complaint to make should make it to me on the above date, and at the place named.

WEDDING BELLS

HARRISON—WIRES.

A quiet but pretty wedding was celebrated at All Saints' parsonage on Wednesday morning at 10.30, by the Rev. Mr. Grobb, when Catherine Wires, second eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Peter Wires, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Arthur Harrison, who has returned from service overseas.

The bride was attended by Miss Mary Wires, sister of the bride. The groom was attended by Mr. Albert Jones.

After the ceremony the happy young couple, accompanied by their friends, drove to the home of the bride, where a sumptuous dinner was partaken of.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison left on the four o'clock train for Toronto, where they will reside. All join in wishing them future happiness.

Advanced Wood Work For Returned Soldiers

Pattern Making Branch Pays Well For Men With Skill and Some Wood-working Experience

Canadian soldiers who were carpenters before they went overseas and returned disabled for such work will be given opportunity to take up pattern making, one of the most advanced phases of wood working.

Carpentry classes have been large in all the institutions established or taken over in part by the Military Hospitals Commission for the vocational training and industrial re-education of the returned soldiers. They are made up both of boys who intend to follow the work in its higher branches of cabinet making, interior finishing and pattern making, and those who are following the work merely as a therapeutic measure during their convalescence, with perhaps the second motive of picking up a little useful knowledge which will round out their abilities as householders and home-makers.

There is no course in which the therapeutic value of the work is greater. The work provides variety, moderate activity and quick results. It takes only a short time for a man to make something interesting and useful, and the task can be increased as he is able to attempt bigger things.

In the higher branches of the work many men are qualifying for positions which will yield them good wages. Cabinet making offers an opening for skilled workmen with artistic tendencies and an eye for fine work and detail, while pattern making has equal attractions for the mathematical mind.

Pattern making pays well and many soldiers will make good in this line from present indications. Even though the skilful man has lost one or both legs he is as valuable in this line of work as a whole man, and his disability presents no handicap.

GERMAN CRUISER BLOWN UP IN COLLISION WITH MINE.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 6.—It is reported from Dragoer, at the southeast extremity of the Island of Amager, that a German auxiliary cruiser, the guardship Botnia, was blown up after a collision with a German mine field off that coast.

The cruiser sank, but the number of men lost is unknown, the survivors refusing to give any information

The Botnia was formerly a Russian vessel, which was captured by the Germans.

VOL. LIX. No. 134 PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1917 PRICE TWO CENTS

A chance to buy Royal Oak Tires

"Tougher than Oak"

at bargain prices!

Sale will last from Saturday, December 8th, to Saturday, December 15th, both days inclusive

You are not going to have the opportunity much longer of buying Royal Oak Tires or any tires at presnt prices.

The continuous demand of the allied nations for rubber goods is reflected in sharply advancing prices. With raw materials going up, a scarcity of labor, and higher wages, the tire manufacturer finds the pressure too much for him.

Prices of tires in Canada are going to advance soon all along the line.

Prices of tires in the United States have already been advanced from 10% to 15%.

The prudent auto owner, however, is not going to wait until higher prices overtake him; he is going to buy now and put the difference in his pocket.

Why the Reduction?

"Well, if prices are going up, why are you lowering the price of Royal Oak Tires: is there anything the matter with them?"

That's a fair question and demands a fair answer.

There is only one reason why the prices are being lowered at all on Royal Oak Tires and that is because we want to introduce them quickly; to make them better known without the delay which usually attends the growth in demand for a new article. Another reason is we want to get as many orders as we can NOW so that we can continue steady shipments all winter, avoiding in some measure the confusion, excitement, and waiting that result when orders are held over until the Spring.

So far as quality goes, Royal Oak Tires are At — value in any way you take them.

The Value is There

The highest grade of rubber is what they are made of—you can't beat that—welded by hand into a tough wear-resisting fabric that endures like solid oak.

We know this because we have proved it—proved it by actual road tests and we stand ready to prove it again.

So there can be no doubt as to the standard of Royal Oak Tires; they yield all the wear and stand all through service that you would naturally expect from a tire that has so many natural advantages to start with.

But remember—

The low prices we are quoting on Royal Oak Tires are for A FEW DAYS ONLY!

That means just what it says, the sale will be for seven days only, commencing Saturday, December 8th, and ending Saturday, December 15th. There will positively be no sales at these prices later.

Regular Prices

SIZE	PRICE OF TIRES
30 x 3½	$22.75
32 x 3½	25.60
31 x 4	35.60
32 x 4	37.75
33 x 4	39.90
34 x 4	40.90

Head Office, Toronto, Ont.

Comparison Shows Big Savings

We couldn't afford to have the sale last longer; we couldn't afford to continue giving you indefinitely the value we are offering in Royal Oak Tires at these special prices.

Introductory Prices

SIZE	PRICE OF TIRES
30 x 3½	$18.80
32 x 3½	21.35
31 x 4	29.70
32 x 4	31.45
33 x 4	33.25
34 x 4	34.10
36 x 4	37.15
33 x 4½	42.70
35 x 4½	46.55
36 x 4½	47.60
37 x 4½	49.40
35 x 5	56.35
37 x 5	59.75

This information is not for the man who knows tire values; he won't have to be told that he's getting a bargain; but it is for the benefit of the man who has purchased his car within the last few months, and who has his tire experience before him.

A man only needs to read our prices and compare them with what he has been accustomed to pay for first-class tires to realize absolutely the truth of the assertion: that through this special offer the buyer is getting the biggest bargain that he has been offered this year in tires.

By ordering Royal Oak Tires next week, therefore, you not only get a bonus of several dollars (far in excess of what you could get by leaving the money in the bank), but you make sure of getting the best tires obtainable and just when you want them.

Delay Means Increased Prices

Make no mistake about it; rubber supplies are growing scarcer, prices are going up—they have already been increased substantially on the other side, and if you wait till Spring you not only stand a chance of being disappointed in delivery; but what is even more important, perhaps, you most assuredly will have to pay much bigger prices than these quoted for this special sale.

The sale will last from the 8th to the 15th of December, both days inclusive, after that—on the morning of the 17th—prices will go back to normal. Such are our instructions from the manufacturers, the Oak Tire and Rubber Company, Limited, Toronto, and we will not be permitted to change them.

Those who can recognize a real bargain when they see one will not lose any time in profiting by this opportunity to save money.

Canada's War Administration By Political Appointees Contrasted With Conscription Of Brains In U.S.

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Uncle Sam is now preparing a long and grim war. His whole war outlook has changed during the past two months, in fact. At first he harboured the notion at the back of his head that the world was on the threshold of peace. Something was going to happen to bring it about; Austria was going to knuckle under; the German people were going to heave up and slide the Hohenzollerns into the abyss; the western front, bending and straining under Haig's hammer blows, was going to suddenly crack.

This unbounded optimism has now vanished and the American Government is working tooth and nail to create a war machine that will represent the full might of the American nation and be good for the strain of years of warfare. Washington is bending to the task. The inadequate suit of war clothing that had been cut out and partly basted has been ruthlessly ripped apart and the master cutters are at work on a fit for a full-grown, powerful warrior.

It has been getting more apparent all the time since August, 1914, that wars are not won entirely on the battlefield, but that victory in the first place must be hammered out in the factories and calculated in the counting houses and wrested from the soil. The best prepared and organised side will win the war

CANADA'S POLITICAL APPOINTEES.

Thinking men in Canada have felt that our own efforts toward national organisation have been inadequate, and that a change would have to be made before we would be able to take our full share in the struggle for democracy. There has been no organised attempt to co-ordinate business interests with the Government. Up to the present the work at Ottawa has been carried on very largely by political appointees. There has been inertia, lack of initiative, all the evidences of the ineptitude that accompanies party government. It may be that, after the pending election, there will be a complete change. In the meantime, however, thinking people in Canada have watched developments in the United States with the keenest interest, and they have seen the Government at Washington inaugurating measures that we in Canada have not yet undertaken. They have seen Uncle Sam gathering to his aid the most successful men in all branches of activity — business men, engineers, educationalists, labour leaders—and through them organising the resources and the manpower of the country in a way that no government alone could do. It has been an object lesson.

WHY BUSINESS WENT TO WASHINGTON.

The all-important thing done has brains and experience; all important because it is the foundation on which the whole organization is being built. This principle was not adopted without opposition. The professional politician class fought vigorously against bringing business men to Washington. War was a matter for government control; let the business man stay in his factory and his warehouse and produce what he was ordered to produce.

The story goes that some of them waited on the man who sits in the White House. By the way, the politicians have found that Wilson, the Professor, who it was thought would be as putty in their hands, is the hardest nut to crack that politicians have ever had. He puts on his glasses and in that cold, academic way he has proceeds to find the joker in everything they put in front of him.

However, a few of the inner circle carried the protest of the professional politician to the White House. They voiced their resentment of the movement for co-ope ration with the business interest. The President heard them through.

"Are you aware that before this war is won," he said, according to the story, "it may be necessary to take ment for co-operation with he business, to take all materials, to utilize every factory? Could the Government do this best with the co-operation of the men who control and understand industry or without it?"

"You have probably not considered," he went on, "that this war is not going to be won by armies. It is going to be won in the factories and on the farms."

The interview was a brief one. The principle of working closely with the business men of the country was firmly established.—Financial Post.

Mrs. Kerneghan has received the following letters from Driver S. C. Kerneghan, 2nd. Can. Div. Supply Column, France, No. 1262255:

London, 5th Nov., 1917.

Dear Mother,—Well, here I am at last on leave, and believe me, I sure am a happy boy to-night. In London at Y.M.C.A., Leicester Square, and you can bet that it is a lovely place, beautiful music and good eats, beautiful rooms, marble parlours, etc.

Left France at 2.15 this morning, and made connections Arrived here at 2.30 p.m. Fine fellow with me. Nov. 6—Still going and fine. Some town and some time. Oh, it is sure fine to be away from the noise and hurry and things which bother you; but it is swell here, and so I am happy. Nov. 7—Here I am, still going, and having a fine time. Was out to a swell dance in a select club, and met lovely girls and people. Going around to principal places tomorrow. Having the treat of my life and would not have missed it for the world. Was out for a good time last night, and sure had it. Nov. 9—Well, here I am again, and have had a beautiful evening. The concert, of which I have already sent you a programme, was beyond grandeur, and it was certainly of the highest degree. This morning the Lord Mayor was out in all his glory, and it was some grandeur. Also the changing of guards at Buckingham Palace.

Nov. 12, Scotland—Sunday: Well, I have arrived up at this place at last, and it is very pretty, what I have seen so far. We were at a Presbyterian church this morning, and we are invited out to a supper this evening. So you see we are having a swell time. I am only sorry that I have not much longer to stay, but such is life; and so I hope for the best. In London I met about thirty fellows from home, and it sure was fine. But I wish it was all over and we were home, as I long to see you all again. I am trying to land a job in Edinburgh and come back, and then all will be jake.

Nov. 17, Edinburgh.—Dear Mother.—Still here and as happy as a king. I was out last evening to a show with a beautiful young lady, with dreamy eyes and a "come and love me" smile, and no trace of powder or paint—a real, rare Scottish lass. After the theatre we went out to supper and then home and had some music. I think my bachelor days are over!

London, 18th Nov., 1917.

Dear Folks.—Landed here at 9.30 this morning, and leave at 6.15 a.m. to-morrow for France. Sure had a most beautiful time in Edinburgh.

France to-morrow, and then the same over again. At Ciror Y.M.C.A. to-night and had supper with three Peterborough boys; also was in Peterborough, England, at 8 this morning. Fine place. Saw Hicks Co. and Peterborough Coal Co.

Remember me to all.

Yours with love. Stan.

SKATING RINKS FOR CONVALESCENT SOLDIERS

Canadian Boys to Enjoy National Sport Under Medical Supervision at M. H. C. Homes

Arrangements have been made for skating rinks at many of the convalescent homes conducted by the Military Hospitals Commission for the returned soldiers needing further medical treatment or industrial re-education before their return to civil life.

Hardly a man in the Canadian army but enjoys skating and the exercise in the fresh air will be beneficial to all of the convalescent men who are able to participate in such active exercise. No one of course is allowed to skate except by permission of the medical officer.

The boys have a great time, and the rinks promise to be one of the greatest sources of amusement during the winter season in many of the out-of-town centres. Skates in many places are being supplied by patriotic citizens. Some are new and others are skates which have been discarded by men overcome by old age or dignity, but sharpened and put into shape they suffice.

It is interesting to note that even in the schools for blinded soldiers in England and France the men enjoy skating.

LAUGH AND GROW FAT.

"Laugh and grow fat," is an old saying laden with value for nervous people in particular. Drop the worry habit and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and you will soon get the nervous system restored to good condition. Digestion will improve, appetite will return, and you will find such symptoms as headache and sleeplessness fast disappearing.

GERMANS CALL BOYS OF 16 TO ENLIST FOR FIRING LINE.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 6—Intimations that Germany is planning to force boys of sixteen and seventeen years into the army are contained in an appeal appearing in the Essen General Anzeiger, that they immediately join the juvenile corps.

"This great struggle between the nations," says the newspaper, "will necessitate those who are now sixteen and seventeen being called up at no very distant date for army service."

HEALTHIEST ONE IN THE FAMILY

No Sign Of Dropsy And Kidney Trouble Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

HATTIE WARREN

Port Robinson, Ont., July 8th, 1915.

"We have used "Fruit-a-tives" in our house for over three years and have always found them a good medicine. Our little girl, Hattie, was troubled with Kidney Disease. The Doctor said she was threatened with Dropsy. Her limbs and body were all swollen and we began to think she could not live. Finally, we decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". She began to show improvement after we had given her a few tablets. In a short time, the swelling had all gone down and her flesh began to look more natural. Now she is the healthiest one in the family and has no signs of the old ailment. We can not say too much for "Fruit-a-tives" and would never be without them".

More Birds, More Food.

If the eastern states alone could bring back the quail, the rose breasted grosbeaks and other bird benefactors they would save $15,000,000 a year in the price of materials used to kill potato bugs.

Charles P. Shoffner of the Liberty Bell Bird club made this statement at a luncheon at the Poor Richard club. He made a plea for the birds as a means of conserving the nation's food resources.

"If Pennsylvania had but one pair of robins to the acre," he said, "the birds would consume 3,000 tons of insects a day. The nation loses $1,000,000,000 a year through ravages of insects which the birds can eliminate. One way to increase the crops is by bringing back the birds."

Liberty and Independence.

When the presidential struggle between Clay and Jackson was at its height it is related that a band of emigrants from Kentucky and the then other western states commenced to settle on the north side of the Missouri river and called their county Clay and the county seat Liberty.

At the same time another lot of emigrants from Virginia and other southern states pitched their tents on the south side of the Big Muddy and called their county Jackson and the capital Independence. And so it remains to this day. Clay stood for liberty and Jackson for independence.

Submarine Ridges.

The Norwegian sea is separated from the North Atlantic by what may be regarded as a continuous ridge, running from Greenland to the British islands plateau, of which Iceland and the Faroe islands are emerged portions. The Mediterranean is cut off from the North Atlantic by a ridge at the Strait of Gibraltar, over which the greatest depth is only 175 fathoms, with steep slopes on either side.

Frostproof Corn.

Department of agriculture experts in Washington are trying to develop a frost proof variety of field corn. They say they are hopeful of early success. Plants have already been developed which have resisted cold which froze soil to a depth of two inches.

His Nickname Did Not Please

"IT was a big-limbed Irish soldier who told the story sitting in a cafe in Poperinghe. "We called him 'Baby' the minute we first slapped eyes on him," said Cahey. "He was such a youngster, with a face just like what you might see in the pictures of angels. He came to us in the early part of the year, when we were in rest-billets down near Cassel. We couldn't help lookin' at him when he came to us just fresh out from England.

"My mate Spudhole caught me by the arm as I was sitting on the floor of the barn where our platoon was billeted. 'Come out, Cahey,' he says to me. 'Just have a peep outside and see what's been sent out to carry on the war.' I goes to the door with Spudhole and saw the Baby.

"'Ain't 'e a nib?' says Spudhole.

"And indeed he was a nib, a light-limbed fellow with red cheeks and blue eyes. He looked at us as we stood at the door of the barn and his face went a trifle redder, I thought. It seemed, however, as if he knew that we came out to look at him. I felt ashamed in a sort of way, so I went back in the barn again. Spudhole followed me in.

"'Saw him,' says Spudhole.

"'Does his mother know he's here?' I asks.

"'I heard our sergeant-major say that he has brought his scooter with him,' says Spudhole. 'He's in charge of our platoon, too,' he went on. 'If the kaiser hears about him he'll want peace at any price.'

"So far so good," Cahey continued. 'We went up to the trenches that night and a party of us had to go out and have a look at the German wire. Baby took charge of the party. I happened to be one of the crush also. We went out and had a look at the wire and I was next hand man to the Baby. 'He'll be all nerves,' I says to myself when we started. But I made a mistake. When we were examining the wires he turned to me a couple of times and said, 'Very interesting this,' and, 'Very interesting that,' just as if he had spent all his life at the job. At last he looks at me and he says, 'The Germans do this work much better than the Turks.'

"'You've been out at Gallipoli, sir?' I asks.

"'Have been out there a little,' he answers.

"Well I took kindly to the boy from then on. And he became a great friend o' mine. Was more like a mate to me than an officer. When he had a job he would now and then tell me his plan of gettin' it done. Then he would ask me, 'What do ye think of this, Gahey?' meanin' o' course what was my opinion o' his own plans for doin' the things set afore him.

"One day when we were billeted in a village I met him in the middle of the street and he stopped to speak to me. While we were standin' there some o' our fellows came along and as they were passin' I heard one o' them, a man named Rogers, say in a whisper, but just loud enough to hear, though he didn't think it, 'Him and the Baby's as thick as thieves.'

"The officer heard the remark and he says to me, 'They're takin' about us two, Gahey. Do they call you "Baby," Gahey?' he asked, and the red came into his cheeks as he spoke.

"'That's me nickname, sir,' I answered without a quiver.

"'Ye don't always tell the truth, Gahey,' says the officer, and a smile came into his eye.

"'I'll be tellin' the truth now, sir, if I say that the man who made that remark when passin' by a minute ago will have a thick ear before he goes to bed to-night,' I says.

"'You're not to do anything of the kind,' says the officer. 'I know,' says he, 'that my nickname is Baby. If you tell me a lie, my lookin' glass tells me truth. I do look young. But ye're not to squabble with Rogers,' he says.

"I didn't squabble with Rogers that night. I just put him flat on the floor and sat on top of him and gave him a short lecture on discipline. Respect to a superior officer was the topic o' my discourse."—Patrick MacGill.

Father's Honors.

Two little Scotch girls were boasting about their respective soldier fathers. "My father's a soger," said Jeanie. "My father's a soger tae," retorted Jessie. "Ah, but my father's a brave man, a terrible brave man," persisted Jeannie; "he's been in a war an' he's got medals, a terrible lot o' medals; an' he's got the Victory crosh, and the king fastened it on with his ain han'." "But my father's a braver man than yours," said Jessie, sticking up valiantly for the honor of the family, "an' he's been in a lot o' wars, an' he's got dizzens and dizzens o' medals an' Victory crosses, an' he's got a wooden leg 'at the king nailed on wi' his ain han'."

Couldn't Rouse Sailor.

The record of a young Norwegian sailor as a sound sleeper, lately commented on in the Norwegian papers, is hard to beat. His steamer had been torpedoed, and the crew had taken to the boats and been rescued by a British armed trawler.

One sailor was missing, who was known to have been sleeping below before the attack of the U-boat. At the request of the Norwegian captain, the trawler was steered close to the sinking steamer, and a few rifle shots were fired at the posthole where the sailor's quarters were. Shortly afterward, the seaman appeared on deck, jumped overboard, and was picked up by the trawler's boat. He had not been awakened when the torpedo struck the ship!

We are deep-sea sailor folk. We are the men who sail and fight His Majesty's battle-ships. We are the men who go down to the sea in merchant ships. We combat storm and wave, ice-floe, shipwreck and submarine, that the Empire may not receive its death blow on the High Seas. We do this for little wage. We do it without a thought of our own safety. Time and time again the British and Canadian Sailor is torpedoed but we find him hurrying to ship anew as soon as he reaches Port. The German submarine drowns or shells him when it can—for the German knows that his arch foe, the British Sailor, will beat him in the end.

"Loch."

The word "loch" is used in Scotland in two different senses. It is applied on the West Coast to arms of the sea which would be called "fiords" in Norway, and it is at the same time applied all over the interior to what in England are called lakes. There are thus fresh-water lochs and salt-water lochs. Loch Lomond and Loch Awe are fresh-water lakes; Loch Long and Loch Fyne are salt-water inlets; just as in Ireland Lough Neagh is of fresh water while Lough Boyle is of salt.

HOW DESERT WAS SUBDUED.

Report From Sinai Armies Given by General Murray.

How the Sinai peninsula, for two years partially occupied by the Turks, was freed of all formed bodies of Turkish troops is told in General Sir Archibald Murray's despatch on the operations of the Egyptian force from October, 1916, to the end of February last, culminating in the victory of Rafa.

The main factor, he says, was intense and unremitting work. To regain the true eastern frontier of Egypt hundreds of miles of road and railway had been built, hundreds of miles of water piping had been laid, filters capable of supplying 1,500,000 gallons of water a day and reservoirs had been installed, and tons of stone transported from distant quarries.

Kantara had been transformed from a small canal village into an important railway and water terminus, with wharves and cranes and a railway ferry; and the desert, till then almost destitute of human habitation, showed the successive marks of our advance in the shape of strong ed wire, of standing camps where troops could shelter in comfortable huts, of tanks and reservoirs, of railway stations and sidings, of aerodromes and of signal stations and wireless installations, by all of which the desert was subdued and made habitable, and adequate lines of communication established between the advancing troops and their ever receding base.

In the Rafa battle, which Sir Archibald Murray describes as a "fine action," and for which he expresses his indebtedness to Lieut.-Gen. Sir Charles Dobell, in command of the eastern force, more than 16,000 unwounded prisoners were taken. Our casualties amounted to 487 in all, of which 71 were killed, 415 wounded, and 1 missing.

You Must Be Earnest.

That which dominates the life, which is ever uppermost in the mind, generally comes somewhere near realization; but there is a great difference between a lukewarm desire and a resolute purpose. It takes steam to drive the piston in the engine; water will never turn the wheels. The longings that fall of realization are usually just

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY.

A DEVOTED WIFE

She Proved More Efficient Than the Law

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Charles Fosdick, newly married, having finished his dinner, rose from the table and said to his wife:

"I must do some work at the office tonight. If I'm not at home by 10 o'clock don't wait for me, but go to bed."

"Can't I help you with your accounts?" asked the wife.

"No; there is nothing to be done that two can work at. I think I can do it all and get home at a reasonable hour."

"I'll sit up for you, no matter how late you are."

It was half an hour after dark when Charlie Fosdick unlocked the office door of Converse & Co., private bankers, and, entering, turned on a light and went to work. He had been engaged some time when, looking up from his desk, he noticed that the door of the private room of Mr. Coolidge, the financial partner, who had also under his supervision the accounts of the concern, was ajar. This was noticeable, because Fosdick knew that when Coolidge left his room he invariably locked it. Fosdick went to the door, pushed it open and by the light that shone in from the counting room saw a sight that filled him with horror. A man lay on the floor. Fosdick ran in, turned on a light and saw the financial partner lying on his back, his glazed eyes staring at the ceiling.

Fosdick's first impulse was to run out and shout for some one. But it flashed upon him that he had better take counsel with himself as to what it would be better to do. Turning off the light, he left the room, closing the door behind him, and returned to his desk. He had been there but a few minutes when the night watchman entered.

"Hard at work, Mr. Fosdick?"

"I'm a little behind," was the reply.

The young man's heart was beating like a triphammer. Should he take the watchman into Coolidge's room and show him what had occurred? He had no time for consideration. The watchman went out, saying before doing so:

"Everything seems to be all right, doesn't it?"

"Oh, yes," was the reply, "everything is all right."

The man had no sooner gone than Fosdick saw that he had been on the horns of a dilemma and had chosen the wrong horn. If he had shown the watchman the body he might have had some chance to escape being hanged for Coolidge's murder. As it was, the watchman would swear that he, Fosdick, had been in the office between 9 and 10 o'clock on the evening of the murder and no one had been there later.

There was no hope but in flight. Catching up his hat and without having sufficient equanimity to turn off the light over his desk, he left the office and, running to his home, fell into the arms of his wife, trembling like a leaf.

"Charlie," she exclaimed, "for heaven's sake, what is it?"

It was some time before he could sufficiently collect his faculties to tell her what had occurred, and when he did he brought it out in disconnected, gasped sentences.

"Oh, Charlie!" she moaned. "Why didn't you give an alarm as soon as you saw the body?"

"Why didn't I? Because I must have been struck with madness. It was all fated. I shall die on the gallows."

Then the wife pulled herself together. She sat down on a sofa beside her husband with her arms about him and said:

"Probably the murder will not be discovered till morning. Mr. Coolidge was a bachelor, wasn't he?"

"Yes."

"Then it is not likely he will be missed from home during the night. You will not be sent for. You have a choice between two courses—either to go to Mr. Converse's house and tell him all that has occurred or disappear, hoping that during your absence some clew will be found as to the murderer."

Fosdick could not get over the scene between the night watchman and himself and how it would be used against him when brought to trial, and his wife saw that he was so frightened that he would present a bad appearance and be a very poor witness in his own behalf. Feeling that by flight he would not make the matter much worse than it was, she consented to his going. There was plenty of time to prepare a disguise, and she bent her inventive powers to dress him up to that end. He wore a full beard, and she shaved it all off, doing the work herself because his hand trembled so that he could not do it without cutting himself. Then she dressed him in some of her old garments, rouged and powdered him and sent him away, with all the money there was in the house, cautioning him to go to a foreign country before changing his apparel.

Fosdick did not get away from home till near midnight, but when he did he was effectively disguised. His wife did not let him go before arranging a cipher code by which he might communicate with her. A newspaper advertisement informed the couple that a steamer would sail for South American ports at 1 a. m. on a couple of hours, the tide serving at that time.

Fosdick under an assumed name got aboard and before the murder was discovered at 8 o'clock the same morning was well out at sea.

Before officers came to Fosdick's house to arrest him his wife had consulted a lawyer, to whom she had told the whole story and asked his advice as to further procedure. Without either commending or condemning Fosdick's flight the lawyer advised her to disclaim any knowledge of his movements, or, rather, to refuse to answer any questions whatever. Nothing was discovered to cast any suspicion on any one but Fosdick. Indeed, it did not appear that there was any need to look for a clew since his flight was taken as a confession of guilt. Mrs. Fosdick had a long interview with Mr. Converse, but he did not make it known to others whether or not he had gained any information from her. The truth is he did not. The wife did not dare trust any one except her attorney. Indeed, he strictly enjoined that she should trust no one else.

At the interview between Mr. Converse and Mrs. Fosdick the lady represented to him that she had no income; that she had studied bookkeeping and served as a bookkeeper before her marriage. She asked if she might not be given her husband's place. The fact that she had been left destitute and that her husband was a murderer excited a great deal of sympathy for her, in deference to which the head of the firm granted her request, and within a week after her husband's disappearance she entered upon her duties.

During Mrs. Fosdick's term of service with Converse & Co. her husband was in South America and soon after his arrival there secured a position in the interior of Brazil as an accountant on a coffee plantation. He dared not write his wife lest his letters be intercepted and his hiding place become known, but she sent him advertising cards, and he returned them with certain marks on them which she alone knew how to interpret.

Although the details of a plan to exonerate her husband had not been in Mrs. Fosdick's mind at the beginning, there was a plan in embryo. She needed the income she derived from her work, but this was not her prime motive in entering the service of Converse & Co. She hoped by keeping her eyes and ears open and her mouth shut to find a clew to the murderer. If Mr. Coolidge had been murdered by any one connected with the business this might be possible; if he had been murdered by some one on the outside it would not be possible.

Mrs. Fosdick noticed that John Carruthers, the head bookkeeper, kept certain of his books and papers in an old fashioned safe, opened by a key instead of a combination lock. Shortly before the end of the firm's fiscal year she announced to Mr. Erskine, who had taken Mr. Coolidge's place, that she must work nights. He asked her if in view of the tragedy that had occurred in the office she would not be afraid of being there alone. She said that her nerves were strong and she would not mind it.

One night while Mrs. Fosdick was working in the office Mr. Carruthers suddenly appeared there and caught her in the act of locking his safe. He was white as a cloth, and when he spoke to her her voice, in spite of an effort to control it, trembled.

"So it is you who have been tampering with my safe," he said. "I noticed bits of wax on the lock and suspected an impression had been made as a model for a key. I have been on the watch, have caught you and shall report the matter."

"I don't think you will, Mr. Carruthers."

"Why not?"

"Before I tell you I wish you to know that I am armed. The only other person who possessed your secret was doubtless unarmed, and his life was at your mercy."

Carruthers staggered and caught at a desk for support. Mrs. Fosdick took a revolver from under her dress and proceeded:

"My husband worked here the night of the murder and discovered Mr. Coolidge's body. Fearing that he would be held for the murder, he fled. It is time you took his place. The law works slowly and often unsatisfactorily. I am a practical woman and would rather get on without it. I have been through your books and have discovered a shortage of $50,000. Write me a confession that you murdered Mr. Coolidge—the only person who had knowledge of your deficiency—and you may go into concealment."

It did not take the man long to see that he had been offered the only chance there was for his life. He signed a confession, gave it to Mrs. Fosdick, and about the same hour in the morning as Fosdick had gone he sailed away into oblivion.

The next afternoon Mrs. Fosdick went into Mr. Converse's private office and was closeted with him for an hour, at the end of which time she left with means to go to South America and bring her husband home.

Converse & Co., in order to avoid shaking their credit, kept the deficiency a secret. And when Mr. Converse received a letter from Fosdick in South America stating that he and Mrs. Fosdick would make that country their future home it was determined to publish simply a statement that the firm had come upon undisputed evidence that Fosdick was innocent of the murder and to make no effort to find Carruthers.

Fosdick and his wife concluded to remain in South America because there in his new home no one knew that he had fled from justice or, rather, injustice.

Children Like It

It is not an easy matter to get a medicine that children like, or to force them to take one they don't like. Most mothers know that a cough medicine, while palatable, should contain no drug injurious to the child. The great popularity of is explained by the fact that it contains no opium or narcotic of any kind, and at the same time is so pleasant and agreeable to the taste that children like it. For this reason it is a favorite with the mothers of young children.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

The GREAT MOVIE MYSTERY!

TWO MAGNIFICENT 1918 MOTOR CARS and $373.00 in Cash Prizes for Best Replies

Here's a problem that kept an entire audience puzzled a whole evening. Can you solve it?

IT'S so interesting that you will get an hour's stimulating mental excercise from it and no end of amusement. You see the owner of this particular Movie Theatre was very proud of the excellent character of the plays he produced and each night would flash on the screen the names of the famous players who would soon be appearing in his pictures. But on this particular night the operator, wanting to play a little joke on his audience, took the names of the players and so mixed up the letters in each name that they spelt out the funny sentences you see above. Time and time again this film was flashed on the screen only to be demanded back. Many of the audience are still trying to solve the mysterious names. Can you help them?

SEND YOUR SOLUTION OF THE GREAT MYSTERY TO-DAY

These magnificent prizes have been provided by EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, Canada's Greatest Magazine. Frankly, they are being given to further advertise and introduce this famous publication, and you can enter and win the best of them whether you take the magazine or not. Moreover, you will neither be asked nor expected to take it or spend a single penny of your money in order to compete.

Use one side of the paper only and put your name and address (stating Mr., Mrs., or Miss) in the upper right-hand corner. If you wish to write anything but your answers, use a separate sheet of paper.

Three independent judges, having no connection whatever with our publication, will award the prizes, and the answer gaining 150 points will take first prize. You will get 10 points for every name solved correctly (No. 10 being accepted as it is practically given); 20 points will be awarded for general neatness, style, spelling, punctuation, etc.; 10 for handwriting, and 40 for fulfilling the condition of the contest, which consists only of showing a copy of this month's EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, which will be sent to you without cost, to four friends or neighbours who will appreciate Canada's Greatest Magazine and want it to come to them every month. The contest will close at 5 p.m., May 30th, immediately after which the answers will be judged and the prizes awarded. Cash Value of either first or second prize will be given if the winners prefer the cash to the cars. Send your answers to-day.

Toothbrushes.

The toothbrush, now an indispensable article of toilet, is but little older than the American republic itself. Not even Lord Chesterfield used one, for writing to his son in 1754, he said:

"I hope you take great care of your mouth and teeth and that you clean them every morning with a sponge and tepid water with a few drops of arquebusade water dropped into it. I do insist upon your never using those sticks or any hard substance whatever which always rub away the gums and destroy the varnish of the teeth."

In "Henry Esmond" Thackeray made Lord Castlewood spend "a tenth part of his day in the brushing of his teeth and the oiling of his hair," and in doing so the novelist committed a double anachronism. Not only was the toothbrush unknown, but during the first half of the eighteenth century all fine gentlemen wore wigs and had no use for oil on their hair.

Strange Proof of Heredity.

So far as his work is concerned we remember a rascally poet named Richard Savage for one solitary line—that in which he speaks of the "tenth transmitter of a foolish face." It catchily conveys the notion of heredity and suggests the sort of wonderful family likeness of which one has just been told to the Royal Society of Medicine.

The first Earl of Shrewsbury, who died in 1453, was born with a physical peculiarity—the little finger and the finger adjoining on each hand had only one joint, the first two bones being united. The same abnormality affected all the toes except the big ones. Today in a direct masculine descendant of the first earl the same extraordinary formation persists. It was transmitted to him by his father and to his father from his grandfather and has come down unchanged through nearly 500 years, passing through fourteen generations.—London Standard.

Too Good for Law.

The fact that Sir Douglas Haig attained his 56th birthday this summer brings back to mind a story of him a short time back. It is, of course, well known that Sir Douglas is a soldier first, last, and all the time, regarding all other professions as of quite negligible importance, a trait in his character which lends point to the anecdote. He was, it appears, inspecting a cavalry troop, and was particularly struck with the neat way in which repairs had been made in some of the saddles. "Very good work," he remarked to the troop sergeant-major. "Who did it?" "Two of my troopers, sir," was the reply. "You're fortunate to have two such expert saddlers in your troop," said Haig. "As a matter of fact, sir," was the reply, "they're not saddlers, in civil life being lawyers." "Well," ejaculated Sir Douglas, "how men who can do work like that could have wasted their lives over

BRITISH TROOPS IN BERLIN.

Five Thousand Men Sent There by James I.

It was somewhere about the middle of July, 1620, that a British army arrived in Berlin. The account of its doings may not be found in any history book, for the secret papers are safely stored in the state archives of the Prussian capital. At that time Berlin was a small riverside town, but under the able rule of the "Great Elector" it quickly became a place of considerable importance. The object of the British invasion, however, was not one of conquest. It was the result of a promise which James I. had made to his son-in-law, Frederick V. The Elector Palatine Frederick had placed himself at the head of the Protestant Union of Germany. He accepted the crown of Bohemia in 1619, and it was in order to help the newly elected king against the followers of the Lusatians that the British troops were sent to Berlin. The force, which was composed of many penniless but adventure loving nobles recruited from all parts of England and Scotland, was commanded by Sir Andrew Grey.

A letter written by James I. which is to be seen preserved in the State Paper Office, states that "the force was some 5,000 strong, and constituted one of the finest armies ever seen on the battlefield." It goes on to say that the men were clad in red and white Hanoverian uniforms, and were well armed and efficient soldiers. The contingent landed on the Prussian coast early in the spring of 1620, and after a perilous march through the neighboring swamps arrived at Templehof, on the outskirts of Berlin. There it was that the trouble arose.

The Berliners hastily barricaded the streets and prepared to defend the city against the British, but the British had no sinister designs on the city, and after resting lifted their camp and marched into Bohemia, where they joined the army of Frederick V. One, and only one, action was fought—that of Weissenburg, near Prague—which ended so disastrously that Frederick V., the "Winter King," was forced to abdicate, and the campaign of the British, which had been the cause of so much distrust in Prussia, came to an end.—Dundee Advertiser.

SIZE OF HUN ARMIES

GERMANS HAVE LESS THAN FOUR MILLION EFFECTIVES.

Hilaire Belloc Replies to Mr. Gerard's Statement That Prussia Still Has Nine Million Effective Men to Carry on the War—British Expert Gives Estimate of Figures.

THE statement of Mr. Gerard, the former United States Ambassador at Berlin, that Germany has nine million effectives left is riddled by Hilaire Belloc in an article in Land and Water. Mr. Belloc shows how the Germans have gulled their own people and some outsiders by false figures. His article in part says:

The German effectives — in the sense of combatant units—are perfectly well known. They are somewhat over three million (at the most 3¼), organized in divisions and lesser units, the numbers and positions of which have been ascertained and are followed minutely as the war proceeds. Behind these effectives is an organized reserve power of men in depot, now very considerably less than half a million (as which figure it stood ten weeks ago), but to be increased in a very few weeks by the greater part of class 1919, and before the end of the year by nearly the whole of that class.

The word "effectives" is generally used to mean the men organized in units for combatant service — the actual fighting force. For instance, when you are told by a military historian that "Napoleon had a difficulty in keeping up his effectives in 1814," the phrase refers to difficulties in the upkeep of combatant forces in the field—the filling of gaps resulting from death, capture, sickness, and wounds on active service. It is not a word of that precise scientific or technical value which words often acquire after long service, and one can easily conceive that one source of error in the remark we are criticizing might be the loose or double use of the word "effective"; first, to mean mobilized men in general, and next to mean of active service alone.

Whether the word "effectives" has been used first loosely and then technically, thereby creating a confusion, or whether it has been used throughout to mean the fighting forces alone, is of little consequence to a true statement of the position. The statistics of this are well known:

1. Total ration strength of the German army about five and a half million, or a little under.

2. Of this large body, the only part which counts in our calculation of fighting strength is the organized combatant active force, and is about, or perhaps at the present moment a little under, three and a quarter millions. This is what would normally be called the "effectives."

3. Of the balance of somewhat over two millions, and perhaps nearly two million and a quarter, the great bulk are made up either of men who are used to garrison, to supply, etc., but are too old to be used in the field (save a few exceptionally here and there), or of men so affected by war in the way of wounds and illness that they can only be used for similar auxiliary purposes. These last do not count among "definite" losses, that is, they are not out of the army forever, as are the dead, the prisoners, and the discharged from very bad wounds or illness; but then, neither are they capable of active service in the future.

The only part of this balance between the total ration strength (5½ millions) and the army in the field (3½ millions) that counts in the active strength of the enemy is the number Germany has in depot; that was in June last under half a million—excluding class 1919. By some British accounts this reserve is by this time so depleted that the first of class 1919 have begun to appear in the battle—but they are barely due, and it is probable that prisoners of 1919 are forthcoming. This class was expected rather in the beginning of September than at the end of August, and they will probably dribble in during autumn, to the extent of 350,000 or thereabouts. This is not the whole of class 1919. The remainder of it, to the extent of 140,000 or a little more, were put back as immature for later training, and most of them will presumably appear in the winter.

Such is, in rough figures, the situation of the enemy as regards effectives, that is, in combatant numbers. There is no mystery about it. The figures are perfectly well known and generally dealt with all over Europe by those who concern themselves with close and rational study of the campaign. They are based, of course, upon the convergence of many different kinds of information, all grouped under the intelligence department of the various belligerents.

Freak Pigeons on View.

Freak pigeons from all over the world are on exhibit at the Horne Zoological Farm, near Independence, Kansas. One of the pigeons to be exhibited has three legs, three wings, two bills, two heads. The smallest pigeon in the world, and one claimed to be the largest will be exhibited also. A five-legged horse and a number of lions, bears, and deer, all with a freakish trait, will be shown. Some of the pigeons to be exhibited cost as much as $200 a pair, and many of the other birds and animals cost large sums.

TRICKING THE CREDULOUS.

Lures of Gold Brick Schemes For the Small Investors.

Will persons with money never learn how to take care of it? Will they never guard themselves against the horde of tricksters who make a business of taking advantage of the credulous and especially of credulous women?

Bear in mind that no one will make money for you when he can make it for himself. If he offers to give you the key to wealth, suspect him, for such keys are kept by their possessors and are not given away to strangers.

The postoffice a year or two ago showed that over $150,000,000 had been lost by persons who listened to the gold brick schemers, but the game still goes on despite the vigilance of the postoffice department and the passage of protective measures, known as "blue sky laws," by many states.

Will the people never learn to discount the alluring literature which these shysters send out and which is written for them by some of the sharpest and brightest writers of our day, whose services can be easily obtained for a few dollars?

I advise my readers who receive these tempting propositions to send them at once to the postmaster general at Washington for investigation. That is the business of the postoffice department, and it will be only too happy to take up such matters.

Small investors are particularly the victims of these bunko schemes, for the false notion prevails that a man or woman with a small amount of money cannot buy high class investment securities such as successful investors prefer. This is erroneous. An investment can now be made in the best of paying securities with as small an amount as $10 through the partial payment plan, which is readily understood, though the term may sound formidable.

An All Around Boss.

"But," exclaimed the man of delicate sensibilities, "will your conscience permit you to do as you suggest?"

"Look here, friend," answered the New York politician, "I am accustomed to be boss even of my own conscience."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

I know of no pursuit in which more real and important service can be rendered to any country than by improving its agriculture.

The Issue in this Election!

Shall Canada continue to Fight, or shall she slink from the field?

This Election is the most awful crisis in our history:—

Are we going to retain the honor of Canada, or are we to be known to the world as a nation of quitters?

Are we going to retain our place in the world's markets, or are we to lose both foreign credit and trade?

Are we going to place ourselves under the domination of the French Canadians, who, by spurning their duty in this war, made Conscription necessary?

Patriotic Canadians Carry On!

On December 17th these questions will be answered by the voters of Canada at home and overseas. The brave men and women in France who have sacrificed home comfort and loved ones for our liberty, the men and women at home who believe in Canada, believe in the cause and in the maintenance of Canada's honor, will cast their votes to

Support Union Government

The representative men of the two great political parties came together in Union Government to make Canada's effort in the war most effective in the support of our men at the front with additional forces, and to direct and control the industrial and economic life of Canada to the one end of winning the war. An additional 100,000 reinforcements are urgently needed. Union Government will continue to raise the force quickly and impartially under the provisions of the Military Service Act, 1917. Laurier, Bourassa and Quebec think we have done enough, and are in favor of deserting our men, breaking our pledge, ruining the country's credit with our Allies, and trailing Canada's honor in the mud of world opinion. Quebec, having failed to do her duty, is now trying to bend the rest of Canada to her will.

Sailors' Signs.

Strange signs frequently hang from ships which puzzle even dwellers in seaport towns. A basket slung from the mainmast head is a sailor's sign to notify that the cargo has been loaded or discharged, as the case may be, and that the ship is ready to start on her next trip.

A generally mysterious emblem is a broom lashed to a mainmast or bridge railing. This is to signify that the vessel is for sale.

Occasionally a dark blue stripe may be seen running fore and aft on a vessel. As a matter of fact, this is a sign of recent bereavement. Blue is the sailor's mourning, and the stripe of this color takes the place of the black margin or band used by the landsman as a notification of death.

The Sundial.

The sundial is an instrument of great antiquity, for it is referred to in the Bible (Isaiah xxxviii, 8), and it has been estimated that the date of this sundial would be about 700 years before the beginning of the Christian era.

The first sundial of which history distinctly tells us is that of the Chaldean astronomer Berossus, who probably lived about 300 B. C.

Then and for many years afterward the art of constructing sundials to suit any place and situation was an important branch of mathematical study.

The sundial as invented by this Berossus remained in use for many centuries, four of these having been found in Italy in modern times. One which was discovered at Tivoli in 1746 is believed by some to have belonged to Cicero.

The Better Plan.

Teacher—I am teaching your son first aid. Father of the Dullest Boy in Class—Better teach him "second aid" instead, ma'am; he's so durn slow he'd never get there in time to use the first.

Two Relatives.

Bess—Charlie, will you tell me what time it is? I've left my watch at my aunt's. Charlie—Awfully sorry, but I can't. I've left mine at my uncle's.

Welcome News.

Widow—But I have nine children. He—Wretched deceiver! Widow—They are all working. He—Dearest, I—

Very Funny.

Tommy—Do you go to bed very early, Mrs. Peck?

Mrs. Peck—Yes, Tommy, sometimes—when I feel tired.

"You wouldn't go so early if you were married to my father, would you?"

"Oh, Tommy, you funny boy! Why not?"

"'Cause my father told mother that if he were your husband he'd make you sit up!"

Mean Comment.

Grace—Don't tell anybody for the world. See this ring? George all put it on my finger last night. Ethel—Yes, it's nice looking, but it will make a black circle round your finger before you've worn it a week. It did on mine.—London Tit-Bits.

Privileged Swordmakers.

Many of the kings of Spain accorded to the finest swordmakers of Toledo certain privileges, such as exemption from certain imposts and duties appertaining to the sale of swords, the purchase of iron and steel and other primary material.

Order Is Being Restored In The Stricken City

The Death Toll Is Now Estimated At Three Thousand

Raging Blizzard Adds To The Suffering Of People In Halifax

Fires Are All Under Control—Property Damage is Estimated at Twenty-five Millions—Death Toll is Now Placed at Three Thousand—Thousands Homeless.

HELP FROM THE STATES

HALIFAX, December 8.—Fires are all under control. Order is rapidly being restored in the city. Doctors, nurses and supplies have arrived. A blizzard has been raging for the past twelve hours adding more misery. Twenty-five thousand people are homeless, and the property damage is estimated at twenty-five millions. The death toll is now placed at three thousand.

UNITED STATES RELIEF.

WASHINGTON, December 8.—A joint resolution introduced in both Houses of Congress appropriate five million dollars for the relief of sufferers in Halifax.

REPORTED MISSING.

NEW YORK, December 8.—The captain and six of the crew of the steamer Imo, which was in the collision with the Monte Blanc at Halifax, were reported missing to the owners of the vessel yesterday.

DECLARE WAR.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, December 8.—Vote on the declaration of war against Austria-Hungary in the House was 363 to 1. The Socialist members voted against it.

ATTACKS FAILED.

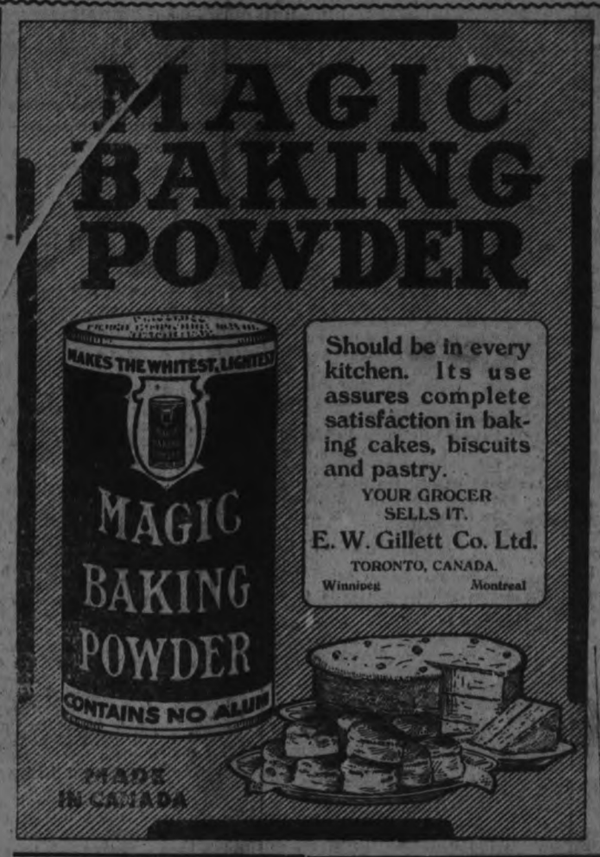
(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, December 8.—Six attempts have been made by the enemy to break the lines at Monte Sisemol, and all have failed.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ST. JOHN, N.B., December 7.—Miss Catherine White and Miss Dorothy McKenzie, both of Boston, students at the St. Vincent Academy, Halifax, were among the first little group of refugees to arrive here from the stricken city. The young women were uninjured. With the horror of memory of horrible scenes she had witnessed in her face, Miss White said: "When the explosion took place we were in our class-room and all of a sudden there came an awful noise and the building shook like a leaf. We thought the electric light or some other power plant had exploded, and about a minute later the full force of the explosion hit us and every window in the building crumbled to nothing but powder. Then come the awful screaming, agonized screams, that came almost simultaneously with the roar of the explosion. They came from all directions.

"We were ordered to leave the building," Miss White continued, "as the Sisters in charge thought a magazine which was situated near us would explode. We all hurried into the woods in the rear of our institution. About noon we returned to the academy, and at that time the city was a mass of flames. Men came to us and asked for God's sake to give them cloth for bandages. We frantically tore up sheets and gave them everything in the place which would be of any use. By this time loads of dying and injured people were being brought to us in waggons, and our Sisters began to assist in dressing their wounds. Big men broke down and sobbed like babies, and women shrieking and moaning, were soon clustered in our damaged but still intact buildings. Many were horribly cut and the doctors who were rushing around had a terrible time trying to sew up their wounds. Women clasping tiny babies to their breasts gazed about with a stunned, pained look that seemed to beseech some one to help them.



CATTLE MARKET

The annual Fat Stock Show of Christmas cattle at the Union Stock Yards yesterday attracted the usual good attendance of farmers and cattle men. The show itself comprised some very fine examples of choice quality beef steers in the "singles" entries. In the classes for car loads quality did not nearly come up to the exhibits of former years. A carload of baby beef steers formed an exception to the general run, and were generally considered a fine exhibit.

COR. GEORGE & CHARLOTTE

CAN TAKE JERUSALEM WHENEVER THEY WISH

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Jerusalem is virtually at the mercy of British troops. Gen. Allenby is in a position to enter the city whenever he desires, according to official despatches. For strategic reasons, the British are now engaged in an encircling movement branching out from Jaffa. Ten Turkish divisions have been routed, and the Moslems cannot attempt any large operations in Mesopotamia, the despatch continues.

The entire Turk position in Palestine is in jeopardy, and British successes have promoted further trouble for the Turks in Arabia

GRAIN MARKET

Oats and corn were weaker yesterday than for some time past. December oats at Chicago closed 3 1-4c below Thursday's close, and at Winnipeg 1c lower. Corn was also 1c lower at Chicago. The announcement that an embargo will be placed on corn east bound from Chicago, beginning December 10th, together with an arrangement for an adequate supply of cars for the movement of the crops, led to the belief that there would be a speedy accumulation of corn. A free selling movement consequently set in, and the market weakened. There was also no let up in the export demand for oats.

"S.O.S." SENT OUT FROM HALIFAX; SOLDIER VOTE SLIPPING FROM BORDEN

Unionist Editors Attempt to Stem Rising Tide of Feeling Against Premier Among Overseas Forces—Proposal Made That Liberal Unionist Papers Send Appeal to England.

The most striking sensation of the present political campaign came to the London Advertiser on Tuesday night when it was made known that the Canadian soldiers overseas are against Borden and the Union Government, and that a cry for the lifeline to save the election overseas has been sent out to the Liberal-Unionist newspapers of the country.

On Sunday, G F. Pearson, publisher of the Halifax Chronicle, a Unionist newspaper supporter, wired to Joseph E. Atkinson, owner of the Toronto Daily Star, and one of the fathers of "Union," a statement to the effect that the soldier vote was likely to be cast "very strongly against Union Government." Mr. Atkinson at once took up the burden and sent copies of the "S.O.S." to some scores of Ontario newspapers, which were believed to be supporters of the Borden administration.

The Advertiser secured one of these telegrams, and, believing that the people should have this glimpse of conditions at the Front and in England as they actually exist, and not as the Borden press would have it appear, gave it publication.

Throwing Out the Lifeline.

Mr. Pearson's telegram to Mr. Atkinson, which Mr. Atkinson passed on to other "Union" newspapers, is as follows:

J. E. Atkinson, The Star, Toronto:

Halifax, Dec. 2.—Trustworthy advices received here from overseas indicate VERY STRONG RESENTMENT AMONG THE SOLDIERS AT THE TREATMENT WHICH THEY HAVE EXPERIENCED FROM PERLEY AND THE HEADQUARTERS STAFF.

This feeling, coupled with war weariness, is LIKELY TO RESULT IN THEIR VOTING VERY STRONGLY AGAINST UNION GOVERNMENT, BORDEN BEING VERY GENERALLY CONDEMNED.

What do you think of the idea of Liberal newspapers supporting the principles of Union Government, joining in a cable message to overseas forces to the effect that our attitude had been dictated by our desire to back up the boys at the Front, and that, we believe, if returned to power, the Union Government will become an effective instrument TO REMEDY THE INTOLERABLE CONDITIONS WHICH HAVE SO FAR OBTAINED Message to be published prominently in all the British papers. If you agree, will you take the matter up with Ontario papers? Am wiring Dafoe (editor of the Winnipeg Free Press). Please advise if possible what you think.

G. FRED PEARSON,
Halifax Chronicle.

Mr. Atkinson's copies of the telegram were accompanied by a letter to each of the "Unionist" editors, in which their support was asked, as well as an immediate reply.

Defeat at Home and Overseas.

So that while the Borden Government may be doomed at home, it is also destined to suffer defeat at the hands of the soldiers, unless the appeal of a few Liberal-Unionist editors can save the day by placing an "advertisement" telling the boys how to vote, in all the English newspapers.

The soldiers, to quote from this "inside" piece of Unionist information, show a "very strong resentment at the treatment which they have experienced from Perley and the hadquarters staff." This is no Liberal canard, but a searching of hearts among those who are most vitally concerned in the re-election of Borden.

Premier Borden Not a Favourite.

The Premier, according to this Unionist confession, "is being very generally condemned" by the soldiers and the result is likely to be a strong one against the Government.

This form of revelations of editors who are permitted to know the real situation, must give the real picture of the political attitude of men at the Front. Despite every effort to claim their vote and to manipulate that vote, the rumble of discontent over the wrongs of the past and the present is already heard across the ocean. "Tones of thunder" sound in the ears of the Bordenites.

And these wrongs, this sense of injustice and unfairness, must be caused by present conditions, for Mr. Pearson in his telegram refers to the future as the time when "Union Government WILL BECOME an effective instrument to remedy THE INTOLERABLE CONDITIONS WHICH HAVE SO FAR OBTAINED."

Two Leaders of Union Government.

Mr. Pearson and Mr. Atkinson are two of the prominent newspaper figures in the forging of the Union Government. Mr. Atkinson's Toronto Star is a paper of circulation and influence, and Mr. Pearson's Halifax Chronicle is the leading newspaper of the Maritime Provinces, and is published in Premier Borden's home city. Mr. Atkinson, while a stout opponent of the old Borden Government, has been very determined in his support of the new, and is regarded as the Toronto chief of the Ontario newspapers supporting Union.

The relayed telegram from Mr. Pearson is said to have been sent out to a great many newspapers. Mr. Dafoe, of the Winnipeg Free Press, was evidently to carry the appeal through the west, and the whole of the Union-Liberal press enlisted to attempt to stay the tide of resentment among the men who volunteered, and to endeavour to furnish some sort of eleventh-hour balm to the jaded spirits of the boys who will not vote as they are told.

Boys at Front Have Answered.

The boys at the Front have answered the great question, according to these Unionist editors. Let the people at home back them up and see them through in reinforcements, pensions, pay and fair treatment that the Borden editors have been denied them!

A united Canadian people at home and overseas to end seven long years of Bordenism!

Give your soldier this Military Razor

The

AutoStrop Razor

in its

New Military Kit

is the real soldier's razor. Why?

Because it is compact and takes up so little room, because it is light and adds so little weight, because it is complete with its trench mirror all ready to be hung up on the nearest nail—but especially because it is the famous AutoStrop Razor, the only razor that is self-maintaining. It is the only razor that

Sharpens its own blades Automatically and keeps them free from rust. This is a big thing because the blades cannot get dull. The 12 blades you get with the AutoStrop Razor will give you more than 500 clean, comfortable shaves. It strops, shaves and is cleaned, all without taking apart.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

Accompanied by Baker, Duvall quickly mounted the steps and rang the bell. At first there was no answer, although they could hear the sound of the bell tinkling mournfully inside. A second summons brought no greater response. At the third a woman's head appeared in one of the upper windows, and they heard a shill and not over pleasant voice asking them what they wanted.

"I have an important message for Miss Marcia Ford," Duvall replied pleasantly. "I must see her at once."

"Miss Ford moved away from here three months ago," the woman snapped.

"Will you please give me her exact address?" the detective exclaimed, somewhat taken aback.

"I don't know it. She did not say where she was going. Good night!" A moment later the window above them was closed with a slam.

The two men stood staring at each other in the utmost disappointment. They had expected a more favourable outcome of their expedition.

"How long has she been with you?" Duvall asked, turning to his companion.

"I don't know. Certainly over three months, or we shouldn't have this address on our books. I suppose, when she changed it, she omitted to notify us. What are we going to do now?"

"There isn't anything we can do, until morning. If Miss Marcia Ford reports wor work to-morrow, and you see that she is the woman who fainted in the theatre to-night, have her arrested at once. If she doesn't report for work, at least we shall know that she is the woman we are after."

"That isn't much consolation," Mr. Baker grumbled.

"I don't agree with you. Having the woman's name, knowing her appearance, we are certain to catch her sooner or later. And in the meanwhile, I do not think that she will attempt anything further so far as Miss Morton is concerned. We are too close on her trail, for that."

"I hope you are right," said the motion picture man. "Well, I guess I'll go along home. I'll be at the studio first thing in the morning, however, and I suppose you will be there too."

"By all means. I am most curious to see whether our reasoning to-night has been correct."

"Shall I take you to your hotel in my car?"

"No, thanks. I'll take a taxi. Good night."

A few moment later, Duvall was speeding up Fifth Avenue, his brain still puzzling over the curious contradictions which the events of the night had developed. On one point he felt secure, however. He was certain that the woman who had so narrowly escaped him earlier in the evening would not soon again attempt anything against Ruth Morton.

Arrived at his hotel, he asked for his key. The man behind the desk, with a queer look, handed him along with it a slip of paper. On it was written: "Mrs. Bradley wishes Mr. John Bradley to come to her room at the moment he returns.

"When was this message left?" the detective asked.

"Oh—nearly two hours ago. The time is stamped on the back of it, sir."

Duvall turned the card over, and saw from the stamp on the other side that Mrs. Morton had sent for him at half past ten.

"The message was phoned down by the lady herself," the clerk added, by way of explanation.

Duvall went up in the elevator, and a few moment later, was knocking at the door of Mrs. Morton's suite.

The latter herself appeared in the doorway. She was pale and agitated.

"Come in, Mr. Duvall," she said. The detective entered, closing the door behind him.

"What is wrong, Mrs. Morton?" he asked.

"There has been another warning—a dreadful one," the older woman exclaimed, her voice trembling. "It came a little after ten."

"What was it?" Duvall's voice was almost as strained as that of the woman before him. Her words came to him as a complete surprise. Had all the work of the evening, then, been wasted?

"At a little after ten," Mrs. Morton said, slowly, "I sent my maid Nora out for some medicine for my daughter. She went to a drug store some three blocks away. As she turned to the hotel, she saw a young woman standing near the entrance, apparently watching those who went in and out. As soon as the maid came up to the doorway, the woman stepped up to her, and thrusting a package into her hands, said quickly, 'Give this to Miss Ruth Morton. It is from the studio.' Then she walked away at once.

"Nora, as she tells me, did not know just what to do. You will remember that while she realizes from our presence here under an assumed name, that something is wrong, she knows little or nothing of the circumstances surrounding Ruth's terrible persecution. Hence she foolishly took both the medicine and the package the woman had given her, to my daughter."

"Yes—yes—go on," Duvall exclaimed, seeing Mrs. Morton pause.

"Ruth opened them both. I was in the next room at the moment. Suddenly I heard a cry, and on rushing in, found her standing in the centre of the room, holding a small bottle in one hand, and staring at it in the utmost consternation. In her other hand was a sheet of paper, which, as I subsequently found, had been wrapped around the bottle, inside the outer brown-paper cover.

"The bottle was labeled 'carbolic-acid.' Here is the sheet of paper," Mrs. Morton, with trembling fingers, extended a half sheet of none-paper toward the detective.

Duval took it and read the typewritten words upon it.

"We gave you thirty days. Now we give you seven. Drink this, and save yourself from a horrible fate." The death's head signatrue ended the message.

"Ruth has been very ill ever since," Mrs. Morton added dreadfully. "If she is not better in the morning, I shall call in a doctor. She felt herself absolutely safe, here, and was recovering her cheerfulness. Now all her fears have returned with redoubled force. I am terribly worried about her—terribly worried." Taking out her handkerchief, the poor woman wiped the tears from her eyes. "How could these people have known we were here?" she whispered in an awed voice. "It seems like the work of fiends."

There was little that the detective could say in reply. Even to his sober judgment, there came a suggestion of the uncanny, the supernatural. The woman in the cab had escaped at half past nine, presumably quite ignorant of the location of Mrs. Morton's retreat. Half an hour later, the campaign of intimidation was renewed with greater vigor than before.

"I'm afraid, Mrs. Morton," he said, "that it will be necessary for you to remain with your daughter every minute of the time, for a day or two. By then, I am convinced that we shall have laid our hands on the guilty parties. Good-night."

Duvall rose very early the following morning and drove at once to the studio, but easily as he was, Mr. Baker was there before him.

The latter was seated in his office, poring over a mass of reports, when Duvall entered. He glanced up, rose, shook hands nervously, then motioned to a chair.

"Nothing new yet," he said. "My stenographer, Miss King, is here. Neither Miss Green nor Miss Ford have yet arrived, but it is still a little early. Miss King came before her usual time, as she had some reports to get out that she could not complete last night. We have at least fifteen minutes to wait."

Duvall told him to proceed with his work, and drawing a newspaper from his pocket, made an effort to interest himself in it. In this, however, he was not very successful. Time after time his mind would wander from the printed sheet before him to the strange events even of the night before. The thing that puzzled him most was, how did the persecutors of Miss Morton discover her new address so soon? Was the woman who had handed the package to Nora, the maid the same one that had vanished from the cab? He remembered that it had been about nine o'clock when they left the Grand Theatre, and perhaps half-past when he had gone into the drug store in Sixth Avenue to get the aromatic spirits of ammonia. Had the woman gone directly from the cab to the hotel? She must have done so, without much loss of time, in order to reach there by ten o'clock. How had she known the address? He knew very well that he had given it to the cabman, when they started away from the theatre. Had the supposedly fainting woman overheard his words? If she had, and had so promptly acted upon them, she was far more clever and determined than her appearance would seem to warrant. He revolved the matter endlessly in his mind, waiting for Mr. Baker to announce that the time had come, when Miss Ford's or Miss Green's arrival or non-arrival would indicate which of the two, if either, was the woman they sought.

Suddenly the bell of the telephone on Mr. Baker's desk rang sharply. He answered it, then turned to Duvall.

"Miss Green, the telephone operator, is at her desk," he said. "Would you like to take a look at her?"

"Yes." The detective arose, and followed Mr. Baker into the corridor.

The switchboard of the building was located at the end of the hall, in a small bare room. When they reached it, Mr. Baker spoke to a dark-haired, rather stout, woman who sat at the desk.

"Miss Green," he said, "if any calls come in for Mr. Duvall, he will be in my office." Then he went back along the corridor.

"She certainly isn't the woman we are after," he remarked to Duvall, as soon as they were out of earshot.

"No. It must be Miss Ford," the detective replied.

"Suppose we go to the developing and finishing department," Baker suggested. "It is time all our people were on hand. Mr. Emmett, who is in charge there, can tell us about Miss Ford."

They crossed to the other side of the building, and entered a small office. A bald-headed man sat at a littered desk.

"Mr Emmett," Baker said, "shake hands with Mr. Duvall. He is looking for a young woman in the finishing department. Miss Marcia Ford. Has she come in yet?"

Rheumatic Aches

Drive them out with Sloan's Liniment, the quick-acting, soothing liniment that penetrates without rubbing and relieves the pain. So much cleaner than messy plasters or ointments; it does not stain the skin or clog the pores. Always have a bottle in the house for the aches and pains of rheumatism, gout, lumbago, strains, sprains, stiff joints and all muscle soreness.

Sloan's Liniment KILLS PAIN

PAIN? NOT A BIT! LIFT YOUR CORNS OR CALLUSES OFF

No humbug! Apply few drops then just lift them away with fingers.

This new drug is an ether compound discovered by a Cincinnati chemist. It is called freezone, and can now be obtained in tiny bottles as here shown at very little cost from any drug store. Just ask for freezone. Apply a drop or two directly upon a tender corn or callus and instantly the soreness disappears. Shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it off, root and all, with the fingers.

Not a twinge of pain, soreness or irritation; not even the slightest smarting, either when applying freezone or afterwards.

This drug doesn't eat up the corn or callus, but shrivels them so they loosen and come right out. It is no humbug! It works like a charm. For a few cents you can get rid of every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as painful calluses on bottom of your feet. It never disappoints and never burns, bites or inflames. Genuine freezone is sold only in these small bottles packed in a little sealed wood case, bearing a yellow wrapper. Beware of imitations.

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

Havelock, Nov. 20th, 1917.

Royal Titles Confusing.

The changes in royal titles call attention, inevitably, to a few of the complications that the war has brought with it. There were few princes more popular than was Prince Christian Victor, who died as a gallant British officer in South Africa; but his brother, Prince Albert, is fighting in the German army. The Duke of Albany is one of the "enemy princes" with whom Parliament is concerned just now, whose banner has been removed from St. George's Chapel; but his sister is the wife of Prince Alexander of Teck, who is a British officer, and now becomes an earl.

We—or, at least, those of us whose memories are not uncomfortably long—are inclined to forget that Prince Christian's German title may almost be described as German by accident. He was a German prince when he married Queen Victoria's daughter, certainly; but he had only been German for three years at that time. Schleswig-Holstein was the cause of the Prussian attack on Denmark more than half a century ago, and until that attack succeeded Prince Christian was a Dane.

Saved Seven Germans.

Commander Hubert Henry de Burgh, R.N., has been awarded the D. S. O. for rescuing seven Germans under heavy fire. The official record of his heroic conduct is as follows: "For his services in command of a destroyer in the action with enemy destroyers off the Belgian coast on June 5, 1917, when one of the enemy's destroyers, S20, was sunk. Cdr. de Burgh succeeded in saving seven men of S20's crew while under heavy fire from the shore batteries and with three German seaplanes hovering overhead. Compare this action to that of the Germans.

King Charles a Saint.

The lower house of convocation, by 65 votes to 26, passed a resolution moved by the Dean of Canterbury, asking the upper house to consider a proposal that the name of King Charles, the martyr, should be reinserted as a black letter saint. Red letter saints, so cal'ed from their names being printed in the calendar in red letters, are the chief saints, the black letter ones being those of minor importance.

Cough Nearly Gone! in 24 Hours

That's the usual experience with this home-made remedy. Costs little—try it.

Anyone who tries this pleasant tasting home-made cough syrup, will quickly understand why it is used in more homes in the United States and Canada than any other cough remedy. The way it takes hold of an obstinate cough, giving immediate relief, will make you regret that you never tried it before. It is a truly dependable cough remedy that should be kept handy in every home, to use at the first sign of a cough during the night or day time.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 55 cents and you have 16 ounces of the most effective remedy you ever used.

The quick, lasting relief you get from this excellent cough syrup will really surprise you. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

The Man Who Has Not Slept is Irritable and Nervous

SLEEPLESSNESS, like insanity, is greatly on the increase. Modern life, with its hurry and worry and noise, brings an enormous strain on the brain and nerves.

More and more people are crowding into the cities, living huddled together in poorly-ventilated houses, and taking insufficient natural exercise. The blood becomes thin and vitiated, and with a little extra strain the nerves collapse.

The man who has not slept is irritable, vacillating, and lacks self-control. He is in no condition to fight the battles of life. He is worried, digestion fails, and so the exhausted nerves are further starved.

There may be no pain, no marked symptoms, but you cannot sleep, and without sleep it is impossible for the nervous system to restore the nervous energy wasted by the process of living.

The temptation to depend on sleeping powders or tablets must be fought off if you would avoid catastrophe. Means of reconstructing the starved nerve cells must be sought. Since the digestive system fails to supply nourishment to the blood and nerves it is necessary to employ such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to instil new strength and energy into the tired nerves.

He is Worried-Digestion Fails--The Nerves Are Starved

The Food Cure

Mr. Harry Edward Trotman, First Street, Collingwood, Ont., writes:—"It is with great pleasure I write to tell you the splendid results I have secured through the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Before I commenced this treatment I suffered from nervousness, was restless, easily worried, had frequent headaches, and neuralgic pains through my body, especially in the back. I could neither sleep nor eat well, my circulation was poor, and the heart action seemed weak. I also had attacks of indigestion. I tried several different remedies, but could not gain permanent relief. At last I started taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and this treatment, together with an occasional Kidney-Liver Pill, worked wonders in my case. Five boxes of Nerve Food cured me. My wife has also derived great benefit from the same treatment, and we shall never be without these medicines in the house as long as we can get them."

Nature can only use certain ingredients to rebuild the wasted nerve cells, and these are found in happy combination in this great food cure. Gently and certainly this reconstructive treatment increases the nerve force in the human system, until the organs resume their functions. Digestion improves, appetite is sharpened, you eat well, sleep well and find your old-time vigor returning.

You have only to follow the reports in the newspapers to learn of the great good Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is accomplishing among persons who have suffered from sleeplessness, nervous headaches, indigestion and forebodings of the future which border on insanity.

KILLED TWENTY MEN.

Terrible Havoc Caused by a Single Chance Shot.

"There is no romance left in war; it is a dirty business, and every one of us who is in it is determined that when we finish this war, it shall be so thoroughly finished that nobody will ever start another."

Thus writes a British transport captain in a letter to an English newspaper, describing how he had just lost twenty of his men, although they were nearly a dozen miles behind the front, through a shell from a German long-range naval gun fifteen miles away. The shell was a chance shot. Here is the captain's story:

"We have descended on a war of stink-pots, of spectacled chemists leering horribly in obscure laboratories while they concoct the tortures of the damned, of medieval poisons, of flying death from the clouds. It is less like war than some elemental devilishness which man is as powerless to control as he was the volcanoes which overwhelmed Pompeii or St. Pierre. It is not alone in the forefront of the battle where men stand face-to-face, but in quiet places far back, when death flings himself with outrageous violence and suddenness. The dead men have never seen their foe; there has been no contest, no combat.

"I witnessed an incident to-day the like of which I have seen before, the like of which is happening every day along these hundreds of miles of battle line. It is as well you should bear of it who have a quiet roof over your heads, who wait placidly under your umbrellas at the street corner for your tram car.

"It was at a cross roads, and a vast amount of traffic was moving by it, guns and wagons and panting motor lorries and officers on horseback and ambulances. Far in front hung motionless in the air the long row of balloons that marked the circle of the front.

"It endured perhaps but two seconds before it precipitated that frightful tragedy towards which it was moving, but every second was an age. Every man who heard it held his breath. "Now the whistle changed to a sudden plunging roar. A quarter of a ton was falling headlong through space and yet invisible. A rocking crash, and up from the road leaped a volcano of black earth and smoke and stones. The whole air filled itself with shrieking bits of metal, whirling swathes of dust, and choking fumes. Horses were plunging, men cursing. Above all rang the screams of mortal agony.

"I gazed with horror towards the spot and saw a wagon lying with its wheels up in the ditch, its horses lying motionless nearby. In the grass by the roadside lay some inert figures of men whose absolute motionlessness told its own tale.

"One thought of the homes suddenly emptied far away, of mothers and wives and children that would wait in vain. And it has all been done by the unseen hand that had just pulled a string fifteen miles away."

I wonder what's wrong with my Tea?

My! This certainly IS good Tea

The woman on the left bought some "cheap" tea. You can see she's not pleased. She's sorry now she tried to save a few cents by buying the "cheap" tea.

How different with the woman on the right. The fragrance of her tea tells her how good it is. She paid a few cents more for Red Rose Tea than the other woman paid for her "cheap" tea—and besides Red Rose will prove more economical in the end!

Because of the rich flavor and vigorous strength of the Assam teas of which Red Rose chiefly consists, it will make 250 cups to the pound, or about a fifth of a cent a cup. So cheap that the very poorest can afford it, so good that the rich can find nothing better.

Value of Cinders.

Not so many years ago great heaps of cinders were piled up, often dumped into low places where new earth was needed. Manufacturing concerns were glad to get rid of the accumulations. But now the cinders are in great demand for use in the foundation for cement and concrete work. They form a perfect drainage material, and it has been found that frost acts very lightly on them. Furthermore, concrete work in which cinders are used is said to be of extreme durability. When cinders are ground and mixed with cement the mass becomes very hard.

Hanging the Flag.

When a flag pole is in a slanting or horizontal position if the rope holding the upper corner of the flag be pulled very tight and the rope holding the lower corner be slackened somewhat, thus allowing the flag to drop slightly away from the pole, the wind will spill out of it. This will do much to prevent the flag from wrapping around the pole.

A little experimenting will show how much to slack away the lower corner. It depends on the size of the flag and the angle of the pole.

Panama Canal Forts.

The fortifications for the defense of the Panama canal consist of seacoast forts at each end of the canal and field fortifications around the locks. The object of the seacoast forts at the canal terminals is to prevent an enemy in time of war from entering and blocking the canal by sinking vessels in it.

Old Age on Saturn.

We are reminded that if human beings lived on the planet Saturn they would be old at three years of age—not that life is any swifter or the cares of maturity any more pressing. It is merely because Saturn is so far from the sun that it takes nearly thirty years, according to the earth's measurement of time, to travel in its orbit round the sun.

Odd Bits From Novels.

"He fixed the jury with his eye," says a novelist. A poor thing to fix a jury with, truly.

"He stood as if carved from stone," says another writer. No wonder! He had just been chiseled out of his rocks.

Caught by Cupid.

"I hear your brother went on a fishing trip with a fashionable party to Florida."

"Yes. I told him he was making a mistake to go on such a fishing trip."

"How so?"

"He got hooked."

How He Pleased Them.

"The paper states that you pleased a big audience at the banquet last night."

"The paper is wrong. I did not appear."

"Um. I guess the paper is right."

Laboring toward distant aims sets the mind in a higher key and puts us at our best.

The Victoria Cross.

Since the Victoria Cross was first instituted, sixty-odd years ago, as a reward for conspicuous valor in the Crimea, the bestowals have not amounted to 1,000. Five hundred and twenty-two was the number of the recipients before the beginning of the present war, and during the last three years, 317 men have won the most coveted of all decorations. The roll of the Victoria Cross will probably have been still further lengthened before the close of the war, though even now the number bestowed since 1914 is larger than the awards of the Crimea and the Mutiny put together.

Unfortunately there are many men who deserve the Victoria Cross and who somehow do not get it. There was an instance of a Tommy who insisted on taking water over a fire-swept bit of ground to some comrades, who had been cut off from the British lines. There was apparently no possibility of supplies reaching them; their plight was evident, and this soldier resolved to meet it. He was warned by his officer what it would certainly mean for him, but nothing would turn him from his purpose. He made the journey, carrying the water bags not once, but several times, and he got through unscathed. So far he is still plain Private So-and-so, without a V. C. to his name.

Effect of Discipline.

"Just see how the chickens mind the old hen, Robby," said Mrs. Norris to her son. "Watch them run to her when she calls them."

"I suppose she sat on them when they were little," remarked the infant phenomenon reflectively.

Clever Child.

"You can't eat your cake and have it."

"Well, ma, if I want cake to look at there's plenty in the baker's window."

WAS OFF WORK 4 or 5 MONTHS A YEAR WITH CONSTIPATION

If the truth were only known you would find that over one-half of the ills of life are caused by allowing the bowels to get into a constipated condition.

When the bowels become constipated the stomach gets out of order, the liver does not work properly, and then follows the violent sick headaches, the sourness of the stomach, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They work on the bowels gently and naturally, and will cure the worst cases of constipation.

Mr. Sylvester Clements, Galt, Ont., writes: "I desire to express my heartfelt thanks for what Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have done for me. I have been suffering from a bad stomach and constipation and would be off work 4 or 5 months a year. I was hardly able to be inside without getting a severe headache. I tried doctors' medicine and other remedies, but got no relief until a friend advised me to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. Now I can work inside without any headaches or pain. I would not be without your remedy for anything. I write this so that anyone suffering the same as I did may use them and be cured."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

YOUR OWN PERSONALITY.

Preserve It and Be Yourself and Not Somebody Else.

How hard do you fight to hold on to your personality?

You are willing to fight to save the money you have earned, to hold your job or to get a better one. You fight to keep your external possessions, but do you fight to keep yourself?

Without a personality, an individuality, it is impossible to achieve any great success, no matter how successful you may appear for a time. The success that comes from having some strong man's personality working through you is not permanent or genuine.

When Napoleon was fighting Austria in 1797, on the very soil where the Italian battle lines stretch today, he discovered that his own future depended on the overthrow of the royalist party back in Paris. He sent a young officer named Augereau to Paris to accomplish a revolution. Augereau succeeded in bringing about what Napoleon desired. But neither Napoleon nor history has ever given Augereau any credit. He deserved none. It was Napoleon, working through Augereau, who overthrew the royalists. Augereau lacked personality, individuality. That is why Napoleon chose him as a tool.

Trilby, singing under the spell of Svengali, entranced her hearers; but, with Svengali's influence gone, she was the same unsuccessful, lonely Trilby. Svengali chose her as a victim of his influence because her personality was not strong enough to resist him. He stole her personality, just as he might have stolen her little money or her old blue military coat.

Dr. Johnson was so strong a character that he unwittingly overwhelmed Boswell, and Boswell spent the remainder of his life tagging around after Johnson, worshiping him and writing down all he said.

But the Napoleons, the Svengalis and the Dr. Johnsons are not the only influences in this world that rob us of ourselves.

For you the world is really divided into two parts. One part is the multitude; the other part is you. The multitude tries to take away your individuality and make you part of itself. If it succeeds your life is bound to be a failure, for there can be no success for the young man or young woman who permits the multitude to absorb him.

Your personality is really all you have in this world.

If you think the mob's thoughts or let the mob think yours, if you live the mob's life and have the mob's feelings, you don't own anything. There isn't any you.

As you look yourself over are you permitting anything to crowd you out of yourself?—W. G. Shepherd in Washington Star.

No Time For Her.

Physician—Your case is such, madam, that time alone will effect a cure. Mrs. Randall—Then it is hopeless, for I never have even five minutes.—Life.

He Knew Her.

Mrs. Gabbie—I met Mr. Brown today while I was shopping. Her Husband—That so? What did you have to say?

ONE WAY TO WOO SLEEP.

Travel In Memory Some Road You Knew Well In Childhood.

It is hard for me to remember now that my knowledge of the sleepy road, gained so many years ago, came only through the chance bit of advice dropped by a wise, kind, weary old doctor as he shuffled at midnight down the corridor of the silent hospital, says the Atlantic Monthly.

Whatever was the errand of life or death that had called him in such haste, he had time to stop and give me a friendly word, although I, a small and incorrigibly sleepless patient, was sitting bolt upright among the pillows in defiance of all his orders and was staring wide eyed into the hot, pain haunted dark.

"You think you are never going to be able to sleep again, don't you?" he observed. "Well, shut your eyes and do just what I tell you. Think of some road that you know well, a good long road that winds and turns and shows you water and woods and hills. Keep your eyes tight shut and travel along it in memory. Go as slowly as you can, recall every sight and sound and perfume as you pass by.

"I have such a road of my own, the one I used to walk to school when I was eight years old. I have started out on it a hundred times when I thought I could not sleep, but I never get very far. I come just about to the old stone bridge over Damon's creek or perhaps to the swimming hole, where the willows dip into the brown water, but I never reach the end."

FACING THE CAMERA.

Don't Dress Up and Don't Pose When Having a Picture Taken.

"There are many things I would like to say to the woman who intends having her picture taken," said a famous photographer the other day.

"Many women come to me and say: 'Of course you prefer taking actresses. They must have many advantages over those women who never have time but to give an occasional glance in their mirrors.' This is entirely a mistake. The conscious pose never makes a satisfactory portrait. I would say emphatically to the woman who goes to have her photograph made not to rehearse her pose and facial expression beforehand.

"I always find it difficult to impress on the woman coming to my studio that clothes and jewels are of absolutely no account in a photograph. If a woman comes to be photographed in the clothes she is used to wearing she will feel at ease and therefore look her best.

"One of the curses of our present day civilization is the ever changing question of fashion. How much more civilized were the Japanese, who realized that the kimono was perhaps the most perfect dress for women at all times—who only varied it with different bread and girdles. The photograph that concerns itself with clothes is soon out of fashion, and no matter how good a likeness of the face has been obtained, the picture is grotesque in a few years because the clothes are passe."

The Professor Worried.

The absent minded professor from the university town was in Indianapolis attending a convention. While in the city he took a tour of the larger department stores. In one of them he was much perplexed.

He read the sign over the door of the elevator:

"This car express to fifth and sixth floors. Up only."

Absently he read the sign again. Then the car door opened.

"I would like to know," he asked the elevator boy, "if this elevator goes only up, how on earth did you get down here?"

The elevator boy grinned, frowned, scrutinized the man closely and then said in a dignified voice, "Oh, I just came down.

Putting the Cat Out at Night.

The practice of turning the cat out of doors at night is as cruel as it is unnecessary. No animal is fonder of warmth and comfort, and the pet's happiness certainly is not increased by a night spent outside in cold and dampness.

If as much energy was exhausted in keeping the cat indoors as too often is expended in putting her out, how great would be the boon to human nerves and unfortunate wild things! All felines are normally nocturnal, and it is at night, if ever, that a curb on their activities is needed.—Lee S. Crandall, in "Pets."

True Economy.

There are great joys in practicing true economy in the right spirit. True economy, you see, is not abstinence from necessary things—not at all. The joys of true economy are for those who make the most of what they have; who, finding what may be theirs, proceed to the extraction of the greatest benefit from what is within reach.

Too Much Flirting.

First Co-ed—Why, Doris, how tired your eyes look!

Tired One—Yes, my dear; I rolled them too much this evening.—Syracuse Orange Peel.

When a Bear "Charges."

"Bang!" rang out a shot. "Spatt" went a bullet against the rocks a hundred feet perhaps from the bear. "Bang!" in diminuendo came the echo from the cliffs opposite.

He had been keeping his rifle—he did not know it—at full cock, and, happening unconsciously to tighten his finger on the trigger, the weapon had responded as described. At that moment I could cheerfully have kicked him off the cliff and emptied five soft nosed .401 bullets into his carcass, but I contented my self with an expletive or two and turned my attention to the bear.

I saw a most interesting scene. The animal had been totally unaware of our presence, nor had he yet made us out. He had heard merely the report of the rifle and the spat of the bullet, and the echoes had confused him. For a few moments he stood perfectly still, then ran right in our direction for perhaps thirty yards and hid in a little patch of brush about the size of a small room. His behavior throws light upon many alleged "charges" made by bears whose only thought is escape.—Paul L. Haworth in Scribner's.

Railway Journeys of Long Ago.

It was only the adventurous who dared to face a railway journey in 1823. A writer of that time commenting on the proposed line to Woolwich, remarked, "We would as soon expect the people of Woolwich to suffer themselves to be fired off upon one of Congreve's rockets as trust themselves to the mercy of such a machine going at such a rate." The third class carriage of those days was a thing of horror. "It had no roof and no seats," writes J. C. Wright. "Into this the passengers were packed and had to stand during the whole journey or if there was room to squat on the floor, exposed to the rain or sun and bombarded by sparks emitted from the engine. Second class passengers were kindly advised to provide themselves with gauze spectacles and to sit as far from the engine as possible."—London Spectator.

Worry Is Imagination.

We worry because we are able through a power called self consciousness to place ourselves through our minds for the time being either back somewhere in the past without carrying our physical bodies with us, for if we could take our bodies with us we would be in the present again, and then worry is impossible; or, we use our imagination and project the future entirely apart from our bodies, for we cannot project our bodies into the future, and if we could we would again be in the present, says the "Book of Wonders." We worry over going to have an operation performed, which may or may not be dangerous, but quite necessary. We may still think we worry when the operation begins, but as soon as that occurs the time becomes the present, and though we may fear, we cannot worry in the present.

Spain and the Mustache.

The home of the mustache is in Spain, and here is the history of its origin: After the Moors first invaded the country the Christian and Moslem population became so mixed that it was difficult to say which were Moors and which Spaniards. The Spaniards then hit upon a means by which they could at once distinguish their brethren. They did not shave their lips any longer, and they allowed a tuft of hair to grow below their under lips, so that their beards formed the rude outline of a cross. Thus the mustache became a symbol of liberty and fraternity.

Re-Creation Proven

YOU see here an illustration of a test that Mme. Verlet, the greatest coloratura soprano of to-day, has made before thousands of people in many cities. It consists of singing in direct comparison with her own voice on the NEW EDISON. Audiences and music-critics alike have admitted that there is no difference between the real and the re-created voices.

The "tone-test" described above has been made by thirty other artists, before nearly a million people, and always with the same result.

The NEW EDISON alone can sustain such a test. No "talking-machine" would dare make the attempt.

It cost Edison almost a million dollars and five years' effort to put real re-created music (not a mechanical reproduction) within the reach of every home.

"The Big Wind."

"The big wind" is a name given in Ireland to a terrible windstorm which began on the night of January 6, 1839. In Limerick, Galway, and Athlone hundreds of houses were blown down, and hundreds more were burned by the wind spreading the fires of those blown down. Dublin suffered severely. No Irishman knows this storm by any other name than "the big wind." "The night of the big wind" forms an era; things date from it; such and such a thing happened "before the big wind, when I was a boy"; or it happened "a twelvemonth after the big wind, when your uncle Dennis was but a lad." The use of the name seems a sort of survival of oral tradition as opposed to written history.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Find Ninth Century Arms.

In the course of some excavations at Horncastle, Lincolnshire, some workmen unearthed a well-preserved human skeleton and weapons, of the Anglo-Saxon period or the ninth century A.D. There is a long sword, a large spear, and a smaller one, all of iron. The sword is remarkable for its length and is double-edged. Its total length is 33 inches, and it is 1¾ in. wide and tapers at the top to accommodate the handle. The spears are both socketed, and the large one, still containing the rivets which hold the shaft, is 10¾ inches long, somewhat lozenge-shaped, and 1¾ inches across at the broadest part. The smaller one is more knife-shaped, and is 7⅛ inches in length by ¾ inch in width. It was very unusual for the Anglo-Saxons to be buried with their swords.

Must Fulfill Promises.

The British National Amalgamated Union of Shop Assistants have secured a settlement in an important case. A firm promised certain payments to their staff who attested and joined the colors, but when these payments were claimed by one of the employes they contended the word "staff" meant only the officials and not the general body of employes. The firm's solicitor offered £20 in full settlement, but this was refused, and eventually a settlement was arrived at for £87 10s.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Overcoming Nervousness.

To remedy the condition of nervousness, jumpiness at sudden noises and loss of sleep, carefully correct the diet by taking three good plain meals a day at regular hours and masticating all food well. One should be a good meat meal. A cold sponge down or tepid bath every morning before breakfast, followed by a brisk rubdown, will also help, with brisk outdoor exercise daily. Internally take a good tonic containing strychnia for the nerves and iron for the system generally. For supper try biscuits and a cup of cocoa made with cream or plenty of milk. Sleeplessness may generally be overcome by taking a warm bath just before going to bed.

A Bit of His Own Back.

One of the released Sinn Feiners tells the following, says London Life and Society. While he was in prison his wife wrote and said that she was in great trouble over the difficulty she experienced in getting her land dug up. The prisoner at once saw his opportunity of getting his own back at the expense of the Saxon and replied, telling her to ask certain neighbors to give her a helping . . . but to be careful not to dig too deep as arms and ammunition were buried in his land. As he well knew the letter would be read by the authorities, who at once ordered his land to be dug up by the police. They dug and dug, but found no arms, and at last gave up their job in despair. The next letter he received from his wife informed him that the police had been and dug up his farm "illigant," and, what was more to the point, they never asked for one penny for their labor!

CHILL STARTS COLD

WAS SICK FOUR WEEKS

JUST ABLE TO CRAWL ABOUT

Mr. Weldon T. Hawkes, Curryville, N.B., writes: "Last spring I was taken very ill with a severe cold. I got wet and it started with a chill. I was sick four weeks, and was just able to crawl about. People all said I had inflammation of the lungs, and I think I did. I told a friend to get me two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before the first one was taken my cold and cough were broken up, and the second did its work completely. I am raising a family and find that it is a good medicine for the children."

There is no remedy that will cure stubborn colds or coughs, the kind that won't let go, like Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

It allays the inflammation, soothes the irritation, heals the diseased mucous lining of the lungs and bronchial tubes, and rids the system completely of all the bad effects of lingering coughs and colds.

There are so many spurious "Pine" preparations on the market that you should see you get "Dr. Woods" when you ask for it.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c.; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Americans Join Canadians In Opening New Food Sources

American Settlers arriving at Calgary.

AMERICANS are not only eagerly plowing their own farms and back yards but are going to Canada in large numbers to help their cousins north of the border reduce the untilled acreage.

Canada has many more square miles of land than the United States and the problem of putting her land under crop and of getting her crop to elevators and tidewater, is always a giant's task.

Figures from the Canadian Pacific railway's land department show that seven times as many Americans crossed the border this year to take up Canadian Pacific land as in 1916, and that these new settlers bought three times as much land.

C. S. Noble, an American, holds the record for growing the largest Canadian wheat crop on his 5,000 acre farm at Nobleford, Alberta. He made a profit of $100,000 last year and will this season have under cultivation 3,000 acres.

Many settlers are this year clearing their land of all indebtedness. Two seasons of crops does it these days. They are thus accomplishing in two years what they planned to do in twenty.

BAKER'S COCOA
HAS GREAT FOOD VALUE

THE food value of cocoa has been proven by centuries of use, and dietitians and physicians the world over are enthusiastic in their endorsements of it. It is said to contain more nourishment than beef, in a more readily assimilated form. The choice, however, should be a high-grade cocoa,—"Baker's" of course.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAS. SUTHERLAND)

1st Samuel 28th Chap. 20th to 25th verses.

In our last we spoke of Saul's terror and despair after receiving the message apparently from one come from the dead.

When God in his word speaks terror to sinners he opens to them at the same time a door of hope, if they repent; but if they seek counsel or advice from other sources they must expect disappointment and failure without any glimpse of light. Saul though even terrified to despair, was not humbled. He did not confess his sins nor offer sacrifice, or present his supplications. He does not seem to have been concerned about his sons or his people, or to have attempted any escape; but in sullen despair to have rushed to his doom. God sets up a few such beacons for a warning not to stifle convictions or despise the word of God. But while the relenting thought remains let no sinner ever suppose himself in this case. Many enquire in vain because they are not in earnest; when therefore they meet not with encouragement they show their own hypocricy by giving up religious duties and plunging again into sin. But let the inquirer though discouraged persevere in knocking at mercy's gate until it be opened. Let him humble himself before God determined to live and die supplicating his favor, and he will be sure at length to succeed.

In reference to verse 19, remember that those subjects suffer with their wicked rulers, and children with their parents, it is for their own sins, or their sufferings will work for them a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

Now Saul's time to fall is come. The objects of divine displeasure are not only wretched in themselves but often the cause of calamity to those around them, yet though the righteous may be involved with them in temporal troubles and even death, they will be separated from them in the other world and possess everlasting happiness. The death of Jonathan would be a sore affliction to David, yet by making him mindful of his own frailty as well as by facilitating his accession to the throne, it would be an advantage. God would hereby show us that the difference between good and bad is to be made in the other world; not in this. All things come alike to all. We cannot judge of the spiritual or eternal state of any by the manner of their death; for in that there is one event to the righteous and to the wicked.

Saul when sorely wounded in the battle and unable to fight or to flee, seemed to express no concern about his immortal soul, but desired only to die speedily, so that the Philistines might not exult over him or put him to more pain. His armour bearer had a reverence for his prince, which made him incapable of lifting up his hand against him, thus Saul fell upon his own sword and died, so did his armour bearer also.

From the examples of obdurate sinners we perceive what we might have been, or what we might still be, if the grace of God does not prevent us. Let us then learn under a sense of our weakness to pray. Hold thou me up and I shall be safe, and I will have respect unto thy statutes continually. It might appear surprising that the example of Saul in destroying himself is defended, applauded, and imitated. It is becoming a common thing for people in financial or domestic troubles to take their own lives in despair. Because our circumstances are reduced friends desert us, or characters become bad, shall men presumptuously rush into the presence of their Judge by an act of the highest rebellion, and thus consign their souls to eternal woe.

Without pronouncing upon the case of those who by misfortune, temptation or disease are deprived of understanding, where self-murder is committed, as it is in numerous instances, deliberately, and with the possession of reason, there is no ground to expect forgiveness, since it is an offence for which there can be no repentance. It is also an aggravation of this sin that the self-destroyer not only plunges himself into endless misery but involves many sorrowing friends and relations in the deepest affliction. As it is the great artifice of the devil to persuade sinners under extreme difficulties to fly to this last act of desperation, it may be of use to fortify the mind against it by a serious consideration of the heinousness of the sin before God, and its consequences in society. But our security is not in ourselves. Let us seek protection from him who keepeth Israel. Let us watch and pray and take unto us the whole armour of God that we may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all to stand. The Scripture makes no mention of the souls of Saul and his sons; secret things belong to the Lord.

The Philistines stripped Saul of his armour and sent it to be set up as a trophy of their victory, in the house of Ashtaroth their goddess, and we are told, I. Chron. 10, 10, that they fastened his head in the temple of Dagom. Thus did they ascribe the honor of their victory, not as they ought to have done to the real justice of the true God, but to the imaginery power of their false gods. They fastened his body and the bodies of his sons to the wall of Beth-shan, a city, that lay not far from Gilboa. Hither the dead bodies were dragged, and hung up, to be devoured by birds of prey. Little more than the river of Jordan lay between Beth-shan and Jabesh-gilead, and Jordan was in that place passable by its fords. A bold adventure was therefore made by the valiant men of that city, who in the night passed the river, took down the dead bodies, and gave them decent burial, out of a common concern for the honour of Israel; or the land of Israel; or out of a particular sense of gratitude for his zeal and forwardness to rescue them from the ammorites when he first came to the throne.

It is a proof of a gracious spirit, and an encouragement to beneficence when the remembrance of kindness is not forgotten. It is of little consequence in what manner or with what circumstances we die, or what is done with our dead bodies—if our souls are safe our bodies will be raised incorruptible and glorious — the righteousness to everlasting happiness and the impenitent to endless misery. How ineffectual is the respect of fellow creatures to those who are enduring the wrath of God. While pompous funerals, magnificent monuments and the praise of men combine to honor the memory of the dead, the soul may be suffering in the regions of despair.

May we seek that honor which cometh from God only. A messenger from the battlefield brought the news to David of the death of Saul and his sons and the shepherd poet begins to sing their funeral song, Kaspeth, or the bow, probably was the title of this mournful or funeral song, so called in the oriental style, because Saul's death was occasioned by that weapon and because the bow of Jonathan, 1. Sam. 20, 36, is celebrated in song. This elegy bespeaks David to be a man of excellent spirit. He was very generous to Saul his sworn enemy. He conceals his faults though there was no preventing their appearance in history, yet they did not appear in this elegy. He celebrates that which was praiseworthy in Saul and his tribute of praise to the memory of his bosom friend, Jonathan, is peerless. They were lovely and pleasant to each other. (Space forbids further comment.)

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland.

TOGETHER WITH MANY MERCHANDISE PRIZES

Above will be found the picture of a modern Tank of the kind that is being used with such success in the present war. At a glance the Tank appears to be all there is in the picture, but by careful scrutiny the faces of several soldiers will be found. There are 11 of them in all. Can you find them? It is no easy task but by patience and endurance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and address which we will send you. If you find the faces mark each one with an X, cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these also words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness are considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time but as TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and many merchandise prizes are given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

WE DO NOT ASK YOU TO SPEND ONE CENT OF YOUR MONEY IN ORDER TO ENTER THIS CONTEST

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Four Thousand One Hundred Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

This Competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity, who have no connection with this Company, whose decisions must be accepted as final.

Upon receipt of your reply we will send a complete list of the names and addresses of persons who have won $4,100.00 in Cash Prizes in recent contests held by the publishers of this advertisement. Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from any one of them will bring the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Blood Was Everywhere Says Newspaper Man in Halifax

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 7.—Wm. Barton, former telegraph editor of the Montreal Gazette, and now travelling auditor for the Imperial Munitions Board, Ottawa, was at breakfast in the Halifax Hotel when the explosion took place. He says:

"In ten seconds it was all over. A low rumbling, a quake shock, with everything vibrating, then an indescribable noise, followed by the fall of plaster and the smashing of glass. In such moments the human mind does not hesitate—a cry went up 'A German bomb,' a rush for the door, headlong down the hallway amid falling pictures, glass and plaster to the swing doors of a few seconds before, now ripped from their hinges, through great projecting triangular pieces of glass to the street. Here I found myself with a burden. How she had come into my arms I do not know, yet here she was, hysterically shrieking: 'Oh, my poor sister, my poor sister!'

GIANT SMOKE CLOUD.

"Outside overhead a giant smoke cloud was moving northward. Danger seemed over. I crossed the road, laid my feminine burden on a door-step and returned to the hotel. My aid, for I was uncathed, was possibly needed far more there. I made my way upstairs to the rooms of two friends. They were vacant, but normal, even the glass unbroken, and few panes of glass remain unbroken in this area. Once more I was in the street, meeting my companions on the threshold. They too, were unscathed.

"We set off to the immediate vicinity of the disaster, for among many theories we accepted as most plausible the blowing up of a munition ship. Towards Citadel Hill we wended our way, and the further we went the more horrible the aftermath. Improvised stretchers met us on all sides converging into the main thoroughfares from the highways and byways. Blood was everywhere, dripping, hideous wounds still unhid from prying eyes. But most of these unfortunates could hobble or walk; we kept onwards.

SOLDIERS ON PARADE.

"Our hurry-scurry had led to the Armory. Here the khaki-clad men were already on parade, many of the soldiers showing wounds which had not placed them hors de combat. Wounds which a handkerchief tightly bound had covered, yet through which the blood congealed or still flowing, conjured to the mind base hospitals overseas.

"As we passed they were already on the march toward the more devastated area. The order had gone forth, 'Commandeer all vehicles, auto or horse,' a cordon was drawn across the streets, passengers forced to alight and resume their journeys afoot. There was grim work ahead.

"And now we found ourselves confronted by a tide of mofely humanity wounded, shocked, cut and bruised, ill-clad, if clad at all, hurrying they knew not whither."

ONE LONG GRAVE WILL HOUSE HALIFAX DEAD

NO FEAR OF PLAGUE.

Cold Weather Prevents, Though Private Closets Are Used as "Morgues."

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 7.—Members of families, separated during the panic of yesterday, besought the police today to find their loved ones. Women were seen digging in the ruins of their houses. Waggons which went about the streets picking up rubbish and trying to open thoroughfares occasionally found fragments of human bodies projecting from piles of junk. There were many corpses buried as "unidentified." A number of bodies have been recovered from the bay.

The present plan is to bury the dead all in one long grave, like a trench grave on the battle field. Temporary morgues have been established in various parts of the ruined section. Some are in houses.

In one house bodies were placed on the shelves of a closet. The cold weather prevents immediate danger of a plaugue from the gdeat masses of dead.

No accurate count of wounded has yet been attempted. Hundreds of slightly injured have been attended.

Among other buildings levelled by the blast, the railway station, the arena rink, military gymnasium, a sugar refinery, and a large elevator and are blackened ruins. Scores of persons were in these buildings. Many were injured and some killed.

Pitiful Scenes in Morgues.

There are no words to describe the pitiful scenes in the improvised morgues, where long lines of sobbing men and women began early to-day to file past the rows of blanket-covered figures laid close together.

Women shrieked as they drew aside a blanket and resognized a loved one. Men sobbed over the bodies of children, while others, white faced and haggard, stunned by the catastrophe, fingered trinkets or bits of clothing on mangled and burned bodies, hoping to establish their identity.

The most pitiful of all was the row of little figures that represented the tots who were yesterday struck dead in the schools, on the streets, even while playing on their own doorsteps.

There was one tiny, golden haired girl of about four years. She showed no surface wounds and she lay among the other, a dilapidated rag doll by her side. It was found in her hand and kept for help in identification.

Early this morning this little body was claimed by a sobbing girl-mother. She came draped in an old overcoat, and lay and sobbed by the child's body until assisted from the house of death. And that was only one of hundreds of such scenes.

Burned Beyond Recognition.

In the common morgue are other still forms covered with blankets. Many are burned beyond recognition and others mangled. Some probably never will be identified.

This morning a slowly rising pall of smoke hung over the devastated suburb of Richmond, and while soldiers and sailors patrol the wrecked streets, the horrible work of digging out the mangled and burned victims is going on.

SATURDAY MORNING BULLETINS

QUEBEC, Dec. 8.—The steamer Similee, with supplies for light-houses on the north shore, is reported sinking off the Magdalen Islands.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Kidney Diseases and Diet.

Nearly all diseases of the kidneys are due to salt. If you are suffering with or from your kidneys the first thing to do is to smash all your medicine bottles, cut out salt and sugar from your meals and go on the fruit-cereal diet. Steamed asparagus is the best thing in the world for your kidneys and bladder. Parsley is good for victims of kidney diseases, so also is water cress in the form of salad—but no salt. One should not eat too freely of parsley. Parsley will aid the eyesight by restoring the kidneys to their proper functions, but overdoses of parsley damage the vision. Pears are the very best of fruit for victims of kidney disease. But no matter the nature or the name of your kidney disease, you can get over it by following the instructions.—Los Angeles Times.

Graphic Details of Halifax Disaster

First Draft Called Out For January 3rd

MISTAKE IN SIGNALS WAS CAUSE OF THE DISASTER

Munition Ship Which Blew Up Carried 4000 Tons of T. N. T.---Force of the Explosion Was Felt For Many Miles---300 Loaded Freight Cars Were Destroyed---Exact Extent of the Toll in Human Lives May Never Be Known--Fire Wiped Out the Wrecks of Hundreds of Buildings.

TIDAL WAVE IN HALIFAX HARBOUR

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

HALIFAX, N.S., December 8.—To-day Halifax is a place of hospitals and morgues, of bitter cold, driving sleet and blackened wreckage. Telegrams are pouring in from all points of America asking for information concerning persons believed to have been in the city when the French munitions ship Monte Blanc blew up. Every train brings crowds of relatives racked with suspense for some beloved one. The hotels are thronged with sad-faced seekers, everywhere is desolation, everywhere mourning.

The exact extent of the toll in human lives cannot be known for many days, probably never will be known. The fire which swept the blasted area wiped out the wrecks of hundreds of buildings. The storm has greatly delayed trains and prevented relief parties from outside cities from getting to work as early as they expected.

HOW IT HAPPENED.

When official government investigation of the munitions ship explosion begins here it will be testified that the Monte Blanc carried 4,000 tons of "T.N.T.," the highest explosive ever known, and a deck-load of benzine.

As this floating bomb came through the narrows, there was a slight mist. The duty of the vessel was to keep to the right, hugging the narrows as it went toward Bedford Basin to await a convoy. The Belgian relief ship Imo was coming out of the basin, and some witnesses say neither ship was on its proper side of the stream. In order to rectify the mistake they exchanged signals which were evidently misunderstood. The Imo rammed the munitions ship, backed away and ran aground on Dartmouth shore. At this point there are several versions of the story told. One is that the munitions ship was on fire before the collision. This is not generally believed. She was on fire immediately after the smash, however.

The crew took to the boats. All have been accounted for except one man. Twenty minutes after the collision, it is declared, the munitions ship blew up where she had grounded at Pier 8, near the Intercolonial railroad station.

MORE POWERFUL THAN FULMINATE.

The explosive on board the Monte Blanc was three times as powerful as fulminate. The powder experts say that had the cargo had a solid foundation beneath it, there would not have been a rat or cat left alive in Halifax.

Pieces of shells, steel plates and shrapnel have been found five miles from Halifax. At Orangedale, Cape Breton, 150 miles distant in an air line, and at Sydney, 200 miles away, the shock was that of a severe earthquake. At Truro, 62 miles distant, the windows of Learmont Hotel were shattered and the clock was shaken from the wall of the train dispatcher's table office. At Meagher's Grant, 35 miles away, a barn was lifted from the foundations as though work had been done by an expert house mover.

Two American vessels were making port at the time. One, a cruiser, about 45 miles off Halifax, was so shaken up that the the chief officer believed his ship had struck a mine. Then, seeing another craft on the horizon, he concluded that he had been fired on. He stopped to investigate the stranger. A hospital ship sixty miles off Halifax felt the shock and at once concluded that the cruiser, whose location was known to it, was in action. The explosion raised a tidal wave in the harbour that went forty feet over the tracks of the Intercolonial Railway, and lifted and swept away loaded freight cars. To-day's railway loss in rolling stock was placed at 300 loaded freight, 100 passenger cars, and twenty locomotives.

TWO DISTINCT EXPLOSIONS.

Survivors tell of feeling two distinct explosions. The first was slight, this probably being the blowing up of the benzine on the Monte Blanc. The great explosion is declared by all to be beyond description. In an instant Halifax was transferred into a hell spot. Wooden buildings in the north end including many old and rickety structures along Water street, poured their wreckage into the street. Corpses huddled everywhere and fire completed the destruction.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ST. JOHN'S, December 8. — Railroad officials arriving here at ten o'clock to-day reported that all trains to and from Halifax are buried in snow drifts. One of the worst blizzards in years is sweeping the country about the stricken city. A Canadian Government railway snow plow dispatched last night from Moncton, New Brunswick, to clear the tracks for trains between that city and Halifax, was derailed by the snow. A wrecking crew from Moncton was hurrying to the scene to-day.

Roger March, of Boston, was on a train that reached Halifax fifteen minutes after the explosion. March said that he got off the train when it

HELP WANTED FOR STRICKEN HALIFAX

In connection with the telegram received by the Mayor and read at the Council meeting last night, the Committee which was appointed by the Council to procure supplies to be sent to Halifax in order to try to help to relieve the distress in that City caused by the great calamity there, will be pleased if merchants and other citizens who know where such goods can be procured will give the information to the City Office in order to help the Committee. They will also be pleased to receive donations from any citizens of unused or used articles which they will forward to Halifax. The supplies that are needed, as stated in the telegram received by the Mayor, are:—Glass, beaver board, tarred paper, putty, bedding and blankets. The despatches that have been received from Halifax have shown the overwhelming nature of the calamity that has befallen that City and the very large number of people who are homeless and whose homes have been damaged so that they are uninhabitable at this season of the year, and any assistance that can be given should be given promptly. The Committee hopes that the citizens will co-operate quickly in this matter.

A GRAPHIC STORY OF THE DISASTER TOLD BY SURVIVOR

Man Who Was Buried by Flying Wreckage and Later Dug Out Tells of Some of the Horrible Scenes That Followed the Halifax Explosion

RESCUING THE INJURED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ST. JOHN, N.B., Dec. .—Roy Williams, formerly of Portland, Maine, who was buried by flying wreckage from the explosion at Halifax and was later dug out, gave a graphic account of the catastrophe in a telephone message to his brother here to-day:

"I was standing on Barringer street waiting for a car," says Williams, "when I felt the sidewalk shake, and the roar that followed, made me think that the whole city had blown up.

"I remember hearing the awful noise, but for some time after that I did not know anything. When I came to, a man was lifting heavy wrecked timbers from my body and legs. I had been struck a glancing blow on the head by a piece of brick from a crumbling chimney and must have been in the wreckage for some time. I don't know how long.

"My side is very sore and I am badly bruised, but I am lucky.

A HORRIBLE SCENE.

"When I was able to drag myself away, the scene that met my gaze was horrible. All below me was one mass of flames, and for miles it seemed that every building was destroyed. It was not that they seemed to topple over, rather it was if if their foundations had melted and they appeared to sink to a mass of jumbled debris.

"Everywhere I saw people running about, some partly clad, others streaming with blood from ugly wounds, still others mutilated beyond recognition, were lying in the street about my feet. Then I tried to run towards Hollis street, but found that conditions there were terrible. Buildings that I had passed only a short while before were lying a mass of ruins, and then only did I begin to realize the full force of the explosion. I know that some of my friends must be under the wreckage of bricks, plaster and splintered timbers.

"As I hurried along towards the north end, where most of my friends resided, I began to fear that I would not see them again.

GROANS OF THE DYING.

"Everywhere about me the screams and groans of the dying made the air hideous, as did the pitiful wailing of men rushing frantically into that awful north end, which was then a living hell, looking for members of their families.

"I came across a man lying in the street, shaken with sobs, and I tried to pick him up. He grabbed me by the shoulders and cried out, "My God, did you see them." He had rushed home only to find his house completely demolished and nothing of his wife and four children.

BIG ATTACK IS COMING

Austro-Germans Are Massing Their Greatest Possible Strength in Men and Materials in Effort to Break the Italian Line

FRENCH IN ACTION

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN ITALY, Dec. 8.—French troops are in action to-day against the ever-increasing masses of Austro-Hungarians, who are plainly playing for Germany's supreme effort to break through the Italian line. The battle all along the Italian front is becoming heavier.

The enemy is massing men, guns and material. Heavy artillery, which the Italian destruction of bridges and roads delayed, is now being brought to the fighting line in daily increasing numbers. The shell fire over Italian positions is daily more violent. More troops in great masses are being concentrated in various secters, according to word brought back by Italian aviators. Prisoners just taken say old divisions, decimated by Italian defensive fire, have been re-made, their gaps plugged up with fresh men. Some entirely new divisions have arrived.

PREPARING FOR BLOW.

Apparently the enemy is taking the fullest time necessary to perfect his plans for massing the greatest possible strength in men and materials, and then to strike his supreme blow. On the lower Piave the Austrians every night doggedly attempt to throw bridges across the river. Every day Italian and allied artillery destroy them.

On the northern end heavy enemy concentrations are apparently being made behind the Asiago Plateau and Monte Grappa—the latter constituting both in appearance and reality a veritable Gibraltar guarding the Venetian Plains.
